UNKNOWN, Paddle Your Own Canoe. Published anonymously in the Editor's Drawer of Harper's Monthly for May, 1854, with this prefatory note: "They have a very expressive term at the West, in speaking of a young man who would be the architect of his own fortune, that he must 'paddle his own canoe.' A lady of Indiana has expanded the curt advice into a piece of original and sparkling verse." The poem consisted of seven eight-line stanzas, each closing with the same refrain. It has been attributed to Sarah K. Bolton, Sarah Tittle and Edward P. Philpots. Mrs. Bolton was only thirteen years old at the time, and it is difficult to see how Philpots could qualify as "a lady from Indiana." The probability is that all three wrote verses with this refrain. INDEPENDENCE DAY

7 Independence forever!

JOHN ADAMS. Adams died July 4, 1826. He had been aroused on the morning of that day by a discharge of cannon, and asked the cause. On being told it was Independence Day, he murmured "Independence forever!" Four days previously he had given those words in answer to a request for a toast to be offered in his name on the Fourth.

It is my living sentiment, and by the blessing of God it shall be my dying sentiment,—Independence now and Independence forever!

DANIEL WEBSTER. The closing words of the imaginary speech attributed to John Adams, in a eulogy pronounced 2 August, 1826. The eulogy was in memory of both Adams and Jefferson, who had died on the same day, 4 July, 1826.

8 Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that those United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to Mrs. Adams. 3 July, 1776.

The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to Mrs. Adams. 3 July, 1776.

While Gen'l Howe with a Large Armament is advancing towards N. York, our Congress resolved to Declare the United Colonies Free and Independent States. A Declaration for this Purpose, I expect, will this day pass Congress. . . . It is gone so far that we must now be a free independent State, or a Conquered Country.

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bonds which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with inherent and inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Draft of Declaration of Independence. (Writings, xix, 278.)

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. . . . We, therefore, . . . do . . . solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be free and Independent States. . . . And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, We mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Declaration of Independence, as adopted by the Continental Congress, in session at Philadelphia, on the evening of July 4, 1776. Printed as a broadside and sent to the colonies 6 July, 1776.

Among the natural rights of the colonists are these: First a right to life, secondly to liberty, thirdly to property; together with the right to defend them in the best manner they can.

SAMUEL ADAMS, Statement of the Rights of the Colonists, etc., 20 Nov., 1772. (Wells, Life of Samuel Adams, i, 496.)

All men are born free and equal, and have certain natural, essential, and unalienable rights.

Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish,
I give my heart and my hand to this vote.

DANIEL WEBSTER, In a eulogy upon John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, 2 August, 1826, Webster introduced a speech supposed to have been made by Adams in favor of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. The phrase was derived from the record of a conversation between Adams and Jonathan Sewall in 1774: "I answered that the die was now cast; I had passed the Rubicon. Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish with my country, was my unalterable determination."

I certainly think that the best book in the world would owe the most to a good index, and the worst book, if it had but a single good thought in it, might be kept alive by it.

HONORE BURNETT, Letter to S. A. Albions, 8 April, 1868.

¹ So essential did I consider an index to be to every book, that I proposed to bring a bill into Parliament to deprive an author who publishes a book without an index of the privilege of copyright, and, moreover, to subject him for his offence to a pecuniary penalty.

LORD JOHN CAMPBELL, Lives of the Chief Justices of England: Vol. III, Preface.

An index is a necessary implement, and no impediment, of a book, except in the same sense wherein the carriages of an army are termed impediments. Without this a large author is but a labyrinth without a clue to direct the reader therein.

THOMAS FULLER, History of the Worthies of England: Norfolk Writers: Alan of Llyn.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. I, l. 279.

A mere index hunter, who held the eel of science by the tail.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 43.

The most accomplished way of using books at present is twofold: either, first to serve them as men do lards,—learn their titles exactly and then brag of their acquaintance; or, secondly, which is, indeed, the choicer, the profounder and pollter method, to get a thorough insight into the index, by which the whole book is governed and turned, like fishes by the tail. For to enter the palace of learning at the great gate requires an expense of time and forms, therefore men of much haste and little ceremony are content to get in by the back door. . . . For this great blessing we are wholly indebted to systems and abstracts, in which the modern fathers of learning, like prudent usurers, spent their sweat for the ease of us their children. For labour is the seed of idleness, and it is the peculiar happiness of our noble age to gather the fruit.

CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. I, st. 23.

⁸ His erect and perfect form, though disclosing some irregular virtues, was found joined to a dwindled soul. Master of all sorts of woodcraft, he seemed a part of the forest and the lake, and the secret of his amazing skill seemed to be that he partook of the nature and fierce instincts of the beasts he slew. . . . Thomas Hooker anticipated the opinion of Humboldt, and called them "the ruins of mankind."

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 351.

³ I shot an arrow into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For, so swiftly it flew, the sight
Could not follow it in its flight.
I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For who has sight so keen and strong,
That it can follow the flight of song?

Long, long afterward, in an oak
I found the arrow, still unbroke;
And the song, from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend.

LONGFELLOW, The Arrow and the Song.

⁹ Thou art the framer of my nobler being;
Nor does there live one virtue in my soul,
One honourable hope, but calls thee father.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Zapolya. Act i, sc. 1.

¹⁰ Blessed influence of one true loving human soul on another.

GEORGE ELIOT, Janet's Repentance. Ch. 19.

¹¹ O may I join the choir invisible
Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence: live
In pulses stirred to generosity,
In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn
For miserable aims that end with self,
In thoughts sublime that pierce the night like stars,
And with their mild persistence urge man's search

To vaster issues.

GEORGE ELIOT, O May I Join the Choir Invisible.

¹² It costs a beautiful person no effort to paint her image on our eyes; yet how splendid is that benefit! It costs no more for a wise soul to convey his quality to other men.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

It is for man to tame the chaos; on every side, whilst he lives, to scatter the seeds of science and of song, that climate, corn, animals, men, may be milder, and the germs of love and benefit

POPE, Moral Essays, Ep. ii, l. 249.

² O, he sits high in all the people's hearts:
 And that which would appear offence in us,
 His countenance, like richest alchemy,
 Will change to virtue and to worthiness.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar, Act i, sc. 3, l. 157.

He makes a July's day short as December,
 And with his varying childness cures in me
 Thoughts that would thicken my blood.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act i, sc. 2, l. 169.

³ For, when the power of imparting joy
 Is equal to the will, the human soul
 Requires no other heaven.

SHELLEY, Queen Mob, Pt. iii, l. 11.

⁴ Though her mien carries much more invitation than command, to behold her is an immediate check to loose behaviour; to love her is a liberal education.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler, No. 49. Of Lady Elizabeth Hastings. Swinburne called this passage "the most exquisite tribute ever paid to the memory of a noble woman," and Augustine Birrell, in Obiter Dicta, echoes the opinion.

⁵ Such souls,
 Whose sudden visitations daze the world,
 Vanish like lightning, but they leave behind
 A voice that in the distance far away
 Wakens the slumbering ages.

HENRY TAYLOR, Philip Van Artevelde, Pt. i, act i, sc. 7.

⁶ Whose powers shed round him in the common strife,
 Or mild concerns of ordinary life,
 A constant influence, a peculiar grace.

WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior, l. 45.

Controls them and subdues, transmutes, bereaves
 Of their bad influence, and their good receives.

WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior, l. 17.

An instinct call it, a blind sense;
 A happy, genial influence,
 Coming one knows not how, nor whence,
 Nor whither going.

WORDSWORTH, To the Dairy.

IV—Influence for Evil

⁷ Corrupt influence, which is in itself the perennial spring of all prodigality, and of all disorder; which loads us, more than millions of debt; which takes away vigour from our arms, wisdom from our councils.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Economical Reform, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1780.

⁸ You made me what I am to-day,
 I hope you're satisfied. . . .
 And though you're not true,
 May God bless you,
 That's the curse of an aching heart.

HENRY FINCH, The Curse of an Aching Heart, (1913)

I was once a step above her,
 But she brought me to her level,
 So I drink the death of Daisy—
 Little angel—little devil!

E. J. APPLETON, Little Angel, Little Devil.

⁹ Each man, in corrupting others, corrupts himself; he imbibes, and then imparts, badness.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius, Epis. xciv, 54.

¹⁰ Like a mildewed ear,
 Blasting his wholesome brother.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act iii, sc. 4, l. 64.

The rotten apple spoils his companions.

V—Influence: In Battle

¹¹ We must have your name. There will be more efficacy in it than in many an army.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to George Washington, 1798, when war with France seemed imminent.

¹² But how many ships do you reckon my presence to be worth?

ANTIGONUS, when told by his pilot that the enemy outnumbered him in ships. (PLUTARCH, Apophthegms of Kings and Great Commanders: Antigonus II.)

The saying of old Antigonus, who when he was to fight at Andros, and one told him, "The enemy's ships are more than ours," replied,
 "For how many then wilt thou reckon me?"

PLUTARCH, Lives: Pelopidas.

¹³ As that great captain, Ziska, would have a drum made of his skin when he was dead, because he thought the very noise of it would put his enemies to flight.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

¹⁴ Oh, for one hour of blind old Dandolo,
 The octogenarian chief, Byzantium's conquering foe!

BYRON, Child Harold, Canto iv, st. 12.

¹⁵ Napoleon was called by his men Cent Mille.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. Because his presence was worth a hundred thousand men.

It is very true that I have said that I considered Napoleon's presence in the field equal to forty thousand men in the balance. This is a very loose way of talking; but the idea is a very different one from that of his presence at a battle being equal to a reinforcement of forty thousand men.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Memorandum, 18 Sept., 1836. (STANHOPE, Conversations with the Duke of Wellington, p. 81.)

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. iii, l. 219. (Pope, tr., l. 293.) Referring to Ajax.

² Whenever I stamp my foot in any part of Italy, there will rise up forces enough in an instant.

POMPEY, when asked where the forces were to come from to resist Cæsar. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Pompey.)

³ Where, where was Roderick then?
One blast upon his bugle horn
Were worth a thousand men.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto vi, st. 18.

Oh for a blast of that dread horn
On Fontarban echoes borne!

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 33.

O for the voice of that wild horn.

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 2.

⁴ Your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 186.

⁵ Is not the king's name twenty thousand names?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 85.

The King's name is a tower of strength.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 12.

⁶ Lord John is a host in himself.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, to Samuel Rogers, 1839, referring to Lord John Russell.

⁷ Oh for a single hour of that Dundee
Who on that day the word of onset gave!

WORDSWORTH, Sonnet in the Pass of Kill-crankie. "Oh, for an hour of Dundee," was the cry of Gordon of Glenbucket, at the battle of Sheriffmuir, 13 Nov., 1715. "Dundee" was the terrible Grahame of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee. (MAYNOR, History of England, I, 184.)

VI.—Influence: Homer's Golden Chain

⁸ Make ye fast from heaven a chain of gold.
(Ζεφὴν χρυσαῖον ἐξ οὐρανόθεν.)

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. viii, l. 19.

Lay ye down the golden chain
From Heaven, and pull at its inferior links

Both Goddesses and Gods.

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. viii. (Cowley, tr.)

By the golden chain Homer meant nothing else than the sun.

PLATO. (KIRCHER, Magnes Sive de Arte Magnetica.)

⁹ And this is that Homer's golden chain, which reacheth down from heaven to earth, by which every creature is annexed, and depends on his Creator.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. i, mem. 1, subs. 2. Referring to God's love for the world.

¹⁰ Now lately heaven and earth, another world
Hung o'er my realm, link'd in a golden chain.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 1004.

And fast by, hanging in a golden chain,
This pendent world, in bigness as a star
Of smallest magnitude close by the moon.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 1051.

¹¹ This gift which you have . . . is not an art, but an inspiration; there is a divinity moving you, like that in the stone which Euripides calls a magnet, but which is commonly known as the stone of Heraclea. For that stone not only attracts iron rings, but also imparts to them a similar power of attracting other rings; and sometimes you may see a number of pieces of iron and rings suspended from one another so as to form a long chain; and all of them derive their power of suspension from the original stone. Now this is like the Muse, who first gives to men inspiration herself: and from these inspired persons a chain of other persons is suspended, who take the inspiration from them.

PLATO, Ion. Sec. 533. This simile has come to be known as "Plato's rings."

¹² To be imprisoned in the viewless winds
And blown with restless violence around about
The pendent world.

¹³ Together linkt with adamantine chains.

SPENSER, An Hymn in Honour of Love, l. 89.

I gnawed my brazen chain, and sought to sever
Its adamantine links.

SHELLEY, The Revolt of Islam. Canto iii, st. 19.

¹⁴ For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

TENNYSON, Morte D'Arthur, l. 305.

¹⁵ The chain that's fixed to the throne of Jove,
On which the fabric of our world depends,
One link dissolved, the whole creation ends.

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. 140, l. 1.

² And having looked to Government for bread, on the very first scarcity they will turn and bite the hand that fed them.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts and Details on Scarcity.

We set ourselves to bite the hand that feeds us.

BURKE, Cause of the Present Discontents.

³ The wicked are always ungrateful.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 23.

Hell is full of the ungrateful.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

⁴ Ingratitude is the daughter of pride.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 51.

⁵ Ingratitude's a weed of every clime,

It thrives too fast at first, but fades in time.

SAMUEL GARTH, Epistle to the Earl of Godolphin, l. 27.

⁷ A man is very apt to complain of the ingratitude of those who have risen far above him.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (Boswell, Life, 1776.)

⁸ An ingrate is sometimes less to blame for his ingratitude than the one who did him the favor. (Tel homme est ingrat, qui est moins coupable de son ingratitude que celui qui lui a fait du bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 96.

Too great haste in repaying an obligation is a species of ingratitude. (Le trop grand empressement qu'on a de s'acquitter d'une obligation est une espèce d'ingratitude.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 226.

One finds few ingrates as long as one is capable of bestowing favors. (On ne trouve guère d'ingrats tant qu'on est en état de faire du bien.)

¹² We should not treat living creatures like shoes, or pots and pans, casting them aside when they are bruised and worn out with service.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. v, sec. 5.

¹³ One ungrateful man does an injury to all who are in suffering. (Ingratus unus miseris omnibus nocet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 274.

^{13a} They whom I benefit injure me most.

SAPPHO, (The Songs of Sappho, MARION MILLS MILLER, tr., p. 204.)

They whom I most have helped
Were 'neath the Dog-Star whelped
By Shamelessness and Spite:

The hand that feeds they bite.

MARION MILLS MILLER, Ingratitude. An amplification of the fragment from Sappho given above.

¹⁴ He is ungrateful who denies that he has received a kindness; he is ungrateful who conceals it; he is ungrateful who makes no return for it; most ungrateful of all is he who forgels it.

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iii, sec. 1. See also BENEFITS: BENEFITS AND INJURIES.

¹⁵ Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind
As man's ingratitude:

Thy tooth is not so keen,

Because thou art not seen,

Although thy breath be rude.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 174.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,

Thou dost not bite so nigh

As benefits forgot:

Though thou the waters warp,

Thy sting is not so sharp

As friend remember'd not.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, 7, 184.

¹⁶ This was the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Caesar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
Quite vanquish'd him; then burst his mighty heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 187.

You also, O Brutus, my son. (Et tu, Brute fili.)
JULIUS CAESAR, on being stabbed by Brutus.

(SUTONTUS, Lives of the Cæsars: Julius.)

Et tu Brute! Then fall, Cæsar!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 77.

See what a rent the envious Cæsar made.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 179.

¹⁷ Ingratitude! thou marble-hearted fiend!
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 281.

Monster ingratitude!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 5, l. 43.

¹⁸ How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 310.

All the stor'd vengeance of heaven fall

On her ingratul top!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 164.

Filial ingratitude!

Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand
For lifting food to 't?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act iii, sc. 4, l. 14.

He gives his daughters his estate:

The daughters give him—what? The gate.

UNKNOWN, Our Book Review Department:
King Lear.

I hate ingratitude more in a man,
Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness,
Or any taint of vice.

II—Injuries: Their Forgiveness

¹⁶ The fairest action of our human life

Is scorning to revenge an injury;

For who forgives without a further strife,

His adversary's heart to him doth tie:

And 'tis a firmer conquest, truly said,

To win the heart than overthrow the head.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act v, sc. 3.

Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 45.

Here lies one whose name was writ in water.

JOHN KEATS, his epitaph dictated by himself for his monument in Rome.

2 Some write their wrongs in marble: he, more just,
Stoop'd down serene and wrote them in the dust,

Trod under foot, the sport of every wind, Swept from the earth and blotted from his mind.

There, secret in the grave, he bade them lie,
And grieved they could not 'scape the Almighty eye.

SAMUEL MADDEN, Boudier's Monument.

JOHN HRYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. I, ch. 5. (1546)

In this proverbial saying, inn does not mean a tavern or public house, but one's own home. The original meaning of inn was a private house or dwelling-place.

Thou most beauteous inn,
Why should hard-favour'd grief be lodged in thee,

When triumph is become an alehouse guest?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 1, l. 13.

Too bright is Day.
She comes not to the Soul till it reposes
From work and play.
But when Night is on the hills, and the great Voices
Roll in from Sea,
By starlight and by candle-light and dream-light
She comes to me.
HERBERT TRENCH, *She Comes Not When Noon
Is on the Roses*.

Be much the better guide.
GEORGE LILLO, Fatal Curiosity. Act i, sc. 3.

¹ How instinct varies in the grovelling swine,
Compared, half-reas'ning elephant, with thine!
'Twixt that and reason what a nice barrier!
For ever separate, yet for ever near!
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 221.

² Reason, however able, cool at best,
Cares not for service, or but serves when prest,
Stays till we call, and then not often near;
But honest instinct comes a volunteer;
Sure never to o'er-shoot, but just to hit,
While still too wide or short in human wit.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 85.

And reason raise o'er instinct as you can,
In this 'tis God directs, in that 'tis man.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iü, l. 97.

INVENTION

The industry of artificers maketh some small improvement of things invented; and chance sometimes in experimenting maketh us to stumble upon somewhat which is new; but all the disputation of the learned never brought to light one effect of nature before unknown.

FRANCIS BACON, In Praise of Knowledge.

The art of invention grows young with the things invented. (Ars inveniendi adolescit cum inventis.)

FRANCIS BACON. Quoted as a maxim.

A tool is but the extension of a man's hand, and a machine is but a complex tool. And he that invents a machine augments the power of a man and the well-being of mankind.

WILLIAM DRENNAN, Erin. (c. 1800) This has sometimes been stated to be the first use of the phrase, "Emerald Isle," but Dr. Drennan, in an introduction to the poem written in 1815, expressly states that the phrase was first used in Erin, To Her Own Tune, a "party song written without the rancour of party in the year 1795."

For dear is the Emerald Isle of the ocean, Whose daughters are fair as the foam of the wave,

Whose sons unaccustom'd to rebel commotion,

Good-bye, Piccadilly, farewell, Leicester Square;
It's a long, long way to Tipperary, but my heart's right there!

JACK JUDGE, Tipperary. Written in 1908, and popular with both British and American soldiers during the World War. Judge was a mediocre actor, who ran a fish-shop by day. A man named Harry Williams lent him money to finance the shop, and shared in the returns from Judge's song, his name appearing on it as co-author. His family claimed that he wrote it, and after his death in 1924, repeated the claim on his tombstone; but it was probably Judge's alone.

IV—Ireland: The Shamrock

There's a dear little plant that grows in our isle,

"Twas St. Patrick himself sure that set it;
And the sun on his labour with pleasure did
smile,

And with dew from his eye often wet it.
It thrives through the bog, through the brake,
and the mireland;
And he called it the dear little shamrock of Ireland—

The sweet little shamrock, the dear little shamrock,

The sweet little, green little, shamrock of Ireland!

ANDREW CHERRY, The Green Little Shamrock of Ireland.

O, the Shamrock, the green, immortal Shamrock!

Chosen leaf Of Bard and Chief,
Old Erin's native Shamrock.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh, the Shamrock.

Oh, Paddy dear, an' did ye hear the news
that's goin' round?

The shamrock is by law forbid to grow on Irish ground!

No more Saint Patrick's Day we'll keep, his colour can't be seen,

For there's a cruel law agin the wearin' o' the green!

UNKNOWN, The Shan-van-Voght. This old Irish song is quoted in Trench, Realities of Irish Life.

When law can stop the blades of grass from growing as they grow;
And when the leaves in Summer-time their colour dare not show;
Then will I change the colour too, I wear in my caubeen;
But till that day, plaze God, I'll stick to wearin'
o' the Green.

V—Ireland and England

7
England and Ireland may flourish together.
The world is large enough for us both. Let it be our care not to make ourselves too little for it.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Samuel Span, Esq.

8
The bane of England, and the opprobrium of Europe.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 9 Aug., 1843, referring to Ireland.

To apply, in all their unmitigated authority, the principles of abstract political economy to the people and circumstances of Ireland, exactly as if he had been proposing to legislate for the inhabitants of Saturn or Jupiter.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, House of Commons, 7 April, 1881.

10
'Tis Ireland gives England her soldiers, her generals too,

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.
Ch. 2.

11
A mirror faced a mirror: ire and hate
Opposite ire and hate.

ALICE MEYNELL, Reflexions in Ireland.

12
Mr. Butler was now all full of his high discourse in praise of Ireland. . . . But so many lies I never heard in praise of anything as he told of Ireland.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 28 July, 1660.

13
He that would England win,
Must with Ireland first begin.

H. G. BORN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, p. 396.
Quoted by FROUDE, History of England, x, 480.

The uncivil kerns of Ireland.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 310.

Now for the rebels which stand out in Ireland.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 4, l. 38.

Now for our Irish wars:

We must supplant those rough rug-headed kerns,
Which live like venom where no venom else
But only they have privilege to live.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 156.

The moment the very name of Ireland is mentioned, the English seem to bid adieu to common feeling, common prudence and common sense, and to act with the barbarity of tyrants and the fatuity of idiots.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters, No. 2.

The lovely and the lonely bride,
Whom we have wedded but have never won.

WILLIAM WATSON, Ode on the Coronation of Edward VII, l. 79. Referring to Ireland.

As the northern men loveth fight, also the southern, falseness; they strutteth to strength, these to sleights; they to stalwartness, these to treason.

UNKNOWN, Of Ireland. (c. 1425) (MS. Trinity College, Dublin, relating to the conquest of Ireland by the British.)

VI—Ireland: The Irish

For the great Gaels of Ireland
Are the men that God made mad,
For all their wars are merry
And all their songs are sad.

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Ballad of the White Horse.

"Well, here's thank God for the race and the sod!"

Said Kelly and Burke and Shea.
J. I. C. CLARKE, The Fighting Race.

"Oh, the fighting races don't die out,
If they seldom die in bed,
For love is first in their hearts, no doubt,"
Said Burke.

J. I. C. CLARKE, The Fighting Race.

Every Irishman has a potato in his head.
J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

The Irish are a fair people; they never speak well of one another.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

And now the Irish are ashamed
To see themselves in one year tamed:
So much one man can do,
That does both act and know.

ANDREW MARVELL, Horatian Ode upon Cromwell's Return from Ireland, l. 75.

An Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, i' faith.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, Act iii, sc. 2, l. 71.

An Irishman's heart is nothing but his imagination.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island, Act i.

A servile race in folly nursed,
Who truckle most when treated worst.
SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 461.

O, love is the soul of a true Irishman;
He loves all that's lovely, loves all that he can,

With his sprig of shillelagh and shamrock so
green.

UNKNOWN, The Sprig of Shillelagh. Sometimes attributed to Edward Lysaght.

More Irish than the Irish. (Hibernicis ipsis Hibernior.)

UNKNOWN. A proverbial expression.

IRON

I—Iron: Apothegms

"Gold is for the mistress—silver for the maid—Copper for the craftsman cunning at his trade."

"Good!" said the Baron, sitting in his hall,
"But Iron—Cold Iron—is master of them all."

RUDYARD KIPLING, Cold Iron.

Ay me! what perils do environ
The man that meddles with cold iron!

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1.

Put up your iron.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 42.

Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth
the countenance of his friend.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 17.

He was laid in iron.

Old Testament: Psalms, cv, 18. The meaning being that Joseph was bound with fetters or chains, but in the Vulgate the phrase was mis-translated, "Ferrum pertransiit animam ejus"
(The iron entered into his soul), a perversion carried into the Psalter, cv, 18, and into the Great Bible of 1539.

I saw the iron enter into his soul.

STERNZ, Sentimental Journey: The Captive.

He is teaching iron to swim.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 75.

I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, Act iv, sc. 10, l. 30.

This extraordinary metal, the soul of every manufacture, and the mainspring perhaps,
of civilised society.

SAMUEL SMILES, Invention and Industry, Ch. 4.

II—Iron: Strike While the Iron Is Hot

Strike while the iron is hot. (Εὐθὺς τὸ σιδηρὸν κρῶρεσθω.)

ADDEUS, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 20.)

The iron hot, time is for to smite.

LYDGATE, Troy Book, Bk. ii, l. 6110. (1412)

Strike the iron whilst it is hot.

RABELAIS, Works, Bk. ii, ch. 31. (1534)

When thy iron is hot, strike.

JOHN HLYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

Strike while the iron is hot.

SIR EDWARD HOBY, To Cecil, 14 Oct., 1587;

DEKKER, Works, i, 100. (1603) Etc., etc.

¹ When the iron is well hot, it worketh the better.

WILLIAM CAXTON, Sonnes of Aymon, 136. (c. 1489)

² Pandare, which that stood her fast by,
Felt iron hot, and he began to smite.
CHAUCEER, Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. ii, l. 1276.
(c. 1374)

³ We must beat the iron while it is hot; but we may polish it at leisure.

JOHN DRYDEN, Dedication of the Æneis.

⁴ Strike now, or else the iron cools.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 1, l. 49.
And with new notions,—let me change the rule,—
Don't strike the iron till it's slightly cool.
O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 302.

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto vi, l. 46. (Cary, tr.)

Italy! Italy! thou who'st doomed to wear
The fatal gift of beauty, and possess

The dower funest of infinite wretchedness
Written upon thy forehead by despair.
(Italia, Italia, O tu cui feo la sorte,
Dono infelice di bellezza, ond' hai
Funesta dote d'infinita guai
Che in fronte scritti per gran doglia porte.)

VICENZO DA FILICAJA, Italia. (Longfellow, tr.)

Italia! oh Italia! thou who hast
The fatal gift of beauty, which became
A funeral dower of present woes and past,
On thy sweet brow is sorrow plough'd by shame,
And annals graved in characters of flame.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto iv, st. 42. A free rendering of Filicaja's sonnet, Italia, which Byron appropriated without credit.

O Italy, how beautiful thou art!
Yet I could weep—for thou art lying, alas!
Low in the dust. . . .
Thine was a dangerous gift, the gift of Beauty.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy. Pt. i, sec. 9, l. 9.

Know'st thou the land where the lemon-trees bloom,
Where the gold orange glows in the deep thicket's gloom,
Where a wind ever soft from the blue heaven blows,
And the groves are of laurel and myrtle and rose?

that gives warning
THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt. Act ii, sc. 2.

⁵ Lo, Jack would be a gentleman!
JOHN SKELTON, Works, i, 15. (1529)

Jack would be a gentleman, if he could speak French.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

We ape the French chiefly in two particulars:
First, in their language ("which if Jack could speak, he would be a gentleman").
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, i, 118.
(1662)

Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 170.
(1592)

⁶ Then Jack-a-lent comes justling in,
With the head-piece of a herring.
UNKNOWN, Philip and Mary, 191. (c. 1560)

He was dressed up like a Jack a Lent.
THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Chippes, 50. (1575)

You little Jack-a-Lent, have you been true to us?
SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor. Act
iii, sc. 3, l. 27. (1600) A Jack-a-Lent was a puppet thrown at during the Lenten fairs.

II--Jack and Jill

⁷ There is not so bad a Jack but there is as bad a Jill.

BERTHELSON, English-Danish Dictionary. (1754)
There are many variations of this proverb:
"A good Jack makes a good Jill." "Jack's as good as Jill." "If Jack were better, Jill would not be so bad," Jack being a sort of generic name for a young fellow and Jill for a young woman.

⁸ Fur not a Jack among them but must have his Jill.

DANIEL DEFOE, Everybody's Business. (1725)
⁹ If Jack's in love, he's no judge of Jill's Beauty.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1748.

¹⁰ What availeth lordship, yourself fur to kill With care and with thought how Jack shall have Jill?

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 290. (c.
1520)

Jack shall have Jill, Nought shall go ill.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 461. (1595)

Every Jack will find a Jill, gang the world as it may.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 2.

¹¹ While the ancient law fulfills,
Myriad moons shall wane and wax.

Jack must have his pair of Jills,
Jill must have her pair of Jacks.
BERT LESTON TAYLOR, Old Stuff.

¹² Jack shall pipe and Jill shall dance.
GEORGE WITTELL, Christmas.

¹³ Jack and Jill went up the hill,
To fetch a pail of water;
Jack fell down and broke his crown
And Jill came tumbling after.
UNKNOWN, Jack and Jill.

JACKSON, ANDREW

¹⁴ In answer to our shouting, fire lit his eye of gray;

Erect, but thin and pallid, he passed upon his bay. . . .

But spite of fever and fasting, and hours of sleepless care,

The soul of Andrew Jackson shone forth in glory there.

THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH, The Battle of New Orleans.

¹⁵ Old turkey-cock on a forest rock,
Old faithful heart who could boast and strut;
I will think of you when the woods are cut—
Old, old Andrew Jackson. . . .

He broke the bones of all cattle who horned him,

He broke the bones of all who scorned him,— . . .

The finest hope from the Cave of Adullam,
Since Davis ascended the throne;—

Old Andrew Jackson, the old, old raven, lean as a bone!

VACHEL LINDEAY, Old Old Old Andrew Jackson.

¹ This is the day that we honor "Old Hickory,"
Honor him, aye, for the name that he bore!

Fierce as a fighter, and yet above trickery,
Virile and valiant and leal to the core!
CLINTON SCOLLARD, Old Hickory.

How General Andrew Jackson got the title of "Old Hickory" is told by Captain William Allen, who messed with him during the Creek War. Allen's story is that Jackson caught a severe cold during the advance. There were no tents, but Allen and his brother cut down a stout hickory tree, peeled off the bark and persuaded Jackson to use it as a covering. A drunken citizen fell over it next morning, and as Jackson crawled out, greeted him with, "Hello, Old Hickory! come out of your bark and jine us in a drink." This seems a tall yarn, and the sobriquet more probably referred to Jackson's strong and wiry build.

JACKSON, THOMAS JONATHAN (STONEWALL)

² There is Jackson standing like a stone wall!
BRIG.-GEN. BARNARD E. BEE, at battle of Bull Run, 21 July, 1861, referring to the Confederate general, Thomas Jonathan Jackson. General Jackson always insisted that Bee had referred to his brigade and not to himself personally, but the sobriquet "Stonewall" stuck to him the rest of his life. (POORE, Reminiscences of Metropolis, ii, 85.)

³ Says he, "That's Banks, he's fond of shell, Lord save his soul! we'll give him—;" well
That's Stonewall Jackson's way.

JOHN WILLIAMSON PALMER, Stonewall Jackson's Way.

⁴ Yes, it was noblest for him—it was best (Questioning naught of our Father's decrees),

There to pass over the river and rest
Under the shade of the trees!

MARGARET JUNKIN PRESTON, Under the Shade of the Trees. General Jackson's last words were, "Let us cross the river and rest in the shade."

⁵ Whom have we here—shrouded in martial manner,

Crowned with a martyr's charm?
A grand dead hero, in a living banner,

Born of his heart and arm.

UNKNOWN, The Brigade Must Not Know, Sir.

JASMINE

⁶ Jasmine is sweet and has many loves.
THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

⁷ Jas in the Arab language is despair,
And Mim the darkest meaning of a lie.
Thus cried the Jessamine among the flowers,
How justly doth a lie
Draw on its head despair!

Among the fragrant spirits of the bowers
The boldest and the strongest still was I.
Although so fair,
Therefore from Heaven

A stronger perfume unto me was given
Than any blossom of the summer hours.

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, Jessamine.

Among the flowers no perfume is like mine:
That which is best in me comes from within.
So those in this world who would rise and shine,
Should seek internal excellence to win.
And though 'tis true that falsehood and despair
Moet in my name, yet bear it still in mind
That where they meet they perish. All is fair
When they are gone and nought remains behind.

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, Jessamine.

⁸ And the jasmine flower in her fair young breast,
(O the faint, sweet smell of that jasmine flower!)

And the one bird singing alone to his nest.
And the one star over the tower.

OWEN MEREDITH, Aux Italiens.

It smelt so faint, and it smelt so sweet,
It made me creep and it made me cold.
Like the scent that steals from the crumbling sheet

Where a mummy is half untold'd.

OWEN MEREDITH, Aux Italiens.

⁹ And the jessamine faint, and the sweet tube-rose,

The sweetest flower for scent that blows.

SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. St. 10.

¹⁰ Out in the lonely woods the jasmine burns
Its fragrant lamps, and turns
Into a royal court with green festoons
The banks of dark lagoons.

HENRY TIMMONS, Spring.

¹¹ As climbing jasmine pure.

WORDSWORTH, Elegiac Stanzas.

JEALOUSY

I—Jealousy: Definitions

¹² Thou tyrant, tyrant Jealousy,
Thou tyrant of the mind!

DAVIDEN, Song of Jealousy.

¹ Jealousy is the bellows of the mind;
Touch it but gently, and it warms desire,
If handled roughly, you are all on fire.
DAVID GARRICK, Epilogue to Horne's Alonso.

² Jealousy is said to be the offspring of Love.
Yet, unless the parent makes haste to strangle the child, the child will not rest till it has poisoned the parent.
J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

³ Jealousy is nourished by doubt, and becomes madness or ends when it passes from doubt to certainty. (La jalousie se nourrit dans les doutes, et elle devient fureur, ou elle finit, sitôt qu'on passe du doute à la certitude.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 32.

Jealousy is always born with love, but does not always die with it. (La jalousie naît toujours avec l'amour, mais elle ne meurt pas toujours avec lui.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 361.

Jealousy is the greatest evil of all, and the one which excites the least pity in the persons who occasion it. (La jalousie est le plus grand de tous les maux, et celui qui fait le moins de pitié aux personnes qui le causent.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 503.

⁴ No true love there can be without
Its dread penalty—jealousy.
OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. II, canto I, st. 24,
l. 3.

⁵ Nor jealousy
Was understood, the injur'd lover's hell.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 449.

⁶ O jealousy thou magnifier of trifles!
SCHILLER, Fiesco. Act I, sc. 1. (Bohn, tr.)

⁷ Jealous souls will not be answer'd so;
They are not jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster

Begot upon itself, born on itself.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act III, sc. 4, l. 159.

⁸ Jealousy, at any rate, is one of the consequences of love; you may like it or not, at pleasure; but there it is.

R. L. STEVENSON, On Falling in Love.

⁹ Jealousy's a city passion; 'tis a thing unknown among people of quality.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Confederacy.

¹⁰ Moral indignation is jealousy with a halo.
H. G. WELLS, The Wife of Sir Isaac Harman.
Ch. IX, sec. 2.

¹¹ It is the hydra of calamities,
The sevenfold death.
YOUNG, The Revenge. Act II, sc. 1.

II—Jealousy: Apothegms

¹² That is ever the way. 'Tis all jealousy to the bride, and good wishes to the corpse.
J. M. BARRIE, Quality Street. Act I.

¹³ Jealousy be so bred in the bone that it will never out of the flesh.

WILLIAM BULLFINCH, Bulwark of Defence. Fo.
75.

¹⁴ Yet he was jealous, though he did not show it,
For jealousy dislikes the world to know it.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto I, st. 65.

¹⁵ Our very best friends have a tincture of jealousy even in their friendship; and when they hear us praised by others, will ascribe it to sinister and interested motives if they can.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon, p. 80. See also under FRIEND.

¹⁶ Anger and jealousy can no more bear to lose sight of their objects than love.

GEORGE ELIOT, Mill on the Floss. Bk. I, ch. 10.

Jealousy is never satisfied with anything short of an omniscience that would detect the subtlest fold of the heart.

GEORGE ELIOT, Mill on the Floss. Bk. VI, ch. 10.

¹⁷ He that a white horse and a fair wife keepeth,
For fear, for care, for jealousy scarce sleep-eth.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Fruits, 191.

'Tis not to make me jealous
To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays and dances well.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act III, sc. 3, l. 183.

¹⁸ Man's of a jealous and mistaking kind.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. VII, l. 394. (Pope, tr.)

¹⁹ There is more self-love than love in jealousy.
(Il y a dans la jalousie plus d'amour-propre que d'amour.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 324.

²⁰ Jealousy will be the ruin of you. (Perdet te dolor hic.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. I, ep. 98, l. 11.

²¹ Build on your own deserts, and ever be
A stranger to love's enemy, jealousy.

MASTINGIER, A Very Woman. Act IV, sc. 2.

²² Jealousy shuts one door and opens two.
SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays, p. 370.

²³ Love being jealous makes a good eye look asquint.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

²⁴ One not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
Perplexed in the extreme.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act V, sc. 2, l. 345.

¹ Jealousy in love . . . That is love's curse.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1340.

² The ear of jealousy heareth all things.
Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, i, 10.
This carry-tale, dissentious jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 657.

III—Jealousy: Its Torments

³ A jealous love lights his torch from the firebrands of the furies.
EDMUND BURKE, Speech, 11 Feb., 1780.

⁴ Then wherefore should we sigh and whine,
With groundless jealousy repine,
With silly whims and fancies frantic,
Merely to make our love romantic?
BYRON, To a Lady.

⁵ But whither am I strayed? I need not raise Trophies to thee from other men's dispraise;
Nor is thy fame on lesser ruins built;
Nor needs thy juster title the foul guilt
Of Eastern kings, who, to secure their reign,
Must have their brothers, sons, and kindred slain.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, On Mr. John Fletcher's Works.

Should such a man, too fond to rule alone,
Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne;
View him with scornful, yet with jealous eyes,
And hate for arts that caus'd himself to rise.
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 197.

⁶ Then grew a wrinkle on fair Venus' brow,
The amber sweet of love is turn'd to gall!
Gloomy was Heaven; bright Phœbus did avow

He would be coy, and would not love at all:
Swearing no greater mischief could be wrought,

Than love united to a jealous thought.
ROBERT GREENE, Jealousy.

⁷ O jealousy,
Thou ugliest fiend of hell! thy deadly venom
Preys on my vitals, turns the healthful hue
Of my fresh cheek to haggard sallowness,
And drinks my spirit up!

HANNAN MORE, David and Goliath. Pt. v.

⁸ Self-harming jealousy. . . .
How many fond fools serve mad jealousy!
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 102; l. 116.

A jealousy so strong
That judgement cannot cure.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 310.

⁹ Though I perchance am vicious in my guess,
As, I confess, it is my nature's plague

To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 146.

¹⁰ Green-eyed jealousy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 110.

O, beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock
The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er
Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet strongly loves!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 165.

Trifles light as air
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 322.

¹¹ Think'st thou I'd make of life a jealousy
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions?

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 177.

For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 649.

¹² What heart-breaking torments from jealousy flow,
Ah! none but the jealous—the jealous can know!

R. B. SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

¹³ Jealousy is cruel as the grave: the coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame.

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, viii, 6.

But through the heart
Should Jealousy its venom once diffuse,
'Tis then delightful misery no more,
But agony unmix'd, incessant gall,
Corroding every thought, and blasting all Love's Paradise.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 1075.

¹⁴ How great so e'er your rigours are,
With them alone I'll cope;
I can endure my own despair,
But not another's hope.

WILLIAM WALSH, Song.

The damning thought stuck in my throat and cut me like a knife,

That she, whom all my life I'd loved, should be another's wife.

H. G. BELL, The Uncle.

¹⁵ Hunger, Revenge, to sleep are petty foes,
But only Death the jealous eyes can close.

WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act ii, sc. 4.

Inquisitiveness as seldom cures jealousy, as drinking in a fever quenches the thirst.

WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act iv, sc. 5.

¹ It is jealousy's peculiar nature,
To swell small things to great, nay, out of nought,
To conjure much; and then to lose its reason
Amid the hideous phantoms it has form'd.
YOUNG, The Revenge. Act iii, sc. 1.

IV—Jealousy and Women

² She'd have you spew up what you've drunk abroad. (Ut devomas vult, quod foris potaveris.)

CÆCILIUS, Plocium, l. 162.

³ In jealousy I rede eek thou him bind,
And thou shalt make him crouch as doth a quail.

CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 1149. Advice to a wife on the way to treat a husband. "Rede" means to advise.

⁴ Jealousy is inborn in women's hearts.
(Ἐνὶ φθορῇ τὴν χρεῖα θηλείας φέρει.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 181.

⁵ A jealous woman believes everything her passion suggests.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 2.

What frenzy dictates, jealousy believes.

JOHN GAY, Dione.

⁶ Can't I another's face commend,
And to her virtues be a friend,
But instantly your forehead lowers,
As if her merit lessen'd yours?

EDWARD MOORE, Fables: The Farmer, the Spaniel and the Cat.

⁷ All jealous women are mad.

PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act ii.

⁸ For story and experience tell us

That man grows old and woman jealous.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto ii, l. 65.

⁹ A jealous woman sets the whole house afire.
(Incendit omnem feminae zelus domum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia.

¹⁰ I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l.
151.

¹¹ The venom clamours of a jealous woman
Poisons more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 69.

Each jealous of the other, as the stung are of the adder.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 1, l. 55.

¹² Plain women are always jealous of their husbands, beautiful women never are!

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act I.

JEFFERSON, THOMAS

¹³ Here was buried Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the statute of Virginia for religious freedom, and father of the University of Virginia.

JEFFERSON, Epitaph, written for himself.

¹⁴ I have the consolation to reflect that during the period of my administration not a drop of the blood of a single fellow citizen was shed by the sword of war or of the law.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 256.

¹⁵ Thomas Jefferson still lives.

JOHN ADAMS. Last words. As a matter of fact, Jefferson had died on the morning of that very day, 4 July, 1826. However, Adams's words were a prophecy, for he does still live.

¹⁶ He had a steadfast and abiding faith in justice, righteousness and liberty as the prevailing and abiding forces in the conduct of States, and that justice and righteousness were sure to prevail where any people bear rule in perfect liberty.

GEORGE F. HOAR, Thomas Jefferson.

¹⁷ Since the days when Jefferson expounded his code of political philosophy, the whole world has become his pupil.

MICHAEL MACWHITT, Address, at University of Virginia, 13 April, 1931.

¹⁸ A gentleman of thirty-two who could calculate an eclipse, survey an estate, tie an artery, plan an edifice, try a cause, break a horse, dance a minuet and play the violin.

JAMES PARTON, Life of Jefferson, p. 164.

¹⁹ The immortality of Thomas Jefferson does not lie in any one of his achievements, but in his attitude toward mankind.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 529.

Jesting lies bring serious sorrows.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 436.

The manner of jesting ought not to be extravagant or immoderate, but refined and witty. . . . There are, generally speaking, two sorts of jests: the one, coarse, rude, vicious, indecent; the other polite, refined, clever, witty. . . . The first, if well timed, is becoming to the most dignified person; the other is unfit for any gentleman.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, reputed reply to Daniel O'Connell.

The gentleman will please remember that when his half-civilized ancestors were hunting the wild boar in Silesia, mine were princes of the earth.

JUDAH BENJAMIN, in reply to a taunt by a Senator of German descent. (MOORE, Reminiscences of Sixty Years in the National Metropolis.)

You call me a damned Jew. My race was old when you were all savages I am proud to be a Jew.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, Loyalities. Act II.

¹⁵ The Jews are among the aristocracy of every land; if a literature is called rich in the possession of a few classic tragedies, what shall we say to a national tragedy lasting for fifteen hundred years, in which the poets and the actors were also the heroes.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk. vi, ch. 42.

¹⁶ The sufferance, which is the badge of the Jew, has made him, in these days, the ruler of the rulers of the earth.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

¹⁷ Suavity toward the Jews! Although you have lived among them, it is evident that you little understand those enemies of the human race. Haughty and at the same time base, combining an invincible obstinacy with a spirit despicably mean, they weary alike your love and your hatred.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 244.

Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!

New Testament: John, i, 47.

A hopeless faith, a homeless race,
Yet seeking the most holy place,
And owning the true bliss. . . .
Or like pale ghosts that darkling roam,
Hovering around their ancient home,
But find no refuge there.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Fifth Sunday in Lent.

And Israel shall be a proverb and a by-word among all people.

Old Testament: I Kings, ix, 7.

It is curious to see a superstition dying out. The idea of a Jew (which our pious ancestors held in horror) has nothing in it now revolting. We have found the claws of the beast, and pared its nails, and now we take it to our arms, fondle it, write plays to flatter it: it is visited by princes, affects a taste, patronizes the arts, and is the only liberal and gentleman-like thing in Christendom.

Salvation is from the Jews.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 14. (Salus ex Judæis.—Vulgate.)

When Israel, of the Lord belov'd,
Out of the land of bondage came,
Her fathers' God before her mov'd,
An awful guide in smoke and flame.
SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 39.

I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 198.

Still have I borne it with a patient shrug,
For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe.
You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish gabardine.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 110.

He hath . . . laughed at my losses, mocked at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what's his reason? I am a Jew.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 58.

Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions?
fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, do we not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 60.

I pray you, think you question with the Jew:

You may as well go stand upon the beach
And bid the main flood bate his usual height;
You may as well use question with the wolf
Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb;
You may as well forbid the mountain pines
To wag their high tops, and to make no noise,
When they are fretten with the gusts of heaven;
You may as well do any thing most hard,
As seek to soften that—than which what's harder?—

His Jewish heart.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 70.

I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him, thus.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 355.

The Jews generally give value. They make you pay; but they deliver the goods. In my experience the men who want something for nothing are invariably Christians.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Sc. 4.

1 A race prone to superstition, opposed to religion. (Gens superstitioni obnoxia, religionibus adversa.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. v, sec. 13.

Job called his friends miserable comforters.

BRATHWAT, English Gentleman, p. 132. (1630)

They sat down, like Job's three comforters, and said not a word to me for a great while.

DANIEL DEFOE, Roxana. (Works, xii, 20.)

He called her Small Hopes, and Job's comforter.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa Harlowe, vii, 230.

⁵ Poor as Job's turkey.

UNKNOWN. In Thomas C. Haliburton's Saw Stick a turkey gobbler is described as being so poor that he had only one feather in his tail, and so weak he had to lean against a fence to gobble. This is the probable origin of the phrase. Job, of course, had no turkey, since the turkey was a native of America.

JOHNSON, SAMUEL

⁶ All the nodosities of the oak without its strength; all the contortions of the sibyl without the inspiration.

EDMUND BURKE, of Croft's style in his Life of Young, which some one had compared to that of Dr. Johnson. (Prior, Life of Burke.)

A sort of broken Johnsonese.

CARLYLE, Essays: Voltaire.

¹⁰ Who wit with jealous eye surveys,
And sickens at another's praise.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. ii, l. 663.
Referring to Dr. Johnson.

¹¹ Here Johnson lies—a sage, by all allow'd,
Whom to have bred may well make England proud;

Whose prose was eloquence by wisdom taught,
The graceful vehicle of virtuous thought;
Whose verse may claim—grave, masculine,
and strong,

Superior praise to the mere poet's song;
Who many a noble gift from heav'n possess'd
And faith at last—alone worth all the rest.
Oh man immortal by a double prize!
By Fame on earth—by Glory in the skies!

COWPER, Epitaph on Dr. Johnson.

Here lies poor Johnson; reader have a care;
Tread lightly, lest you rouse a sleeping bear.
Religious, moral, generous, and humane;

He was; but self-sufficient, rude, and vain;
Ill-bred, and overbearing in dispute,
A scholar and a Christian and a brute.

SOAME JENYNS, Epitaph on Samuel Johnson.

¹² If you were to make little fishes talk, they would talk like whales.

GOLDSMITH, to Dr. Johnson. (BOSWELL, Life, 1773.)

¹³ The great English moralist. Never was a descriptive epithet more nicely appropriate than that! Dr. Johnson's morality was as English an article as a beefsteak.

HAWTHORNE, Our Old Home: Lichfield and Uttoxeter.

¹ What a singular destiny has been that of this remarkable man! To be regarded in his own age as a classic, and in ours as a companion! To receive from his contemporaries that full homage which men of genius have in general received from posterity; to be more intimately known to posterity than other men are known to their contemporaries.

MACAULAY, Essays: Boswell's Life of Johnson.

² O rough, pure, stubborn, troubled soul: for whom

A smile of special tenderness men keep—
Who prayed for strength "to regulate my room,"

And "preservation from immoderate sleep."

LORD PEMBROKE, referring to Dr. Johnson. (Boswell, Life, 1775.)

⁴ The conversation of Johnson is strong and clear, and may be compared to an antique statue, where every vein and muscle is distinct and bold. Ordinary conversation resembles an inferior cast.

THOMAS PERCY, Bishop of Dromore and editor of the Reliques. (Boswell, Life of Johnson, 1778.)

⁵ This last and long enduring passion for Mrs. Thrale was, however, composed of cupboard love, Platonic love, and vanity tickled and gratified.

ANNA SEWARD, Letters, ii, 103. Referring to Dr. Johnson.

⁶ I have not wasted my life trifling with literary fools in taverns as Johnson did when he should have been shaking England with the thunder of his spirit.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

Garrick, had he called Dr. Johnson Funch, would have spoken profoundly and wittily, whereas Dr. Johnson, in hurling that epithet at him, was but picking up the cheapest sneer an actor is subject to.

BERNARD SHAW, Plays, Pleasant and Unpleasant: Preface.

⁷ That great Cham of literature.

SMOLLETT, Letter to Wilkes, 16 March, 1759.

⁸ Of those who have thus survived themselves most completely, left a sort of personal seduction behind them in the world, and retained, after death, the art of making friends, Montaigne and Samuel Johnson certainly stand first.

R. L. STEVENSON, Familiar Studies of Men and Books: Charles of Orleans.

⁹ I own I like not Johnson's turgid style,
That gives an inch the importance of a mile,
Casts of manure a wagon-load around
To raise a simple daisy from the ground;
Uplifts the club of Hercules, for what?
To crush a butterfly or brain a gnat! . . .
Alike in every theme his pompous art
Heaven's awful thunder, or a rumbling cart!

JOHN WOLCOT, On Dr. Samuel Johnson.

So made for Mischief as Ben Jochanan.
A Jew of humble Parentage was He,
By Trade a Levite, though of low Degree:
His Pride no higher than the Desk aspir'd. . . .

He could not live by God, but chang'd his Master:
Inspir'd by Want, was made a Factious Tool,
They got a Villain, and we lost a Fool.

JOHN DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 352.

¹³ Here lies Jonson with the rest
Of the Poets; but the Best.
Reader, would'st thou more have known?
Ask his Story, not this Stone.

That will speak what this can't tell
Of his glory. So farewell.

ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Ben Jonson.

Ah Ben! Say how, or when Shall we thy guests Meet at those Lyric Feasts,
Made at the Sun, The Dog, the Triple Tun?
Where we such clusters had
As made us nobly wild, not mad;
And yet each Verse of thine
Out-did the meat, out-did the frolic wine!

3 Every joy is gain

And gain is gain, however small.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. iv.

4 An infant when it gazes on a light,

A child the moment when it drains the breast,

A devotee when soars the Host in sight,

An Arab with a stranger for a guest,

A sailor when the prize has struck in fight,

A miser filling his most hoarded chest,

Feel rapture; but not such true joy are reaping

As they who watch o'er what they love while sleeping.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 196.

5 Joy is the sweet voice, joy the luminous cloud.
We in ourselves rejoice!

And thence flows all that charms our ear or sight,

All melodies the echoes of that voice,

All colours a suffusion from that light.

III—Joy: Its Praise

- 9 To-day, whatever may annoy,
The word for me is Joy, just simple Joy.
JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, The Word.
- 10 Joy rises in me like a summer's morn.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Christmas Carol.
- 11 Sing out my soul, thy songs of joy;
Such as a happy bird will sing,
Beneath a rainbow's lovely arch,
In early spring.
W. H. DAVIES, Songs of Joy.
- 12 Gladness in every face express'd,
Their eyes before their tongues confess'd.
Men met each other with erected look,
The steps were higher that they took.
DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 122.
- 13 O close my hand upon Beatitude!
Not on her toys.
LOUISE IMOGEN GUINEY, Deo Optimo Maximo.
- 14 At Earth's great market where Joy is trafficked
in,
Buy while thy purse yet swells with golden Youth.
ALAN SEEGER, Ode to Anaresi.

- 15 Make the coming hour o'erflow with joy,
And pleasure drown the brim.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 4, l. 47.
- Every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xci.

l. 62.
- In Folly's cup still laughs the bubble joy.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epistle ii, l. 288.
- 19 He who bends to himself a Joy
Does the wing'd life destroy;
But he who kisses the Joy as it flies
Lives in Eternity's sunrise.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Eternity.
- 20 There's not a joy the world can give like that it takes away.
BYRON, Stanzas for Music.
- 21 Joy of this world, for time will not abide;
From day to night it changeth as the tide.
CHAUCER, Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 1035.
- 22 All human joys are swift of wing,
For heaven doth so allot it,
That when you get an easy thing,
You find you haven't got it.
EUGENE FIELD, Ways of Life.
- 23 There's a hope for every woe,
And a balm for every pain,
But the first joys o' our heart
Come never back again.

MILTON, The Passion, l. 5.
- 26 Joys too exquisite to last,
—And yet more exquisite when past.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Little Cloud, l. 159.

Bliss in possession will not last;
Remember'd joys are never past;
At once the fountain, stream, and sea,
They were,—they are,—they yet shall be.
MONTGOMERY, The Little Cloud. Conclusion.

1 Oh stay! oh stay!
Joy so seldom weaves a chain
Like this to-night, that oh 'tis pain
To break its links so soon.
THOMAS MOORE, Fly Not Yet.

2 How fading are the joys we dote upon!
Like apparitions seen and gone;
But those which soonest take their flight
Are the most exquisite and strong;
Like angels' visits, short and bright,
Mortality's too weak to bear them long.
JOHN NORRIS, The Parting.

3 Oh, had I but Aladdin's lamp
Tho' only for a day,
I'd try to find a link to bind
The joys that pass away.
CHARLES SWAIN, Oh, Had I.

4 But we are pressed by heavy laws;
And often, glad no more,
We wear a face of joy, because
We have been glad of yore.

5 They have a right to censure, that have a heart to help.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude, p. 15.

6 You must stand afar off to judge St. Peter's WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, 17 Feb., 1861.

7 None judge so wrong as those who think amiss.
POPE, Wife of Bath: Prologue, l. 810.

8 'Tis with our judgments as our watches, none
Go just alike, yet each believes his own.
POPE, Essay on Criticism Pt. I, l. 9.

But as when an authentic watch is shown,
Each man winds up and rectifies his own,
So in our very judgements
SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Aglaure: Epilogue.

9 Haste in giving judgment is criminal. (In judicando criminosa est celeritas)

11 Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgement.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 68.

12 Blest are those Whose blood and judgement are so well com-mingled

That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please.

13 Answer my life my judgement.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 153.
What judgement shall I dread, doing no wrong?
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 89.

14 Though our works
Find righteous or unrighteous judgment, this
At least is ours, to make them righteous.
SWINBURNE, Marino Faliero. Act iii, sc. 1.

15 From one crime judge them all. (Crimine ab uno Disce omnes)
VERGIL, Æneid Bk ii, l. 65.

16 One cool judgment is worth a thousand hasty councils.

1916.

III—Judgment: Its Fallibility

17 If I was as bad as they say I am,
And you were as good as you look,
I wonder which one would feel the worse
If each for the other was took?
GEORGE BARR BAKER, Good and Bad.

18 Cruel and cold is the judgment of man,
Cruel as winter, and cold as the snow;
But by-and-by will the deed and the plan
Be judged by the motive that lieth below.
LEWIS J. BATES, By-and-By.

19 No man can justly censure or condemn another, because indeed no man truly knows another.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 4.

Meanwhile "Black sheep, black sheep!" we cry,
Safe in the inner fold;
And maybe they hear, and wonder why,
And marvel, out in the cold.
RICHARD BURTON, Black Sheep.

20 Mad in the vulgar judgment, sane, perhaps, in yours. (Demens Judicio vulgi, sanus for-tasse tuo)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 6, l. 97.

21 In men whom men condemn as ill
I find so much of goodness still,
In men whom men pronounce divine
I find so much of sin and blot,
I do not dare to draw a line
Between the two, where God has not.
JOAQUIN MILLER, Byron.

There is so much good in the worst of us,
And so much bad in the best of us,
That it hardly becomes any of us
To talk about the rest of us.

UNKNOWN, Good and Bad. Attributed to Edward Wallis Hoch, ex-Governor of Kansas, because first printed in the Record, of Marion, Kansas, of which he was editor (Boston
Transcript, 24 Apr., 1915. The Reader, 7

Sept., 1907.) Governor Hoch, however, disclaimed the verses in a letter to W. S. Close, 15 Feb., 1916. Attributed to Robert Louis Stevenson, but disclaimed by Lloyd Osbourne; ascribed to Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, but denied by her; also to Joaquin Miller, probably because of the somewhat similar stanza in his Byron. JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Judgments.

⁵ O judgement! thou art fled to brutish beasts, And men have lost their reason!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 109.

⁶ It's the bad that's in the best of us
Leaves the saint so like the rest of us!
It's the good in the darkest-curst of us
Redeems and saves the worst of us!
It's the muddle of hope and madness;
It's the tangle of good and badness;
It's the lunacy linked with sanity
Makes up, and mocks, humanity!

ARTHUR STRINDBERG, Humanity.

⁷ Crime has its heroes, error has its martyrs:
Of true zeal and false, what vain judges we are!

(Le crime a ses héros; l'erreur a ses martyrs:
Du vrai zèle et du faux vains juges que nous sommes!)

VOLTAIRE, Henriade. Chant v, l. 200.

⁸ Man judges from a partial view,
None ever yet his brother knew;
The Eternal Eye that sees the whole
May better read the darkened soul,
And find, to outward sense denied,
The flower upon its inmost side!

JUDGMENT DAY

¹⁸ At the piping of all hands,
When the judgment-signal's spread—
When the islands and the lands
And the seas give up their dead,
And the South and North shall come;
When the sinner is dismayed,
And the just man is afraid,

Then Heaven be thy aid,
Poor Tom.

JOHN G. C. BRAINARD, Lament for Long Tom.
The trumpet! the trumpet! the dead have all heard:
Lo, the depths of the stone-cover'd charnels are stir'd;
From the sea, from the land, from the south and the north,
The vast generations of man are come forth.

16
What joy have I in June's return?
My feet are parched—my eyeballs burn,
I scent no flowery gust;

But faint the flagging Zephyr springs,
With dry Macadam on its wings,
And turns me "dust to dust."

THOMAS HOOD, Town and Country.

1 The fair

ANACHARSIS. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 5.)

8 In my mind, he was guilty of no error, he was chargeable with no exaggeration, he was betrayed by his fancy into no metaphor, who once said that all we see about us, kings, lords, and Commons, the whole machinery of the State, all the apparatus of the system, and its varied workings, end in simply bringing twelve good men into a box.

LORD BROUHAAM, Present State of the Law.
7 Feb., 1828.

9 Trial by jury itself, instead of being a security to persons who are accused, shall be a delusion, a mockery, and a snare.

"Dear me, gentlemen, ten minutes to five, I declare! I dine at five, gentlemen." "So do I," says everybody else except two men who ought to have dined at three, and seem more than half disposed to stand out in consequence.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Vol. ii, ch. 6.
Whin the case is all over, the jury'll pitch th' tistimony out iv the window, an' consider three questions: "Did Lootger look as though he'd

JUSTICE

I—Justice: Definitions

18 Liberty, equality,—bad principles! The true principle of humanity is justice. (Le vrai principe humain, c'est la justice.)

HENRI FRÉDÉRIC AMIEL, Journal Intime, 4 Dec., 1863.

¹ Justice is that virtue of the soul which is distributive according to desert.

ARISTOTLE, Metaphysics: On the Virtues and Vices: Justice.

² There are in nature certain fountains of justice, whence all civil laws are derived.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

³ Justice is itself the great standing policy of civil society; and any eminent departure from it, under any circumstances, lies under the suspicion of being no policy at all.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Those eternal laws of justice, which are our rule and our birthright.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings, 15 Feb., 1788.

A good parson once said that where mystery begins religion ends. Cannot I say, as truly at least, of human laws, that where mystery begins, justice ends?

EDMUND BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society.

⁴ Justice is one; it binds all human society, and is based on one law, which is right reason applied to command and prohibition.

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 42.

Justice is compliance with the written laws. (Justitia est obtemperatio scriptis legibus.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 42. This is stated by Cicero only for the purpose of refutation.

⁵ Justice, in which is the crowning glory of the virtues. (Justitia, in qua virtutis est splendor maximus.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 7, sec. 20.

Good faith is the foundation of justice. (Fundamentum autem est justitiæ fides.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 7, sec. 23.

Justice shines by its own light. (Æquitas enim lucet ipsa per se.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 9, sec. 30.

Let us remember that justice must be observed even to the lowest. (Meminerimus etiam adversus infimos justitiam esse servandam.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 41.

Nothing that lacks justice can be morally right. (Nihil honestum esse potest, quod justitia vacat.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 62.

It is the function of justice not to wrong one's fellow men. (Justitiæ partes sunt non violare homines.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 28, sec. 99.

Justice is indispensable for the conduct of business. Its importance is so great, that not even those who live by wickedness and crime can get on without some small share of justice.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 11, sec. 40.

⁶ Justice is the end of government.

DANIEL DEFOR, The True-born Englishman. Pt. ii, l. 368.

Justice is always violent to the party offending, for every man is innocent in his own eyes.

DANIEL DEFOR, Shortest Way with Dissenters.

⁷ Justice is truth in action.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1851. Referring to the saying, "Peace is beauty in action."

Justice is truth in action. (La justice est la vérité en action.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 203. (1838)

⁸ Justice without wisdom is impossible.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics.

⁹ That justice is the highest quality in the moral hierarchy I do not say, but that it is the first. That which is above justice must be based on justice, and include justice, and be reached through justice.

HENRY GEORGE, Social Problems. Ch. 9.

¹⁰ Justice is the virtue that innocence rejoiceth in.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Religio.

¹¹ Justice is the firm and continuous desire to render to everyone that which is his due. (Justitia est constans et perpetua voluntas jus suum cuique tribuendi.)

JUSTINIAN, Institutiones. Bk. i, sec. 1.

¹² A man's vanity tells him what is honour; a man's conscience what is justice.

¹³ Justice indeed

Should ever be close-eared and open mouthed; That is to hear a little, and speak much.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Old Law. Act v, sc. 1.

¹⁴ Justice is what is established; and thus all our established laws will be regarded as just, without being examined, since they are established.

PASCAL, Pensées. Ch. vii, No. 6.

¹⁵ A just man is not one who does no ill, But he, who with the power, has not the will.

PHILEMON, Sententie.

¹⁶ Things which partake of justice are just; things which partake of beauty are beautiful.

PLATO. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Plato. Bk. iii, 13.)

All knowledge that is divorced from justice must be called cunning rather than wisdom.

PLATO. (CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 63.)

Where, in nice balance, truth with gold she weighs.

And solid pudding against empty praise.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. I, l. 52.

² Truth is its [justice's] handmaid, freedom is its child, peace is its companion, safety walks in its steps, victory follows in its train;
it is the brightest emanation from the gospel;
it is the attribute of God.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.
Vol. I, p. 29.)

³ The administration of justice is the firmest pillar of government.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Edmund Randolph, 27 Sept., 1789. (WASHINGTON, Writings, II, 432.) Inscribed on New York County courthouse.

Justice, sir, is the great interest of man on earth.
DANIEL WEBSTER, On Mr. Justice Story.

⁴ The hope of all who suffer,
The dread of all who wrong.

WHITTIER, Manile of St. John De Matha. St.
21.

⁵ Justice has nothing to do with expediency.
Justice has nothing to do with any temporary standard whatever. It is rooted and grounded in the fundamental instincts of humanity.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Washington, 26
Feb., 1916.

II—Justice: Apothegms

Justice discards party, friendship, kindred,
and is therefore always represented as blind.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 99.
For justice, though she's painted blind,
Is to the weaker side inclined.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. III, canto III, l. 709.
Justice is blind, he knows nobody.

DRYDEN, The Wild Gallant. Act V, sc. 1.
Justice is lame as well as blind, amongst us.

THOMAS OTWAY, Venice Preserved. Act I, sc. 1.
Justice is blind. Blind she is, an' deaf an' dumb an' has a wooden leg.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Cross-Examinations.

⁷ So justice while she winks at crimes,
Stumbles on innocence sometimes.

BUTLER, Hudibras, Pt. I, canto II, l. 1177.
Justice may wink a while, but see at last.

III—Justice: Its Virtues

⁷ There is no virtue so truly great and godlike as justice.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 99.

⁸ Justice is the first of the virtues, for, unsupported by justice, valor is good for nothing; and if all men were just, there would be no need of valor.

AGESILAS II. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Agesilaüs. Ch. 22, sec. 5.)

⁹ It is due to Justice that man is a God to man and not a wolf. (Justitiæ debetur, quod homo homini sit Deus, non lupus.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Justitia.

The place of justice is a hallowed place.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Judicature.

¹⁰ Justice does not descend from its pinnacle. (Cima di giudizio non s'avvalla.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto vi, l. 37.

¹¹ A prince's favours but on few can fall,
But justice is a virtue shar'd by all.

DRYDEN, Britannia Rediviva, l. 337.

¹² Justice is like the kingdom of God—it is not without us as a fact, it is within us as a great yearning.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Bk. iii, ch. 67.

¹³ Whoever fights, whoever falls,
Justice conquers evermore, . . .
And he who battles on her side,
God, though he were ten times slain,
Crowns him victor glorified,
Victor over death and pain.

R. W. EMERSON, Voluntaries. Pt. iv.

Fear not, then, thou child infirm,
There's no god dare wrong a worm;
Laurel crowns cleave to deserts,
And power to him who power exerts.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. Motto.

¹⁴ Above all other things is justice: success is a good thing; wealth is good also; honor is better, but justice excels them all.

D. D. FIELD, Speeches: Law Reform, 18 March, 1876.

¹⁵ And Heav'n, that ev'ry virtue bears in mind,
Ev'n to the ashes of the just is kind.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 523. (Pope, tr.)

The bad man's death is horror: but the just Keeps something of his glory in the dust.

WILLIAM HABBINGTON, Ælegie. (c. 1650)

The memory of the just is blessed; but the name of the wicked shall rot.

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 7.

¹⁶ But the sunshine aye shall light the sky,
As round and round we run;
And the Truth shall ever come uppermost,
And Justice shall be done.

CHARLES MACKAY, Eternal Justice.

¹⁷ Prompt sense of equity! to thee belongs
The swift redress of unexamined wrongs!
Eager to serve, the cause perhaps untried,
But always apt to choose the suffering side!

HANNAH MORE, Sensibility, l. 243.

¹⁸ The bright actions of the just Survive unburied in the kindred dust.

(Κατακρήναι δ' οὐ κόβει συγγόνων κείνων χέρον.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode viii, l. 103.
(Wheelwright, tr.)

Only the actions of the just Smell sweet and blossom in their dust.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Contention of Ajax and Ulysses. Sec iii, l. 23. (1659)

The sweet remembrance of the just Shall flourish when he sleeps in dust.

NATHAN TATE AND NICHOLAS BRADY, New Version of the Psalms, cxli, 6. (1696)

The memory of the just survives in Heaven.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vii, l. 388.

¹ That most kingly and godlike surname, The Just. (Τῆς βασιλευστέρας καὶ θεοτέρας προσωνομασίαν τὸν Δίκαιον.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Ch. 5, sec. 7. Referring to Aristides.

I don't know the fellow, but I am tired of hearing him everywhere called The Just.

The reply of a citizen to Aristides, when the latter asked why he was voting against him. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides, 7, 6.)

² The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

Old Testament: Proverbs, iv, 18.

The spirits of just men made perfect.

New Testament: Hebrews, xii, 23.

IV—Justice: Its Certainty

³ Justice, voiceless, unseen, seeth thee when thou sleepest and when thou goest forth and when thou liest down. Continually doth she attend thee, now athwart thy course, now at a later time.

ÆSCHYLUS [?], Fragment. Frag. 253.

⁴ God's justice, tardy though it prove perchance,
Rests never on the track until it reach Delinquency.

ROBERT BROWNING, Cenci.

⁵ Murder may pass unpunish'd for a time,
But tardy justice will o'ertake the crime.

DRYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 285.

⁶ Justice, though moving slowly, seldom fails to overtake the wicked. (Raro antecedentem scelestum Deseruit pede pœna claudo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 31.

⁷ Man is unjust, but God is just; and finally justice Triumphs.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 3, l. 34.

⁸ For though usurpers sway the rule a while,
Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sec. 3, l. 76.

⁹ As thou urgest justice, be assur'd
Thou shalt have justice more than thou desire'st.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 315.

¹⁰ Justice, even if slow, is sure. (Πάρος ὁσπέρων ἴσθαι δίκην.)

SOLOON. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 2.)

V—Justice: Its Power

¹¹ Where might and justice are yoke-fellows—what pair is stronger than this?

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragment. Frag. 209. See also MIGHT AND RIGHT.

¹² The humblest citizen of all the land, when clad in the armor of a righteous cause is stronger than all the hosts of Error.

W. J. BRYAN, Speech at the National Democratic Convention, Chicago, 1896.

¹³ Let laurels, drench'd in pure Parnassian dews,
Reward his mem'ry, dear to ev'ry muse,
Who, with a courage of unshaken root,
In honour's field advancing his firm foot,
Plants it upon the line that justice draws,
And will prevail or perish in her cause.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 13.

¹⁴ I'm armed with more than complete steel,—
The justice of my quarrel.

MARLOWE (?), Lust's Dominion. Act iv, sc. 3.

Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just,
And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 233.

"Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just"—
And four times he who gets his fist in fust.

ARTEMUS WARD, Shakespeare Up-to-Date.

¹⁵ The weakest arm is strong enough that strikes
With the sword of justice.

JOHN WEBSTER, Duchess of Malfi. Act v, sc. 2.

VI—Justice: Let Justice Be Done

¹⁶ Let justice be done, though the heavens fall.
(Fiat justitia et ruant cœli.)

WILLIAM WATSON, Ten Quodlibetical Questions Concerning Religion and State. (1601)

The whole quotation is: "You go against that general maxim in the laws, which is, 'Fiat justitia et ruant cœli.'" This is the first appearance in English literature, so far as known, of what was apparently a maxim even in 1600. It was used by William Prynne (Fresh Discovery of Prodigious Wandering New-Blazing Stars, 1646), by Nathaniel Ward (Simple Cobbler of Agawam, 1647), and frequently thereafter, but was given its widest celebrity in 1768 when it was quoted by Lord Mansfield in Rex vs. Wilkes. The maxim is given in various forms: "Fiat justitia et ruant cœli" (William Watson); "Fiat justitia et cœlum ruat" (Manningham, Diary, 11 April, 1603); "Justitia fiat, ruat cœlum" (Lord Mansfield).

The constitution does not allow reasons of state to influence our judgement. God forbid it should! We must not regard political consequences, however formidable they might be; if rebellion was the certain consequence, we are bound to say, 'Justitia fiat, ruat cœlum.'

WILLIAM MURRAY, EARL OF MANSFIELD, Judg- ment, Rex vs. Wilkes. (Burns, Reports. Vol. iv, p. 2562.) In this judgment, Lord Mansfield reversed the sentence of outlawry passed upon John Wilkes for the publication of the North Briton.

1 Let justice reign though the heaven fall.
(Regnet justitia et ruat cælum.)

Duke of Richmond, Speech, House of Lords, 31 Jan., 1642. (Old Parliamentary History, Vol. 2, p. 28.)

2 Let justice be done though the world perish.
(Fiat justitia et ruat mundus.)

UNKNOWN, Egerton Papers, p. 52. (1552) (Aikin, Court and Times of James I, ii, 500, 1625.) Said to be the motto of Ferdinand I, Emperor of Germany. (Johannes Manlius, Loci Communes, ii.)

Let justice be done though the world perish.
(Fiat jus et pereat mundus.)

St. Augustine. (Attributed to him by Jeremy Taylor.)

Though the heaven falls, let thy will be done.
(Ruat cælum, fiat voluntas tua.)

Sir Thomas Browne, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 12.

3 Do well and right, and let the world sink.
George Herbert, Country Parson. Ch. 29.

4 Where the offence is, let the great axe fall.
Shakespeare, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 218.

This even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips.

Shakespeare, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 10.

VII—Justice and Mercy

5 Hard is the task of justice, where distress
Excites our mercy, yet demands redress.

Colley Cibber, The Heroic Daughter. Act iii.

6 He who spares the bad seeks to corrupt the good.
(Parcit quisque malis, perdere vult bonos.)

Cicero, De Officiis [?], Septem Sapientum Sententia, l. 19.)

7 When justice on offenders is not done,
Law, government, and commerce are o'er-thrown.

Sir John Denham, Of Justice, l. 85.

Our mercy is become our crime.
Dryden, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 734.

There is a mercy which is weakness, and even treason against the common good.

George Eliot, Romola. Bk. iii, ch. 59.

8 Mercy and justice, marching cheek by jowl.
Du Bartas, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
1, day 1. (Sylvester, tr.)

9 Thwackum was for doing justice, and leaving mercy to Heaven.

Fielding, Tom Jones. Bk. iii, ch. 10.

10 Ah, to be just, as well as kind,—
It costs so little and so much!

Richard Hovey, Contemporaries.

11 It is easier to be beneficent than to be just.

Samuel Johnson. (Emerson, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.)

12 Justice, that in the rigid paths of law,
Would still some drops from Pity's fountain draw.

John Langhorne, The Country Justice: Introduction, l. 125.

13 Exact justice is commonly more merciful in the long run than pity, for it tends to foster in men those stronger qualities which make them good citizens.

J. R. Lowell, Among My Books: Dante.

14 I may mitigate their doom
On me deriv'd, yet I shall temper so Justice with mercy, as may illustrate most
Them fully satisfied, and thee appease.

¹ It is impossible to be just if one is not generous.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 109.

Be just before you are generous.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act iv, sc. 1.

² Justice must tame, whom mercy cannot win.

GEORGE SAVILE, On the Death of Charles II.

³ And earthly power doth then show likest God's

When mercy seasons justice.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 196.

⁴ Sparing justice feeds iniquity.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1687.

Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 202.

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 3.

VIII—Justice and Injustice

⁷ He's just, your cousin, ay, abhorrently;
He'd wash his hands in blood, to keep them clean.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ix, l. 118.

⁸ One man's justice is another's injustice; one man's beauty another's ugliness; one man's wisdom another's folly.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

⁹ That which is unjust can really profit no one; that which is just can really harm no one.

HENRY GEORGE, The Land Question. Ch. 14.

¹⁰ I have loved justice and hated iniquity; therefore I die in exile. (Dilexi justitiam et odi iniquitatem, propterea morior in exilio.)

POPE GREGORY VII, HILDEBRAND. (BOWDEN, Life. Bk. III, ch. 20.)

¹³ Delay of justice is injustice.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Peter Leopold and President Du Paty.

¹⁴ The hour of justice does not strike
On the dials of this world.

(L'heure de la justice ne sonne pas Aux cadrans de ce monde.)

MARTERLINCK, Measure of the Hours.

¹⁵ Injustice is relatively easy to bear; what stings is justice.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 101.

¹⁶ To entreat what is unjust from the just is wrong; but to seek what is just from the unjust is folly. (Injusta a justis impetrare non decet; justa autem ab injustis petere, insipientia est.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo: Prologue, l. 31.

¹⁷ O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell,
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 137.

¹⁸ There is a point at which even justice is unjust. ("Έστιν ἔσθ' αὖ δίκη βλάπτον φέροι.")

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 1042.

Injustice often arises through chicanery, that is, through an over-subtle and even fraudulent construction of the law. This it is that gave rise to the now familiar saw, "The more law, the less justice." (Summum jus, summa injuria.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 10, sec. 33. The "trium proverbium" is quoted by Cicero again in De Republica, v, 3, and may also be found in Columella (De Re Rustica, i, 7), Racine (La Thébaïde, iv, 3), and many other writers.

The strictest law is sometimes the greatest injustice. (Jus summum saepe summam malitia.)

TENENCE, Heauton Timoroumenos, l. 796.

The extremity of justice is extreme injustice.

RICHARD GRAFTON, Chronicles. Vol. II, p. 228.

There is one motto that ought to be put at the head of our penal code, "Summum jus, summa injuria."

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. II, No. 139.

KATYDID

1 I love to hear thine earnest voice,
Wherever thou art hid,
Thou testy little dogmatist,
Thou pretty Katydid!
Thou mindest me of gentlefolks,— Old gentlefolks are they,— Thou say'st an undisputed thing
In such a solemn way.

KEATS, JOHN

3 And Keats the real
Adonis with the hymeneal
Fresh vernal buds half sunk between
His youthful curls, kissed straight and sheen
In his Rome-grave, by Venus queen.
E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 407.

4 Stand still, true poet that you are!
I know you; let me try and draw you.
Some night you'll fail us: when afar
You rise, remember one man saw you,
Knew you, and named a star!
ROBERT BROWNING, Popularity.

Who fished the murex up?
What porridge had John Keats?
ROBERT BROWNING, Popularity.
Dumb to Keats—him, even!
ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More.

5 If you still behave in dancing rooms and other societies as I have seen you—I do not want to live—if you have done so, I wish this coming night may be my last. I cannot live without you, and not only you but chaste you; virtuous
you.

JOHN KEATS, Letter to Fanny Browne, 1820.

6 It is a better and a wiser thing to be a starved apothecary than a starved poet; so back to the shop, Mr. John, back to "plasters, pills, and ointment boxes."

JOHN GIBSON LOCKHART [?], Review, of Endymion in Blackwood.

A Mr. John Keats, a young man who had left a decent calling for the melancholy trade of Cockney-poetry, has lately died of a consumption, after having written two or three little books of verse, much neglected by the public.

LOCKHART or WILSON, Review, of Adonais in Blackwood.

The savage criticism on his Endymion, which appeared in the Quarterly Review, produced the most violent agitation on his susceptible mind;
the agitation thus originated ended in the rupture of a blood-vessel in the lungs; a rapid consumption ensued.

SHELLEY, Adonais: Preface. See also 343:6.

John Keats, who was kill'd off by one critique,
Just as he really promised something great, . .
Poor fellow! his was an untoward fate:

'Tis strange the mind, that very fiery particle,
Should let itself be snuff'd out by an article.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 59.

That dirty little blackguard Keats.

BYRON. (MOORE, Life of Byron, 1820.)

7 But now thy youngest, dearest one has perished,

The nursing of thy widowhood, who grew
Like a pale flower by some sad maiden cherished,

And fed with true love tears instead of dew,
Most musical of mourners, weep anew!

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 6.

He has outsoared the shadow of our night;
Envy and calumny, and hate and pain,
And that unrest which men miscall delight,
Can touch him not and torture not again.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 40. The first line was inscribed by direction of Theodore Roosevelt on the slab over the grave of his son, Quentin, shot down near Chambray, France, 14 July, 1918.

I am borne darkly, fearfully afar;
Whilst, burning through the inmost veil of Heaven,

The soul of Adonais, like a star,
Beacons from the abode where the Eternal are.
SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 55.

8 Yet thou hast won the gift Tithonus missed:
Never to feel the pain of growing old,
Nor lose the blissful sight of beauty's
truth,

But with the ardent lips Urania kissed
To breathe thy song, and, ere thy heart grew cold,

Become the Poet of Immortal Youth.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Keats.

9 This grave contains all that was mortal of a young English poet, who, on his death bed, in the bitterness of his heart at the malicious power of his enemies, desired these words to be graven on his tomb-stone, "Here lies one whose name was writ in water."

Epitaph, on tombstone of Keats at Rome.

Among the many things he has requested of me tonight, this is the principal,—that on his gravestone shall be this inscription: Here lies one whose name was writ in water.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, Life of Keats:
Letter to Severn, Vol. II, p. 91.

"Whose name was writ in water!" What large laughter

Among the immortals when that word was brought!

RICHARD WATSON GILDER, Keats.

Lo! in the moonlight gleams a marble white,
On which I read: "Here lieth one whose name
Was writ in water." And was this the meed
Of his sweet singing? Rather let me write:
"The smoking flax before it burst to flame
Was quenched by death, and broken the bruised reed."

LONGFELLOW, Keats.

Yet I do fear thy nature;
It is too full o' the milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 5, l. 17.
(1606)

⁸ Nothing is so popular as kindness. (Nihil est tam populare quam bonitas.)
CICERO, Pro Ligario. Sec. 12.

⁹ A kind heart loseth nought at last.
JOHN CLARKE, Paramiologia, 45.

¹⁰ O wouldst thou be less killing, soft or kind.
CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act iii, sc. 6.

¹¹ Good Will is the mightiest practical force in the universe.
C. F. DOLE, Cleveland Address.

¹² Are you tender and scrupulous,—you must eat more mince-pie.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

¹³ Enough, and more than enough, has your kindness enriched me. (Satis superque me benignitas tua Ditavit.)

HORACE, Epodes. No. i, l. 31.

For tho' the faults were thick as dust
In vacant chambers, I could trust
Your kindness.

TENNYSON, To the Queen. St. 5.

¹⁴ Kindness is the sunshine in which virtue grows.

R. G. INGERSOLL, A Lay Sermon.

¹⁵ Kindness consists in loving people more than they deserve. (Une partie de la bonté consiste peut-être à estimer et à aimer les gens plus qu'ils ne le méritent.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 71.

¹⁶ Though he was rough, he was kindly.

LONGFELLOW, Courtship of Miles Standish.
Pt. iii.

¹⁷ I would resemble the ape, and kill it by culling it.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 215. (1579)

With kindness, lo, the ape doth kill her whelp.
GEOFFREY WHITNEY, Choice of Emblems, 183.

She killeth what she loveth by pressing it too hard.

EDWARD TOWSELL, Four-footed Beasts.

This is the way to kill a wife with kindness.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 211.

¹⁸ The greater the kindred is, the less the kindness.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act iii, sc. 1.

A little more than kin, and less than kind.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 65.

¹⁹ Then within my bosom

Softly this I heard:

"Each heart holds the secret;

Kindness is the word."

JOHN BUTLER O'REILLY, What Is Good?

1 Not always actions show the man: we find
Who does a kindness is not therefore kind.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epia. i, l. 109.

2 In her tongue is the law of kindness.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 26.

3 That tender education which we call kindness, destroys all the vigor of both mind and body.
(Mollis illa educatio quam indulgentiam vocalamus, nervos omnes et mentis et corporis frangit)
QUINTILIAN, Institutione de Oratoria. Bk. i,
ch. 2, sec. 6.

4 For your kindness I owe you a good turn.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iv, 2, 62.
A kind overflow of kindness.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, i, 1, 26.

5 Timon will to the woods; where he shall find
The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iv, 1, 35.

Ah yet, we cannot be kind to each other here
for an hour.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 4, st. 5.

6 Kindness is ever the begetter of kindness.
(Χάρις χάριν γὰρ ἐστὶν ἢ τίκτει ἀέ.)
SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 522.

Kindness is produced by kindness. (Benignitate benignitas tollitur.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 15, sec. 52.

7 And loving-kindness, that is pity's kin
And is most pitiless.

SWINBURNE, A Ballad of Life. St. 2.

8 Kindness is very indigestible. It disagrees with very proud stomachs.

THACKERAY, Adventures of Philip. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

9 Animosities are mortal, but the Humanities live for ever.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 35.

II—Kindness: Its Virtues

10 Life is short, and we have never too much time for gladdening the hearts of those who are travelling the dark journey with us. Oh, be swift to love, make haste to be kind!
AMIEL, Journal, 16 Dec., 1868.

11 The heart benevolent and kind
The most resembles God.
ROBERT BURNS, A Winter Night.

12 Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on;

'Twas not given for thee alone,
Pass it on;

Let it travel down the years,

Let it wipe another's tears,
'Till in Heaven the deed appears—
Pass it on.

HENRY BURTON, Pass It On.

13 Set not thy foot to make the blind to fall;
Nor wilfully offend thy weaker brother:
Nor wound the dead with thy tongue's bitter gall,

Neither rejoice thou in the fall of other.
ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 4. A footnote states this is from "Pybrac in his Quadrant 37."

14 Thy Godlike crime was to be kind,
To render with thy precepts less
The sum of human wretchedness.
BYRON, Prometheus, l. 35.

15 Little deeds of kindness,
Little words of love,
Help to make earth happy
Like the Heaven above.
JULIA FLETCHER CARNEY, Little Things.

16 It is difficult to say how much men's minds are conciliated by a kind manner and gentle speech. (Sed tamen difficile dictu est, quantopere conciliet animos comitas affabilitasque sermonis.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 14, sec. 48.

Kindness to the good is a better investment than kindness to the rich. (Quam ob rem melius apud bonos quam apud fortunatos beneficium collocari puto.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. xx, sec. 71.

17 If I can stop one heart from breaking,
I shall not live in vain;
If I can ease one life the aching,
Or cool one pain,
Or help one fainting robin
Unto his nest again,
I shall not live in vain.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 6.

Let me be a little kinder,
Let me be a little blinder
To the faults of those around me.
EDGAR A. GUEST, A Creed.

18 Yet still he fills affection's eye,
Obscurely wise, and coarsely kind.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Dr. Robert Levet.

19 There's no dearth of kindness
In this world of ours;
Only in our blindness
We gather thorns for flowers.
GERALD MASSEY, No Dearth of Kindness.

20 Persistent kindness conquers the ill-disposed.
(Vincit malos pertinax bonitas.)
SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 31.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 3, 129.

When your head did but ache,
I knit my handkerchief about your brows,
The best I had, a princess wrought it me,
And I did never ask it you again;
And with my hand at midnight held your head,
And like the watchful minutes to the hour,
Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time, Saying "What lack you?" and "Where lies your grief?"

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 41.

² The kindest man,
The best-condition'd and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 295.

O do not slander him, for he is kind.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 247.

³ Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks,
Shall win my love.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, iv, 2, 41.

And thy despised disdain too late shall find
That none are fair but who are kind.

THOMAS STANLEY, The Deposition.

⁴ For he was kind and she was kind,
And who so blest as they?

SOUTHEY, Rudiger, l. 47.

^{4a} So many gods, so many creeds,
So many paths that wind and wind,
While just the art of being kind
Is all the sad world needs.

ELLA WHILLER WILCOX, The World's Need.

⁵ Fierce for the right, he bore his part
In strife with many a valiant foe;
But Laughter winged his polished dart,
And kindness tempered every blow.

WILLIAM WINTER, J. H. Bromley.

Surely never did there live on earth
A man of kinder nature.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion, Bk. i, l. 414.

⁶ That best portion of a good man's life,
His little, nameless, unremembered acts
Of kindness and of love.

WORDSWORTH, *Lines Composed a Few Miles
Above Tintern Abbey*, l. 33.

Nor greetings where no kindness is, nor all
The dreary intercourse of daily life.

WORDSWORTH, Tintern Abbey, l. 130.

KINGS

I—Kings: Apothegms

⁷ Our converse with kings should be either as rare, or as pleasing, as possible.

ÆSOP, to Solon, who had been banished by Cressus. To which Solon replied, "No, indeed! as rare or as beneficial as possible."
(PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 28.)

⁸ For commonly it is said that a king without letter or cunning is compared to an ass crowned.

BERNERS, Huon, 730. (c. 1534)

An unlettered king is a crowed ass.

EDWARD FREEMAN, Norman Conquest. Vol. ii,
p. 277.

⁹ God bless the King, I mean the faith's defender,

God bless (no harm in blessing) the Pretender,
But who pretender is or who is king,
God bless us all—that's quite another thing.

JOHN BYROM, Extempore to an Officer in the Army.

¹⁰ King is Kün-ning, Kan-ning, Man that knows or cans.

CARLYLE, *Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero
as Divinity*.

¹¹ The king's leavings are better than the lord's bounty.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote Pt. i, ch. 39.

Better to die a king than to live a prince.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, to his brother, Louis, when the latter urged his ill health against taking the crown of Holland.

For a King, death is better than dethronement and exile.

Attributed to THEODORA, wife of Justinian I.

¹² To be a kingdom's bulwark, a king's glory,
Yet loved by both, and trusted and trustworthy,

Is more than to be king.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Zapholya Sc. i.

¹³ One who has given you more kingdoms than you had towns before.

CORTEZ, to Charles V., when the latter demanded who he was. (VOLTAIRE, Essai sur les Mœurs. Ch. 147.) Prescott calls it a "most improbable story." (Conquest of Mexico, vii, 5, note.)

¹⁴ I would not be a king to be belov'd

Causeless, and daub'd with undiscerning praise.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 359.

¹⁵ Royalty is but a feather in a man's cap: let children enjoy their rattle.

OLIVER CROMWELL, when rejecting the offer of the title of king, in 1658.

What shall we do with the bauble? Take it away!

OLIVER CROMWELL, picking up the mace, when dissolving the Long Parliament, 20 April,
1653. (CARLYLE, Cromwell.)

A prince, the moment he is crown'd,
Inherits every virtue sound,
As emblems of the sovereign power,
Like other baubles in the Tower;

Is generous, valiant, just, and wise,
And so continues till he dies.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 191.

1 A King's a King, do Fortune what she can.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, Barons' War. Bk. v, st. 36.

2 Kind as kings upon their coronation day.
DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. i, l. 271.

3 A man's a man,
But when you see a king, you see the work
Of many thousand men.
GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. l.

4 If the king is in the palace, nobody looks at the walls.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

5 They are not kings who sit on thrones, but they who know how to govern.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Eloquence.

This 'tis to be a monarch when alone
He can command all, but is awed by none.

MASSINGER, The Roman Actor. Act i, sc. 4.

6 A king's favour is no inheritance.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4618.

7 The sun has set; no night has followed. (Sol occubuit; nox nulla secuta est.)

GRALDUS DE BARRI, in 1189, referring to the accession of Richard I, Cœur-de-Lion, to the throne of England on the death of Henry II.

8 Beware, for dreadful is the wrath of kings.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 234. (Pope, tr.)

The wrath of kings is always heavy. (Gravis ira regum est semper.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 494.

9 There is no king who has not had a slave among his ancestors, and no slave who has not had a king among his.

HELEN KELLER, Story of My Life, p. 4.

10 Who knows not that the king is a name of dignity and office, not of person?

MILTON, Tenure of Kings and Magistrates.

11 King David and King Solomon
Led merry, merry lives,
With many, many lady friends,
And many, many wives;
But when old age crept over them,
With many, many qualms,
King Solomon wrote the Proverbs
And King David wrote the Psalms.

JAMES BALL NAYLOR, David and Solomon.

12 For the Island's sons the word still runs,
"The King, and the King's Highway."

HENRY NEWBOLT, The King's Highway.

13 Know you not that kings have long hands?

(An nescis longos regibus esse manus?)
OVID, Heroides. Epist. xvii, l. 166.

Kings are commonly said to have long hands; I wish they had as long ears.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

14 Honour the king.
New Testament: I Peter, ii, 17.

15 The more regal king of kings. (Regum rex regiorum.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 325.

16 He that eats the king's goose shall be choked with his feathers.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa Harlowe, iv, 243.

17 The king is not the nation's representative,
but its clerk.

ROBESPIERRE, Speech, National Assembly, 17
May, 1790.

I am indeed the clerk (commis) and the explorer (voyageur) of democracy.

GAMBETTA, Speech, Havre, 18 April, 1872, accepting the nickname of "Commercial Traveler" (Commis-voyageur), which had been given him because of the rapidity of his movements during the war.

18 O Richard! O my king, the universe forsakes thee!

On earth there is none but I who cares for thy welfare.

(O Richard! O mon roy, l'univers t'aban-donne!)

Sur la terre il n'est que moy qui s'intéresse de tes affaires.)

MICHEL JEAN SEDAINE, Richard Cœur-de-Lion: Blondel's Song. The singing of this song at the dinner given at Versailles, 1 Oct., 1789, by the King and Marie Antoinette, was a famous episode in French history. (See CARLYLE, French Revolution.
Pt. i, bk. vii, ch. 2.)

19 It is superior to all, monarch of all it surveys.
(Dominus omnium est, supra omnia est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epist. civ, 24.

I am monarch of all I survey,
My right there is none to dispute;
From the center all round to the sea,
I am lord of the fowl and the brute.

COWPER, Verses Supposed to be Written by Alexander Selkirk.

20 On alien soil, kingship stands not sure.
(Alieno in loco Haut stabile regnum est.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 344.

Stolen sceptres are held in anxious hands. (Rapta sed trepidu manu Sceptre obtinentur.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 341.

21 The king's a beggar, now the play is done.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well: Epi- logue, l. 335.

- 1 A king of shreds and patches.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 102.
The theory of the world is a thing of shreds and patches.
EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato. (1850)
The phrase, "A thing of shreds and patches," was echoed many years later by W. S. GILBERT in the first act of The Mikado. See 1879:3.
- 2 Proud setter up and puller down of kings!
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 157.
- 3 Ay, every inch a king.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 109.
- 4 O that I were a mockery king of snow,
Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke,
To melt myself away in water-drops!
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 260.
- 5 Hail, glorious edifice, stupendous work!
God bless the Regent, and the Duke of York!
HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Loyal Effusion.
- 6 Kinquering Congs their titles take.
WILLIAM A. SPOONER, Warden of New College,
Oxford, announcing the hymn, "Conquering
Kings their titles take," early in 1879.
Hence, "spoonerisms," most of which were the inventions of Dr. Spooner's friends.
- 7 A brave man, were he seven times king,
Is but a brave man's peer.
A. C. SWINBURNE, Marino Faliero. Act ii, sc. 2.
- 8 He who knows not how to dissimulate knows not how to reign. (Qui nescit dissimulare, nescit regnare.)
VINCENTIUS LUPANUS. (JUSTUS LIPSIUS, Politica Sive Civilis Doctrina. Bk. iv, ch. 14.)
Sometimes given as a saying of Emperor
Frederick I (Barbarossa), Louis XII and Philip II of Spain. Tacitus (Annals. Bk. iv, ch. 71), speaking of Tiberius, says, "He was prouder of his dissimulation than of all his other virtues; for such he considered it."
One of the favorite maxims of Louis IX of France, and all the Latin he thought the Dauphin needed to learn. (DE THOU, Hist.
Univ., iii, 293.)
- He who knows not how to dissimulate, knows
not how to reign.
LOUIS XI OF FRANCE. (ROCHE ET CHARLES, Histoire de France. Vol. ii, p. 30.)
To know how to dissimulate is the knowledge of kings. (Savoir dissimuler est le savoir des rois.)
CARDINAL RICHELIEU, Miranne.
- 9 The first king was a successful soldier. (Le premier qui fut roi, fut un soldat heureux.)
VOLTAIRE, Méropé. Act i, sc. 3.
What can they see in the longest kingly line in Europe, save that it runs back to a successful soldier?
SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 37.

- 10 Every one is born a king, and most people die in exile.
OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act III.
- 11 The king reigns but does not govern. (Rex regnat sed non gubernat.)
JAN ZAMOJSKA, Speech, at the Diet of 1605, alluding to King Sigismund III.
- The king reigns but does not govern. (Der König herrscht aber regiert nicht.)
BISMARCK, Debate, Reichstag, 24 Jan., 1882.
Bismarck quoted this proverb in order to deny its application to Germany.
- She governed but she did not reign. (Elle gouvernait, mais elle ne régnait pas.)
HÉNAULT, Mémoires, p. 161, referring to Madame des Ursins, the favorite of Philip V of Spain.
- The king reigns, but does not govern. (Le roi régne, il ne gouverne pas.)
LOUIS ADOLPHE THIERS, Editorial Article, in Le Nationale, a newspaper of which he was editor, Paris, 18 January, 1830.

II—Kings: The Good King

- 12 'Tis clemency which is the surest mark
By which the world may know a true monarch.
(La clemence est la plus belle marque
Qui fasse à l'univers connaître un vrai mon-arque.)
CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act iv, sc. 4.
- 13 We, too, are friends to loyalty. We love
The king who loves the law, respects his bounds,
And reigns content within them. Him we serve
Freely and with delight, who leaves us free.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 331.
- 14 The clearest mark of a true king is that he is one whom all good men can praise without compunction not only during his life, but even afterwards.
DIO CHRYSOSTOM, First Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 33.
- 15 A king so good, so just, so great,
That at his birth the heavenly council paused
And then at last cried out, This is a man!
DRYDEN, The Duke of Guise. Act i, sc. 1. See also under MAN.
- 16 A good king is a public servant.
BEN JONSON, Explorata.
- 17 For therein stands the office of a king,
His honour, virtue, merit, and chief praise,
That for the public all this weight he bears.
MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 463.
- 18 It is something to hold the scepter with a firm hand. (Est aliquid valida sceptrum tenere manu.)

OWEN, Remedium Amoris, l. 480.

1 Nothing becomes a king so much as the administration of justice. War is a tyrant, as Timotheus expresses it, but Pindar says, Justice is the rightful sovereign of the world.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Demetrius. Ch. 42, sec. 5.

2 'Twere good That kings should think withal,
When peace and wealth their land has blessed,
'Tis better to sit still at rest,
Than rise, perchance to fall.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iv, st. 29.

3 A king is he who has no fear; a king is he who desires naught. (Rex est qui metuit nihil; Rex est qui cupiet nihil.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 388.

4 I made them lay their hands in mine and swear

To reverence the King, as if he were
Their conscience, and their conscience as their King.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 463.

III—Kings: Their Virtues

5 These unhappy kings, of whom so much evil is said, have their good points sometimes. (Ces malheureux rois Dont on dit tant de mal, ont du bon quelquefois.)

ANDRIEUX, Meunier de Sans Souci.

6 To do well and be ill spoken of—'tis the lot of kings. (Βασιλεὺς μὲν εὖ πράττειν, κακῶς δὲ ἀκούειν.)

ANTISTHENES, (MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, sec. 36; DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Antisthenes. Sec. 3.) Sometimes translated:

"It is a royal privilege to do well and be ill-spoken of." Alexander the Great quoted this apothegm. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander. Ch. 41, sec. 1.) Carlyle saw it written in Latin on the town-hall of Zittau, Germany: "Bene facere et male audire regium est." (CARLYLE, Frederick the Great, xv, 13.)

'Tis the first art of kings, the power to suffer hate. (Ars prima regni est posse invidiam pati.)

SENECA, Hercules Furans, l. 353.

7 He is the fountain of honour.

FRANCIS BACON, Of a King.

8 And in the years he reigned, through all the country wide,
There was no cause for weeping, save when the good man died.

(Ce n'est que lorsqu'il expira Que le peuple, qui l'enterra, pleura.)

BÉRANGER, Le Roi Yvetot. (Thackeray, tr., The King of Brentford.)

So sit two kings of Brentford on one throne;

And so two citizens who take the air,
Close pack'd, and smiling, in a chaise and one.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 78.

9 He errs who thinks that life under a noble prince is slavery; never does liberty appear more fair than under a righteous king. (Fallitur egregio quisquis sub principe credit Servitium. Numquam libertas gratior extat Quam sub rege pio.)

CLAUDIAN, De Consulatu Stilichonis. Bk. iii, l. 113.

10 Whoever is king, is also the father of his country.

CONGREVE, Love for Love: Dedication. See also under PATRIOTISM.

11 The king's word is more than another man's oath.

A king's word must stand. (Verbum regis stet oportet.)

BISHOP JOHN FISHER, English Works, p. 230. (1509) Cited as "a common proverb."

A King's word should be a King's bond.

UNKNOWN, Sir Lancelot du Lake, l. 1573. (c. 1490)

12 If fidelity were lost, it should be found in the heart of a king.

FRANCIS I OF FRANCE. (L'Esprit dans l'Histoire, 113.)

Though good faith should be banished from the rest of the world, it should be found in the mouths of kings. (Si la bonne foi était bannie du reste du monde, il faudrait qu'on la trouvât dans la bouche des rois.)

JEAN II OF FRANCE, speaking to his council. (Biographie Universelle.)

13 There was a king of Thule,
Was faithful till the grave,
To whom his mistress dying,
A golden goblet gave.

(Es war ein König in Thule
Gar treu bis an das Grab,
Dem sterbend seine Buhle
Einen gold'nen Becher gab.)

GOETHE, Faust: The King of Thule. (Bayard Taylor, tr.)

14 The virtue of kings seems to consist chiefly in justice. (La vertu royale semble consister le plus en la justice.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 6.

15 The Monarch drank, that happy hour,
The sweetest, holiest draught of Power.

SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto vi, st. 26.

16 Pre-eminence, and all the large effects

That troop with majesty.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act i, sc. 1, l. 133.

The king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act iv, sc. 3, l. 91.

Yet looks he like a king; behold, his eye,
As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth
Controlling majesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II., Act iii, sc. 3, l. 68.

Not making his high place the lawless perch
Of wing'd ambitions, nor a vantage-ground
For pleasure; but thro' all this tract of years

Wearing the white flower of a blameless life,
Before a thousand peering littlenesses.

TENNYSON, Idylls of the King: Dedication,
l. 21.

IV—Kings: Their Faults

For this is the true strength of guilty kings,
When they corrupt the souls of those they rule.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 1451.

Kings, that made laws, first broke them.

AFERA BERN, The Golden Age, St. 4.

A king promises, but observes only when he pleases.

H. G. BORN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 292.

Kings are naturally lovers of low company.
EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons,
11 Feb., 1780.

The animal known as king is by nature carnivorous. ('Αλλὰ φάσκει τούτο το ζῷον ὁ βασιλεὺς καρσώμενον ἑστίν.)

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato, Ch. viii, sec. 8.)

Kings climb to eminence
Over men's graves.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Before Sedan.

But though each court a jester lacks,
To laugh at monarchs to their face;
All mankind do behind their backs
Supply the honest jester's place.

ROBERT DONNELLY, The Kings of Europe.

Kings fight for kingdoms, madmen for applause.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite, Bk. ii, l. 322.

And Tom the second reigns like Tom the first.

DRYDEN, To Mr. Congress, l. 48.

God said, "I am tired of kings,
I suffer them no more;
Up to my ear the morning brings
The outrage of the poor."

EMERSON, Eastern Hymns.

The world is growing weary of that most costly of all luxuries, hereditary kings.

GEORGE BANCROFT, Letter, London, March, 1848.

And when Reason's voice,
Loud as the voice of Nature, shall have waked
The nations, . . . kingly glare
Will lose its power to dazzle; . . . whilst false-hood's trade
Shall be as hateful and unprofitable
As that of truth is now.

The passing poor magnificence of kings.
JAMES THOMSON, Liberty, Pt. iii, l. 555.

Kingship is passing down the yellow road,
And crowns are dangling from the willow tree;

Royalty flees to seek a last abode
With the other outcasts of eternity.

DONALD EVANS, Bonfire of Kings.

Kings govern by means of popular assemblies only when they cannot do without them.

CHARLES JAMES FOX, Speech, House of Commons, 31 Oct., 1776.

Ruin seize thee, ruthless king!
Confusion on thy banners wait;

The trappings of a monarchy would set up an ordinary republic.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton.
Johnson places this sentence in quotation marks, but it is not found in Milton's works. It is, perhaps, a paraphrase of Milton's arguments in A Ready and Easy Way.

¹ Step by step and word by word: who is ruled

Suffer not the old Kings: for we know the breed.

RUDYARD KIPPLING, The Old Issue.

² Ah! vainest of all things
Is the gratitude of kings.

LONGFELLOW, Belisarius. St. 8.

³ We hardly know any instance of the strength and weakness of human nature so striking and so grotesque as the character of this haughty, vigilant, resolute, sagacious blue-stocking, half Mithridates and half Trissotin, bearing up against a world in arms, with an ounce of poison in one pocket and a quire of bad verses in the other.

¹² It is a miserable state of mind, to have few things to desire and many things to fear: and yet that commonly is the case of Kings.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Empire.

¹³ Ah, monarchs! could ye taste the mirth ye mar,

Not in the toils of Glory would ye fret;
The hoarse dull drum would sleep, and man be happy yet.

E. A. ROBINSON, Three Quatrains.

⁹ The gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through
And keep their impious turbans on.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, Act iii, sc. 3, l. 4.

¹⁰ What infinite heart's ease
Must kings neglect, that private men enjoy!
And what have kings, that privates have not too,

Save ceremony, save general ceremony?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 253.

¹¹ What art thou, thou idol ceremony?
What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers? . . .
Art thou aught else but place, degree and form,
Creating awe and fear in other men?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 256.

Ceremony keeps up all things.

JOHN SELDEN, Table Talk: Ceremony.

¹² It is the curse of kings to be attended
By slaves that take their humours for a warrant

To break within the bloody house of life.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, Act iv, sc. 2, l. 208.

For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground
And tell sad stories of the death of kings:
How some have been depos'd, some slain in war;
Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd;
Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping
kill'd;

All murder'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, Act iii, sc. 2, l. 155.

I give this heavy weight from off my head,
And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand,
The pride of kingly sway from out my heart.

¹⁷ The king never dies.

BLACKSTONE, Commentaries. Bk. iv, p. 249.

The King is dead. Long live the King! (Le Roi est mort. Vive le Roi!)

The French form of proclamation, last used at the death of Louis XVIII.

The death of Louis XIV was announced by the captain of the body-guard from a window of the state apartment. Raising his truncheon above his head, he broke it in the centre, and throwing the pieces among the crowd, exclaimed in a loud voice, "Le Roi est mort!" Then seizing another staff, he flourished it in the air as he shouted, "Vive le Roi!"

I am the State! (L'état, c'est moi!)

LOUIS XIV OF FRANCE, to the President of Parliament, 22 Dec., 1655, at the age of seventeen. (DULAURE, Histoire de Paris, p. 387.) Other historians dispute the authenticity of the utterance. Years later, however, the first sentence of a course in public law which he caused to have written for his grandson was, "The nation is not corporate in France: it lives entirely in the person of the king." And Bossuet declared of the sovereign, "Tout l'état est en lui": "All the state is in him." (CHÉRUVEL, Histoire de l'Administration Monarchique en France, ii, 32.)

Homage is due to kings; they do what they like.
LOUIS XIV OF FRANCE, when a boy. (MARTIN, History of France, xv, 95.)

It was said of Louis the Fourteenth that his gait was becoming enough in a king, but in a private man would have been an insufferable strut.

But methought it lessened my esteem of a king, that he should not be able to command the rain.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 19 July, 1662.

For sure if Dulness sees a grateful day,
Tis in the shade of arbitrary sway.

O! if my sons may learn one earthly thing,
Teach but that one, sufficient for a King;
That which my priests, and mine alone, maintain,

Which, as it dies or lives, we fall or reign:
May you, may Cam and Isis, preach it long!
"The right divine of Kings to govern wrong."

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 181. Cam and Isis, the universities of Cambridge and Oxford. Though Pope encloses the last line in quotation marks, it is probably his own.

Divine right of kings means the divine right of anyone who can get uppermost.

A king of France dies, but ought never to be ill.
LOUIS XVIII, 25 August, 1824, when urged not to hold his usual reception to celebrate the anniversary of St. Louis.

Name me an emperor who was ever struck by a cannon-ball.

CHARLES V OF SPAIN, when urged not to expose himself in action.

I never heard of a king being drowned. Make haste, loose your cables, you will see the elements join to obey me.

WILLIAM RUFUS, in 1099. (FREEMAN, Life of William Rufus, ii, 284.)

Queens of England are never drowned.
HENRIETTA MARIA, wife of Charles I, during a storm at sea, Feb., 1642.

VII—Kings: King and Subject

Kings will be tyrants from policy, when subjects are rebels from principle.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

A sovereign's ear ill brooks a subject's questioning.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Zepolya. Sc. 1.

- 1 He is ours,
T' administer, to guard, t' adorn the state,
But not to warp or change it. We are his,
To serve him nobly in the common cause,
True to the death, but not to be his slaves.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 341.
- 2 When kings the sword of justice first lay down,
They are no kings, though they possess the crown;
Titles are shadows, crowns are empty things:
The good of subjects is the end of kings.
DANIEL DEFOE, The True-born Englishman. Pt.
ii, l. 313.
- 3 Minions too great argue a King too weak.
SAMUEL DANIEL, The History of the Civil War. Bk. i, st. 38.
- 4 Happy when both to the same centre move,
When Kings give liberty, and subjects love.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Cooper's Hill, l. 333.
- Thus Kings, by grasping more than they could hold,
First made their subjects by oppression bold;
And popular sway, by forring Kings to give
More than was fit for subjects to receive,
Ran to the same extremes; and one excess
Made both, by striving to be greater, less.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Cooper's Hill, l. 343.
- 5 Subjects may grieve, but Monarchs must redress.
DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 242.
- 6 Every citizen is king under a citizen king.
(Tout citoyen est roi sous un roi citoyen.)
FAVART, Les Trois Sultanes. Act ii, sc. 3.
- 7 A bad King but a good Subject.
W. S. GILBERT, Utopia, Limited. Act i.
- 8 The obligation of subjects to the sovereign is understood to last as long, and no longer, than the power lasteth by which he is able to protect them.
THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Pt. ii, ch. 21.
- 9 God gives not kings the style of Gods in vain.
For on his throne his sceptre do they sway;
And as their subjects ought them to obey,
So kings should fear and serve their God again.
JAMES I OF SCOTLAND, Sonnet Addressed to His Son, Prince Henry.
- 10 When King and People understand each other past a doubt,
It takes a foe and more than a foe to knock that country out.
RUDYARD KIPPLING, Together.
- 11 I recommend my son, if he has the misfortune

- to become king, to remember that he owes himself to the happiness of his people.
LOUIS XIV OF FRANCE, in the testament whch
he made 25 Dec., 1791.
- 12 Entire and sure the monarch's rule must prove,
Who founds her greatness on her subjects'
love.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Prologue Spoken on Her Majesty's Birthday, 1704.
- 13 He that is hated of his subjects cannot be counted a king.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
- 14 Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 186.
- 15 Was never subject longed to be a king,
As I do long and wish to be a subject.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 9, l. 5.
- 16 Vulgarity in a king flatters the majority of the nation.
BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.
- 17 The king who fights his people fights himself.
TENNYSON, The Passing of Arthur, l. 72.
- 18 The greatest king is he who is the king
Of greatest subjects.
GILBERT WEST, Institution of the Garter, l. 302.

KISS AND KISSING

I—Kiss: Definitions

- 19 Something made of nothing, tasting very sweet,
A most delicious compound, with ingredients
complete;
But if, as on occasion, the heart and mind are sour,
It has no great significance, and loses half its power.
MARY E. BUXELL, The Kiss.
- 20 The anatomical juxtaposition of two orbicularis oris muscles in a state of contraction.
DR. HENRY GIBBONS, Definition of a Kiss.
- 21 What is a kiss? Why this, as some approve:
The sure sweet cement, glue, and lime of love.
ROBERT HERRICK, A Kiss.
- 22 What is a kiss? Alacke! at worst,
A single Dropp to quenche a Thirst,
Tho' oft it proves, in happie Hour,
The first swete Dropp of our long Showre.
CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, In the Old Time.
- 23 What's in a kiss?
Oh, when for love the kiss is given, this:
Truth, purity, abiding trust, the seal
Of loyalty to love, come woe, come weal,

Unspoken promise of a soul's allegiance—this,
All this, and more, ah more! is in a kiss.

MARION PHELPS, What's in a Kiss?

1 A kiss, when all is said, what is it?

... a rosy dot

Placed on the "I" in loving; 'tis a secret
Told to the mouth instead of to the ear.

EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act iii.

II—Kiss: Apothegms

2 I wonder who's kissing her now?

FRANK R. ADAMS AND WILL M. HOUGE. Title and refrain of a lyric set to music by Joseph
E. Howard in 1912.

3 Isn't it strange how one man's kiss can grow
To be like any other's . . . or a woman's
To be like any woman's?

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen.
Act i.

4 Kiss till the cows come home.

BAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady.
Act ii, sc. 2.

5 A paroxysmal kiss.

kiss he had given Mrs. Henry C. Bowen. It gained wide currency in the '70's. (Titan vs. Beecher. Vol. i, p. 66.)

6 A kiss of the mouth often touches not the heart.

H. G. BORN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 292.

7 There's nothing wrong in a connubial kiss.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 8.

8 Many a miss would not be a missus
If liquor did not add a spark to her kisses.

E. L. C., Listen. (Life, March, 1933.)

9 Kissing goes by favour.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 327. (1605);
FRANCIS QUARLES, The Virgin Widow. Act i.
(1649) A proverb of great antiquity.

Ere they bewed the Sphinx's visage,
Favouritism governed kissage,
Even as it does in this age.

RUDYARD KIPLING, General Summary.

10 Sweetest the kiss that's stolen from weeping maid. (Primus titubans audacia furtis.)

CLAUDIAN, De Nuptiis Honorii Augusti, l. 81.

I do not care for kisses, unless I have snatched them in spite of resistance. (Basia dum nolo, nisi que luctantia carpei.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, ep. 46.

Stolen kisses are always sweeter.

LEWIS HUNT, The Indicator.

A legal kiss is never as good as a stolen one.

13 The kiss you take is paid by that you give:
The joy is mutual, and I'm still in debt.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Heroic Love. Act v, sc. 1.

And if you'll blow to me a kiss,
I'll blow a kiss to you.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, The Baby's Debut.

14 No man can print a kiss; lines may deceive.
FULKE GREVILLE, Another to Myra.

"May I print a kiss on your lips?" I said,
And she nodded her full permission;
So we went to press and I rather guess
We printed a full edition.

JOSEPH LILIENTHAL, A Full Edition.

15 The sound of a kiss is not so loud as that of a cannon, but its echo lasts a great deal longer.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-

16 To kiss with the maid when the mistress is kind

A gentleman ought to be loth, sir.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 377.

17 'Tis no sin love's fruit to steal,
But the sweet theft to reveal.

BEN JONSON, Song: To Celia.

And if he needs must kiss and tell,
I'll kick him headlong into hell.

COTTON, Burlesque upon Burlesque, 200.

Oh, fie, Miss, you must not kiss and tell.

20 Kiss and be friends.

PETER LANOTFT, Chronicles, 64. (c. 1300) In common use thereafter.

Let's see you buss and be friends.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, ii, 73.

21 Cupid and my Campaspe played
At cards for kisses; Cupid paid.

JOHN LYLY, Alexander and Campaspe.

My love and I for kisses play'd;
She would keep stakes; I was content;

But when I won, she would be paid;

This made me ask her what she meant.

Pray, since I see (quoth she) your wrangling vain,

Take your own kisses; give me mine again.
 WILLIAM STRODE, My Love and I for Kisses
Play'd. (c. 1640) Dryden added three lines to this stanza, and it is included in his Miscellany. (1716)

1 Sweet Helen, make me immortal with a kiss!
 Her lips suck forth my soul: see, where it flies!

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Faustus, l. 1330.
 It was thy kiss, Love, that made me immortal.
 MARGARET FULLER, Dryad Song.

O love! O fire! once he drew
 With one long kiss my whole soul thro'
 My lips, as sunlight drinketh dew.
 TENNYSON, Poems, St. 3.

2 Why do I not kiss you, Philenis? You are bald, you are carrotty, you are one-eyed. He who kisses you sins against nature.
 MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, epig. 33.

3 Let my hand have the honour
 To convey a kiss from my lips to the cover of
 Your foot, dear signior.
 PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Flor- ence. Act iv, sc. 1.

4 When a man's hose be down, it is easy to kiss him where he sat on Saturday.
 BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotinus. (1583)

5 Kissing don't last; cookery do.
 GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 28.

6 If you kiss me you hate me, and if you hate me you kiss me. But if you don't hate me, dear friend, don't kiss me! (Ἢν μὲ φιλεῖς, μισεῖς με· αὐτὸ εἰ μισεῖς, σὸ φιλεῖς με· εἰ δὲ μὲ μὴ μισεῖς, φίλαρε, μὴ μὲ φίλει.)

 252.)

7 And I will have a lover's fee; they say, un-kiss'd unkind.
 GEORGE PEELE, Arraignement of Paris. Act 1,
 sc. 2. (1584)

8 The kisses of an enemy are deceitful.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 6.

Many kiss the hand they wish cut off.
 GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

9 A hisping lass is good to kiss.
 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

10 An horse-kiss: a rude kiss, able to beat one's teeth out.
 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

11 Thou knowest the maiden who ventures to kiss a sleeping man, wins of him a pair of gloves.
 SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 5.

12 Strangers and foes do sunder, and not kiss.
 SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
 ii, sc. 5, l. 91.

Ae fond kiss and then we sever.
 BURNS, Farewell to Nancy.

One kiss more, and so farewell.
 UNKNOWN, Loyal Garland. Song 22. (1686)

One fond kiss before we part,
 Drop a tear and bid adieu.
 ROBERT DODSLEY, The Parting Kiss.

13 I understand thy kisses and thou mine.
 SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 205.

The kiss you take is better than you give;
 Therefore no kiss.
 SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 38.

Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kiss,
 As seal to this indenture of my love.
 SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 19.

14 Speak, cousin, or, if you cannot, stop his mouth with a kiss.
 SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
 ii, sc. 1, l. 321.

15 Till thy wound be thoroughly heal'd;
 And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss.
 SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
 Act i, sc. 2, l. 116.

Kiss the place to make it well.
 ANN TAYLOR, My Mother.

16 Bachelor's fare: bread and cheese and kisses.
 SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

17 Lord! I wonder what fool it was that first invented kissing.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.
 Tell me who first did kisses suggest?
 It was a mouth all glowing and blest;
 It kissed and it thought of nothing beside.

HEINE, Book of Songs. No. 25.
 May his soul be in heaven—he deserves it I'm sure—

Who was first the inventor of kissing.
 UNKNOWN, The Inventor of Kissing.

18 Dear as remember'd kisses after death,
 And sweet as those by hopeless fancy feign'd
 On lips that are for others.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 36.

19 Many kiss the child for love of the nurse.
 (Osculor hunc ore natum nutricis amore.)
 THOMAS WRIGHT, Essays on the Middle Ages.
 Vol. i, p. 150. Quoting a medieval proverb.

Many kiss the child for the nurse's sake.
 JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7, (1546)

For love of the nurse the bairn gets more a kiss.
 GEORGE MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, 83.

20 You must kiss the rod.
 UNKNOWN, History of Reynard the Fox. Ch.
 12 (c. 1200) This is a series of fables first collected in France under the title, Roman de Renart. The first English version was printed by Caxton in 1481.

Take thy correction mildly, kiss the rod.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 1, l. 32.

A testy babe will scratch the nurse

And presently all humble kiss the rod!

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act i, sc. 2, l. 58.

1 Make them kiss the book.

UNKNOWN, The Manner of Keeping a Court Baron. Printed by the widow of Robert Redman, c. 1539.

III—Kissing: Its Delights

2 Blush, happy maiden, when you feel
The lips which press love's glowing seal;
But as the slow years darklier roll,
Grown wiser, the experienced soul
Will own as dearer far than they
The lips which kiss the tears away.

ELIZABETH AXENS ALLEN, Kisses.

3 But is there nothing else,
That we may do but only walk? Methinks,
Brothers and sisters lawfully may kiss.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, A King and No King. Act iv, sc. 4.

4 Remember the Viper:—'twas close at your feet,

How you started and threw yourself into my arms;

Not a strawberry there was so ripe nor so
sweet

As the lips which I kiss'd to subdue your alarms.

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, Nancy. St. 4.

5 And when my lips meet thine,
Thy very soul is wedded unto mine.

H. H. BOYSEN, Thy Gracious Face I Greet with Glad Surprise.

6 A winning kiss she gave,
A long one, with a free and yielding lip.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Britannia's Pastorals. Bk. iii, song 2, l. 193.

7 I was betrothed that day;
I wore a troth-kiss on my lips I could not give away.

E. B. BROWNING, Lay of the Brown Rosary. Pt. ii, l. 168.

First time he kissed me, he but only kissed
The fingers of this hand wherewith I write;
And ever since, it grew more clean and white,
. . . The second passed in height
The first, and sought the forehead, and half missed,
Half falling on the hair, O beyond meed! . . .
The third upon my lips was folded down
In perfect, purple state; since when, indeed,

I have been proud and said, "My love, my own."
E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese. No. xxxviii.

The moth's kiss, first!

Kiss me as if you made believe

You were not sure, this eve,

How my face, your flower, had pursed its petals up.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Gondola.

8 All the breath and the bloom of the year in the bag of one bee:

All the wonder and wealth of the mine in the heart of one gem:

In the core of one pearl all the shade and the shine of the sea:

Breath and bloom, shade and shine,—wonder,
wealth, and—how far above them—

Truth, that's brighter than gem,

Trust, that's purer than pearl—

Brightest truth, purest trust in the universe—
all were for me

In the kiss of one girl.

ROBERT BROWNING, Summum Bonum.

Her lips, whose kisses pout to leave their nest,
Bid man be valiant ere he merit such.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 58.

9 Their lips drew near, and clung into a kiss;
A long, long kiss, a kiss of youth and love. . .
Each kiss a heart-quake,—for a kiss's strength,
I think, it must be reckon'd by its length.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 185-6.

10 I love the sex, and sometimes would reverse
The tyrant's wish "that mankind only had
One neck, which he with one fell stroke might Pierce."

My wish is quite as wide, but not so bad, . . .
That womankind had but one rosy mouth,
To kiss them all at once from North to South.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 27.

"Kiss" rhymes to "bliss" in fact as well as verse.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 59.

11 How delicious is the winning
Of a kiss at Love's beginning.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Song.

When age chills the blood, when our pleasures are past—
For years fleet away with the wings of the dove—

The dearest remembrance will still be the last,
Our sweetest memorial the first kiss of love.

BYRON, The First Kiss of Love.

And in that first flame
Is all the nectar of the kiss.
(Et c'est dans la première flamme Qu'est tout le nectar du baiser.)

LEBRUN, Mes Souvenirs.

12 Kisses kept are wasted;
Love is to be tasted.

There are some you love, I know;

Be not loath to tell them so.
 Lips go dry and eyes grow wet
 Waiting to be warmly met,
 Keep them not in waiting yet;
 Kisses kept are wasted.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, Kisses Kept Are Wasted.

1
 Rose kissed me today.
 Will she kiss me tomorrow?
 Let it be as it may,
 Rose kissed me today.
 AUSTIN DOBSON, A Kiss.

2
 Never a lip is curved with pain
 That can't be kissed into smiles again.
 BRET HARTE, The Lost Galcon.

 Give me a kiss and to that kiss a score;
 Then to that twenty, add a hundred more;
 A thousand to that hundred; so kiss on,
 To make that thousand up a million;
 Treble that million, and when that is done,
 Let's kiss afresh, as when we first begun.
 ROBERT HEERICK, To Anthea.

 Jenny kissed me when we met,
 Jumping from the chair she sat in;
 Time, you thief, who love to get Sweetens into your list, put that in!
 Say I'm weary, say I'm sad.
 Say that health and wealth have missed me:
 Say I'm growing old, but add
 Jenny kissed me
 LEIGH HUNT, Jenny Kissed Me. "Jenny" was Jane Welsh Carlyle.

Only he felt he could no more dissemble,
 And kissed her, mouth to mouth, all in a tremble.
 LEIGH HUNT, Story of Rimini.
 You kissed me! My head drooped low on your breast
 With a feeling of shelter and infinite rest,
 While the holy emotions my tongue dared not speak
 Flashed up as a flame from my heart to my cheek.
 JOSEPHINE SLOCUM HUNT, You Kissed Me.
 I kissed you, I own, but I did not suppose
 That you, through the papers, the deed would disclose,
 Like free-loving cats, when on ridge-poles they meet,
 And their squalls of "You kissed me!" disturb the whole street.
 UNKNOWN, You Kissed me.

5
 A soft lip,
 Would tempt you to eternity of kissing!
 BEN JONSON, Volpone, Act i, sc. 1.
 Leave a kiss but in the cup,
 And I'll not look for wine.
 BEN JONSON, To Celio. See also under EYES
 AND LOVE.

6
 And our lips found ways of speaking

What words cannot say,
 Till a hundred nests gave music,
 And the East was gray.
 FREDERIC LAWRENCE KNOWLES, A Memory.

7
 When she kissed me once in play,
 Rubies were less bright than they;
 And less bright were those which shone
 In the palace of the Sun.
 Will they be as bright again?
 Not if kiss'd by other men.
 WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Rubies.

8
 Says he, "I'd better call agin;"
 Says she, "Think likely, mister!"
 Thet last word pricked him like a pin,
 An' . . . Wal, he up an' kist her.
 J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

 yoke as yours
 MACAULAY, Virginia, l. 138.

 I rest content; I kiss your eyes,
 I kiss your hair in my delight:
 I kiss my hand and say "Good-night."
 JOAQUIN MILLER, Isles of the Amazons: Pt. v, Introduction.

11
 One kiss the maiden gives, one last,
 Long kiss, which she expires in giving.
 THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri, l. 200.

I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee; no way but this;
 Killing myself, to the upon a kiss
 SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 358.

12
 How should great Jove himself do else than miss
 To win the woman he forgets to kiss.
 COVENTRY PATMORE, De Natura Deorum.
 The lips he must briskly invade
 That would possess the heart.
 THOMAS YALDEN, Song.

13
 Give me kisses! Nay, 'tis true
 I am just as rich as you;
 And for every kiss I owe,
 I can pay you back, you know.
 Kiss me, then,
 Every moment—and again!
 J. G. SAXE, To Lesbia.

Do thou snatch treasures from my lips,
 And I'll take kingdoms back from thine!
 SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act iii, sc. 3.

14
 Quicken with kissing; had my lips that power,
 Thus would I wear them out.
 SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
 sc. 15, l. 39.

15
 His kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.
 SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 4,
 l. 14.

1 O, a kiss,
Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!
Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss
I carried from thee, dear.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 3, l. 44.

Falstaff: Thou dost give me flattering busses.
Doll Tearsheet: By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 291.

2 Take, O, take those lips away,
That so sweetly were forsworn;
And those eyes, the break of day,
Lights that do mislead the morn:
But my kisses bring again, bring again;
Seals of love, but seal'd in vain.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 1.

Hide, O hide those hills of snow,
Which thy frozen bosom bears,
On whose tips the pinks that grow
Are of those that April wears!
But first set my poor heart free
Bound in icy chains by thee!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, *The Bloody
Brother*. Act v, sc. 2. This stanza, with the one above, attributed to Shakespeare, may have been a current song of anonymous authorship; or perhaps Shakespeare wrote the first stanza, and Fletcher appropriated it and added another.

8 And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my hand,
Cry "O sweet creature!" and then kiss me
hard,
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots
That grew upon my lips.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 421.

4 Then come kiss me, sweet and twenty.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 52.
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 22.
She kissed his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 59.

You may ride 's
With one soft kiss a thousand furlongs ere
With spur we heat an acre.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 94.

I think there is not half a kiss to choose
Who loves another best.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 175.

5 See the mountains kiss high heaven,
And the waves clasp one another;
No sister flower would be forgiven
If it disdained its brother;
And the sunlight clasps the earth,
And the moonbeams kiss the sea:
What are all these kissings worth,
If thou kiss not me?

SHELLEY, Love's Philosophy. St. 2.

As in the soft and sweet eclipse,
When soul meets soul on lover's lips.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act iv, l. 450.

6 Her ambrosial kiss,
That sweeter far than any nectar is.
SPENSER, An Hymn in Honour of Love, l. 25.

I ne'er saw nectar on a lip,
But where my own did hope to sip.
SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

7 My lips till then had only known
The kiss of mother and of sister,
But somehow, full upon her own
Sweet, rosy, darling mouth,—I kissed her.
E. C. STEDMAN, The Door-Step.

8 We vulgar take it to be a sign of love. We servants, we poor people, that have nothing but our persons to bestow or treat for, are forced to deal and bargain by way of sample, and therefore as we have no parchments, or wax necessary in our agreements, we squeeze with our hands and seal with our lips, to ratify vows and promises.

RICHARD STEELE, The Conscious Lovers. Act
iii, sc. 1.

9 One rose, but one, by those fair fingers cull'd,
Were worth a hundred kisses press'd on lips
Less exquisite than thine.

TENNYSON, The Gardener's Daughter, l. 148.

A man had given all other bliss,
And all his worldly worth for this,
To waste his whole heart in one kiss
Upon her perfect lips.
TENNYSON, Sir Launcelot and Queen Guinevere.

And sweet red splendid kissing mouth.
VILLON, Complaint of the Fair Armouress.
(Swinburne, tr.)

10 Many an evening by the waters did we watch
the stately ships,
And our spirits rush'd together at the touching of the lips.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 37.

That glance of theirs, but for the street, had been
A clinging kiss.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 103.

Kisses balmier than half-opening buds Of April.
TENNYSON, Tithonus, l. 59.

11 Girl, when he gives you kisses twain,
Use one, and let the other stay;
And hoard it, for moons may die, red fades,
And you may need a kiss—some day.
RIMCLEY TORRENCE, The House of a Hundred Lights.

12 If only in dreams may Man be fully blest,
Is heaven a dream? Is she I clasped a dream?
Or stood she here even now where dew-drops gleam

And miles of furze shine yellow down the West? . . .

Can this be Earth? Can these be banks of furze?

Like burning bushes fired of God they shine!
 I seem to know them, though this body of mine

Passed into spirit at the touch of hers!

Take me by the earlaps and match my little lips to your little lips. (Prehende auriculis, compara labella cum labella.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 668. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

Kissing with inside lip? stopping the career Of laughter with a sigh?

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 286.

Do not make me kiss, and you will not make me sin

H. G. BOEN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 345.

3 You should not take a fellow eight years old And make him swear to never kiss the girls.

ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi.

4 Gin a body meet a body
 Comin' thro' the rye,

Gin a body kiss a body,
 Need a body cry?

Gin a body meet a body
 Comin' thro' the glen,

Gin a body kiss a body,
 Need the world ken?

BURNS, Comin' Thro' the Rye. As was often his custom, Burns built this song upon the refrain of an older one, in this case a song of unknown authorship called The Bob-Tailed Lass. (JUNSON, Scots' Musical Museum, Vol. v, p. 430.)

If a body meet a body going to the Fair,
 If a body kiss a body need a body care?

JAMES C. CROSS, The Harlequin Mariner: Song. (1796)

5 A man may drink and no be drunk;
 A man may fight and no be slain;

A man may kiss a bonnie lass,
 And ay be welcome back again!

BURNS, Duncan Davidson.

6 Kissing is nigh parent and cousin unto the foul feat or deed.

14 "I saw you take his kiss!" " 'Tis true."

"Oh, modesty!" " 'Twas strictly kept:

He thought I slept; at least, I knew

He thought I thought he thought I slept."

COVENTRY PATMORE, Epigram.

15 And secrecy made their courting the sweeter,
 While Peter kissed Thisbe, and Thisbe kissed Peter,—

For kisses, like folks with diminutive souls,
 Will manage to creep through the smallest of holes!

J. C. SAXE, Pyromus and Thisbe.

Young ladies: You shouldn't go strolling about
 When your anxious mamma don't know you are out;

And remember that accidents often befall
 From kissing young fellows through holes in the wall.

J. C. SAXE, Pyromus and Thisbe: Moral.

O kiss me through the hole of this vile wall!
SHAKESPEARE, Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act v, sc. 1, l. 202.

 SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 89.

What a frosty-spirited rogue is this!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 21.

Three misbegotten knaves in Kendal green.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 246.

A rascally yea-forsooth knave.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 41.

What an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 8, l. 37.

The rascally, scould, beggarly, lousy, praggling knave.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 1, l. 6.

A knave; a rascal; an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 14.

Such smiling rogues as these,
 Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain
 Which are too intrinse t' unloose.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 79.

Filthy, worsted-stocking knave; a lily-livered, action-taking knave.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 18.

Poor cuckoldy knave.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 281.

AN ARRANT KNAVE.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 330.

⁶ A crafty knave does need no broker.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 100.

⁷ Though this knave came something saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 20.

⁸ Second Watchman: How if a' will not stand? Dogberry: Why, then, take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 28.

Masters, it is proved already that you are little better than false knaves; and it will go near to be thought so shortly.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 30.

⁹ Whip me such honest knaves.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 49.

A slipper and subtle knave, a finder of occasions.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 246.

¹⁰ Knavery's plain face is never seen till used.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 321.

A knave teach me my duty! I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 151.

Some most villainous knave,
 Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow.
 O heaven, that such companions thou 'ldst unfold,
 And put in every honest band a whip
 To lash the rascals naked through the world
 Even from the east to the west!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 139.

¹¹ 'Tis the base knave that jars.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 47.

A whoreson, beetle-headed, flap-ear'd knave!

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 160.

¹² 'Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gate.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act v, sc. 1, l. 404.

¹³ Ay, knave, because thou strikest as a knight,
 Being but knave, I hate thee all the more.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 994.

¹⁴ Knavery nowadays is its own reward. (Ei nunc praeiumst, qui recta prava faciunt.)
 TERENCE, Phormio, l. 771.

ZENO. (PLUTARCH, Life.)

I.—Knowledge: Definitions

² For all knowledge and wonder (which is the seed of knowledge) is an impression of pleasure in itself.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i.

A rich storehouse, for the glory of the Creator, and the relief of man's estate.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i.

³ What is all Knowledge too but recorded Experience, and a product of History; of which, therefore, Reasoning and Belief, no less than Action and Passion, are essential materials?

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: On History.

Integrity without knowledge is weak and useless. . . . Knowledge without integrity is dangerous and dreadful.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 41.

⁴ Knowledge is the only instrument of production that is not subject to diminishing returns.

J. M. CLARK, Overhead Costs in Modern Industry. (Jour. Pol. Econ., Oct., 1927.)

An investment in knowledge pays the best interest.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard.

⁵ The fruits of the tree of knowledge are various; he must be strong indeed who can digest all of them.

MARY COLERIDGE, Gathered Leaves, p. 8.

⁶ Knowledge comes
Of learning well retain'd, unfruitful else.
DANTE, Paradiso. Canto v, l. 41.

⁷ All our progress is an unfolding, like the vegetable bud. You have first an instinct, then an opinion, then a knowledge.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Intellect.

Knowledge is the only elegance.

EMERSON, Journal, 1856.

Our knowledge is the amassed thought and experience of innumerable minds.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

Knowledge is the antidote to fear,—Knowledge, Use and Reason, with its higher aids.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage.

⁸ Knowledge is a treasure, but practice is the key to it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3139.

Knowledge without practice makes but half the artist.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3141.

⁹ All our knowledge is symbolic.

GOETHE, Table-Talk. 1805.

In the world the important thing is not to know more than all men, but to know more at each moment than any particular man.

GOETHE, Table-Talk, 1808.

¹⁰ The tree of knowledge in your garden grows, Not single, but at every humble door.

O. W. HOLMES, Wind-Clouds and Star-Drifts: Pt. viii, Manhood, l. 46.

¹¹ Knowledge and timber shouldn't be much used till they are seasoned.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6.

¹² It is the peculiarity of knowledge that those who really thirst for it always get it.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, Country Literature.

¹³ Knowledge is of two kinds. We know a subject ourselves or we know where we can find information upon it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

¹⁴ A desire of knowledge is the natural feeling of mankind; and every human being whose mind is not debauched, will be willing to give all that he has to get knowledge.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 30 July, 1763.)

¹⁵ Knowledge is the action of the soul.

BEN JOHNSON, Explorata: Scientia.

¹⁶ History tells what man has done; art, what man has made; literature, what man has felt; religion, what man has believed; philosophy, what man has thought.

BENJAMIN C. LEEMING, Imagination.

¹⁷ What can give us more sure knowledge than our senses? How else can we distinguish between the true and the false? (Quid nobis certius ipsis Sensibus esse potest? qui vera ac falsa notemus?)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 700.

¹⁸ Knowledge advances by steps, and not by leaps.

MACAULAY, Essays: History.

¹⁹ Knowledge apart from justice is rather to be described as cunning than as knowledge. (Scientia, quæ est remota ab iustitia, calliditas potius quam sapientia est appellanda.)

PLATO. (CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 63.)

²⁰ It is one thing to remember, another to know. Remembering is merely safeguarding something entrusted to the memory; knowing means making everything your own. (Aliud autem est meminisse, aliud scire. Meminisse est rem commissam memoria custodire. At contra, scire est et sua facere.)

SENZCA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. xxxiii, 8. Nature has given us the seeds of knowledge, but not knowledge itself. (Natura . . . semina nobis scientie dedit, scientiam non dedit.)

SENZCA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. cxx, sec. 4. The desire of knowledge, like the thirst of riches, increases ever with the acquisition of it.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. ii, ch. 3. Let knowledge grow from more to more, But more of reverence in us dwell; That mind and soul, according well, May make one music as before.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Introduction. St. 7. Who loves not Knowledge? Who shall rail Against her beauty? May she mix With men and prosper! Who shall fix Her pillars? Let her work prevail.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxiv, st. 1. Knowledge is now no more a fountain seal'd: Drink deep, until the habits of the slave, The sins of emptiness, gossip and spite And slander, die.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 76.

A Fountain Sealed.

ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK. Title of novel. Knowledge is the only fountain, both of the love and the principles of human liberty.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address, at dedication of Bunker Hill Monument, 17 June, 1843.

Knowledge, in truth, is the great sun in the firmament. Life and power are scattered with all its beams.

They know enough who know how to learn.

HENRY ADAMS, Education of, p. 314.

A man is but what he knoweth.

FRANCIS BACON, Miscellaneous Tracts: In Praise of Knowledge. Sec. 1.

I have taken all knowledge to be my province.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to Lord Burghley, 1592.

He said it that knew it best.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Boldness.

We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen.

New Testament: John, iii, 12. (Quod scimus loquimur, et quod vidimus testamur.—Vulgate.)

It is better not to know so much than to know so many things that ain't so.

JOSEPH BILLINGS. (JEROME A. HART, In Our Second Century, p. 307.) The form of the saying was varied by its author from time to time. On 23 Oct., 1885, he wrote it for a friend: "It is better to know less than to know so much that ain't so." The original wording (Josh Billings's Encyclopedia of Wit and Wisdom, p. 286, 1874) was: "It is better to know nothing than to know what ain't so."

III—Knowledge: Its Value

Knowledge is, indeed, that which, next to virtue, truly and essentially raises one man above another.

ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 111.

There is no power on earth which setteth up a throne, or chair of state, in the spirits and souls of men, and in their cogitations, imaginations, opinions, and beliefs, but knowledge and learning.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i.

The knowledge of man is as the waters, some descending from above, and some springing up from beneath; the one informed by the light of nature, the other inspired by divine revelation.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

The sovereignty of man lieth hid in knowledge; wherein many things are reserved that kings with their treasure cannot buy, nor with their force command.

BACON, Cogitationes de Scientia Humana.

It is no less true in this human kingdom of knowledge, than in God's kingdom of heaven, that no man shall enter into it, "except he become first as a little child."

BACON, Of the Interpretation of Nature. Ch. 1.

There is no knowledge which is not valuable.

EDMUND BURKE, American Taxation.

Knowledge is a comfortable and necessary retreat and shelter for us in an advanced age; and if we do not plant it while young, it will give us no shade when we grow old.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 11 Dec., 1747.

One of the most agreeable consequences of knowledge is the respect and importance which it communicates to old age.

SYDNEY SMITH, Female Education.

Let the fools talk, knowledge has its value. (Laissez dire les sots, le savoir a son prix.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 19.

Let fools the studious despise,
There's nothing lost by being wise.

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 19.

Deeper, deeper let us toil
In the mines of knowledge.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Aspirations of Youth.

A learned man has always riches in himself. (Homo doctus in se semper divitias habet.)

PRÆDUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 21.

Knowledge of itself is riches.

SAR, Gulistan: Ch. 7, tale 2. Of the Effects of Education.

O what a brave thing it is, in every case and circumstance of a matter, to be thoroughly well informed!

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iii, ch. 7.

For the more a man knows, the more worthy he is.

ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Rhyming Chronicle of the History of England. (1270)

Crowns have their compass—length of days their date—

Triumphs their tomb—felicity, her fate—

Of nought but earth can earth make us partaker,
But knowledge makes a king most like his Maker.

SHAKESPEARE, Epigram on King James I. (PAYNE COLLIER, Life of Shakespeare.)

Sweet food of sweetly uttered knowledge.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Defence of Poesy.

A life of knowledge is not often a life of injury and crime.

SYDNEY SMITH, Pleasures of Knowledge.

A man who dedicates his life to knowledge becomes habituated to pleasure which carries with it no reproach.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy. Lecture 19.

He who binds
His soul to knowledge, steals the key of heaven.

N. P. WILLIS, The Scholars of Thibet Ben Kharat. Pt. ii, l. 6 fr. end.

Oh, be wiser, Thou!
Instructed that true knowledge leads to love.
WORDSWORTH, Lines Left upon a seat in a Yew-tree. l. 59.

IV—Knowledge and Power

For knowledge, too, is itself a power. (Nam et ipsa scientia potestas est.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Haresibus.

Knowledge and human power are synonymous, since the ignorance of the cause frustrates the effect.

BACON, Novum Organum: Summary. Pt. II, aph. 3.

If materialistic knowledge is power, it is not wisdom. It is but a blind force.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 196.

There is no knowledge that is not power.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

Knowledge is power.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Ch. 9.

They say that "Knowledge is power." I used to think so.

BYRON, Letter to Prothero.

Knowledge is more than equivalent to force.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 13.

Simple as it seems, it was a great discovery that the key of knowledge could turn both ways, that it could open, as well as lock, the door of power to the many.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: New England Two Centuries Ago.

1 Every addition to true knowledge is an addition to human power.

HORACE MANN, Lectures on Education. No. 1.

2 A wise man is strong; yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 5.

V—Knowledge and Wisdom

3 There is no great concurrence between learning and wisdom.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning: Civil Knowledge. Sec. 4.

Knowledge and Wisdom, far from being one, Have oftentimes no connexion. Knowledge dwells In heads replete with thoughts of other men; Wisdom in minds attentive to their own. Knowledge, a rude unprofitable mass, The mere materials with which Wisdom builds; . . .

Knowledge is proud that he has learn'd so much; Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 88.

4 The greatest clerks be not the wisest men.

CHAUCER, The Reeve's Tale, l. 4051.

I counsel all creatures no clerk to despise.

LAYLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus xv, l. 64.

5 I've studied now Philosophy
And Jurisprudence, Medicine
And even, alas, Theology
From end to end with labor keen;
And here, poor fool, with all my lore
I stand no wiser than before.

GOETHE, Faust: Night. (Bayard Taylor, tr.)

6 It is the province of knowledge to speak, and it is the privilege of wisdom to listen.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 10.

7 Deign on the passing world to turn thine eyes,
And pause awhile from letters, to be wise.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 155.

8 Knowledge is as food, and needs no less
Her temperance over appetite, to know
In measure what the mind may well contain,
Oppresses else with surfeit, and soon turns
Wisdom to folly, as nourishment to wind.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 126.

9 We live and learn, but not the wiser grow.

JOHN POMFREY, Reason, l. 112.

10 Knowledge, when wisdom is too weak to guide her,

Is like a headstrong horse, that throws the rider.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Miscellanies. Sometimes attributed to Robert Robinson, Vicar of Harlow. (c. 1580) See Notes and Queries, 25 June, 1910.

11 No man is the wiser for his learning.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Wit.

12 Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 141.

13 But you are learn'd; in volumes, deep you sit;
In wisdom, shallow: Pompous ignorance!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 735.

VI—Knowledge: Its Limitations

14 Our knowledge, compared with Thine, is ignorance. (Scientia nostra, scientiæ tuæ comparata, ignorantia est.)

St. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. xi, sec. 4.

Before God we are all equally wise—equally foolish.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Cosmic Religion, p. 105.

15 There's lots of people—this town wouldn't hold them—

Who don't know much excepting what's told them.

WILL CARLETON, City Ballads, p. 143.

All I know is what I read in the papers.

WILL ROGERS.

16 And yet, alas! when all our lamps are burned,
Our bodies wasted, and our spirits spent,
When we have all the learned volumes turned,
Which yield men's wits both help and ornament,

What can we know or what can we discern?

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nasce Teipsum: Introduction. Sec. i, st. 14.

17 We know accurately only when we know little; with knowledge doubt increases. (Eigentlich weiss man nur wenn man wenig weiss; mit dem Wissen wächst der Zweifel.)

VII—Knowledge: Its Futility

⁴ What is all our knowledge? We do not even know what weather it will be tomorrow.
BERTHOLD AUERDACH, On the Heights.

⁵ The desire of power in excess caused the angels to fall; the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Goodness.

⁶ Men are called fools in one age for not knowing what they were called fools for averring in the age before.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

⁷ They who know the most
Must mourn the deepest o'er the fatal truth,
The Tree of Knowledge is not that of life.
BYRON, Manfred. Act i, sc. 1.

⁸ Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.

VIII—Knowledge and Ignorance

¹⁶ A seeming ignorance is often a most necessary part of worldly knowledge.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

¹⁷ Ignorance seldom vaults into knowledge, but passes into it through an intermediate state of obscurity, even as night into day through twilight.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Essays. No. 16.

¹⁸ True knowledge is modest and wary; 'tis ignorance that is bold and presuming.

JOSEPH GLANVILLE, Scep sis Scientifica.

¹⁹ But Knowledge to their eyes her ample page,
Rich with the spoils of time, did ne'er unroll.

Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 78.

² There is only one good, that is knowledge;
there is only one evil, that is ignorance.
(Μόνον ἀγαθόν ἔστιν, τὴν ἐπιστήμην, καὶ ἐν μόνον κακόν, τὴν ἀνιδίαν.)

SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates.
Sec. 14.)

³ It is necessary to fathom one's ignorance on one subject to discover how little one knows on other subjects.

J. A. SPENDER, The Comments of Bagshot.
Ch. 11.

⁴ Knowledge is sympathy, charity, kindness,
Ignorance only is maker of hell.

WILLIAM WATSON, England to Ireland.

⁵ There are four sorts of men:

He who knows not and knows not he knows not: he is a fool—shun him;

He who knows not and knows he knows not:
he is simple—teach him;

He who knows and knows not he knows: he is asleep—wake him;

He who knows and knows he knows: he is wise—follow him.

LADY BURTON, Life of Sir Richard Burton.
Quoted as an Arabian proverb. (See Spectator, 11 Aug., 1894, p. 176.) Sometimes attributed to Darius the Persian.

We think so because other people all think so;
Or because—or because—after all, we do think so;

Or because we were told so, and think we must think so;

Or because we once thought so, and think we still
think so;

Or because, having thought so, we think we will think so.

HENRY SIDGWICK, Lines Composed in His Sleep. (WILLIAM OSLER, Harveian Oration, in South Place Magazine, Feb., 1907.)

Sæpe ego audiui, milites, eum primum esse virum, qui ipse consulat quid in rem sit; se-

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 491.

IV—Labor: To Labor is to Pray

To labor is to pray. (Laborare est orare.)

The ancient motto of the Benedictine monks.

A variation of this, "Qui laborat, orat," "Who labors, prays," is attributed to St. Augustine.

Who prays and works lifts up to God his heart with his hands. (Qui orat et laborat, cor levat ad Deum cum manibus.)

St. BERNARD, Works. Vol. ii, p. 866. A version of Lamentations, iii, 41. "Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens."

Even in the meanest sorts of Labour, the whole soul of a man is composed into a kind of real harmony the instant he sets himself to work.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Ch. 15.

What worship, for example, is there not in mere washing!

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Ch. 15. Referring to "Work is prayer."

God walks among the pots and pipkins.

For he [that is true of his tongue, and of his two hands,
And doth his work therewith, and willeth no man ill,
He is a god by the gospel.

WILLIAM LANGELOD, Piers Plowman. PASSUS ii, l. 82.

Work as though work alone thine end could gain;
But pray to God as though all work were vain.
D'ARCY W. THOMPSON, Sales Attic.

Great thoughts hallow any labor. . . . If the ditcher muse the while how he may live uprightly, the ditching spade and turf knife may be engraved on the coat-of-arms of his posterity.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 20 April, 1841.

Ah, little reck's the laborer,
How near his work is holding him to God,
The loving Laborer through space and time.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Exposition, l. 1.

The labour we delight in physics pain.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 53.

The sleep of a labouring man is sweet.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, v, 12.

From toil he wins his spirits light,
From busy day the peaceful night.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode on the Pleasure Arising from Vicissitude, l. 87.

Toiling—rejoicing—sorrowing,
Onward through life he goes;
Each morning sees some task begin,

Each evening sees it close;
Something attempted, something done,
Has earned a night's repose.

LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith.

A little labour, much health.

³ Labor is life! 'Tis the still water faileth;
Idleness ever despaireth, bewaileth;
Keep the watch wound, for the dark rust assaileth.

FRANCES S. OSCOON, To Labor Is to Pray.

Labor is rest—from the sorrows that greet us;
Rest from all petty vexations that meet us;
Rest from sin-promptings that ever entreat us,

Rest from world-snares that lure us to ill.

Work—and pure slumbers shall wait on thy pillow;

Work—thou shalt ride over Care's coming billow;

Lie not down wearied 'neath Woe's weeping willow!

Work with a stout heart and resolute will!

FRANCES S. OSCOON, To Labor Is to Pray.

⁴ The man who by his labour gets
His bread, in independent state,
Who never begs, and seldom eats,
Himself can fix or change his fate.

MATTHEW PRIOR, The Old Gentry.

His brow is wet with honest sweat,
He earns whate'er he can,
And looks the whole world in the face,
For he owes not any man.

LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith.

⁵ No man needs sympathy because he has to work. . . . Far and away the best prize that life offers is the chance to work hard at work worth doing.

- ¹⁴ The glory of a workman, still more of a master-workman, that he does his work well, ought to be his most precious possession; like the "honour of a soldier," dearer to him than life.
CARLYLE, Essays: Shooting Niagara.
- ¹⁵ There is no right to strike against the public safety by anybody, anywhere, anytime.
CALVIN COOLIDGE, Letter to Samuel Gompers, Sept., 1919, referring to the strike of the Boston, Mass., police. It was this sentence which made Coolidge famous and did much to win him the Republican nomination for Vice-President in 1920.
- ¹⁶ So every carpenter and workmaster, that laboureth night and day: and they that cut and grave seals, . . . the smith also, sitting by the anvil, . . . the potter sitting at his work, . . . all these trust to their hands: and every one is wise in his work. Without these cannot a city be inhabited. . . . They shall not be sought for in public council, nor sit high in the congregation, . . . but they will maintain the state of the world, and [all] their desire is in the work of their craft.
APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xxviii, 27-34.
- ¹⁷ The German and Irish millions, like the Negro, have a great deal of guano in their destiny. They are ferried over the Atlantic, and carted over America, to ditch and to drudge, to make corn cheap, and then to lie down prematurely to make a spot of green grass on the prairie.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

The American workman who strikes ten blows with his hammer, while the foreign workman only strikes one, is really vanquishing that foreigner, as if the blows were aimed at and told on his person.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

For as labor cannot produce without the use of land, the denial of the equal right to the use of land is necessarily the denial of the right of labor to its own produce.

HENRY GEORGE, Progress and Poverty, Bk. vii, ch. 1.

I looked up at Nye,
And he gazed upon me;
And he rose with a sigh,
And said, "Can this be?
We are ruined by Chinese cheap labor,"—
And he went for that heathen Chinese.

VIII—Labor: Drivers and Driven

1 We labour soon, we labour late,
To feed the titled knave, man;

And a' the comfort we're to get
Is that ayont the grave, man.

BURNS, The Tree of Liberty. St. 9.

Such hath it been—shall be—beneath the sun
The many still must labour for the one.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 8.

2 I hold that if the Almighty had ever made a set of men that should do all the eating and none of the work, He would have made them with mouths only and no hands; and if He had ever made another class that He intended should do all the work and no eating,
He would have made them with hands only and no mouths.

(MACAULAY, Hist. of England. Vol. i, ch. 5.)

All eyes are opened or opening to the rights of man. The general spread of the lights of science has already opened to every view the palpable truth, that the mass of mankind has not been born with saddles on their backs, nor a favored few booted and spurred, ready to ride them legitimately, by the grace of God.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to R. C. Weightman.

Some are born to be bullied and chidden,
Born to be bridled, born to be ridden,
Born to be harried or whipped or hidden;
Others born booted and spurred to ride.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iii, l. 116.

7 And besides, the problem of land, at its worst, is a by one; distribute the earth as you will, the principal question remains in-extorable—Who is to dig it? Which of us, in brief word, is to do the hard and dirty work for the rest, and for what pay? Who is to do the pleasant and clean work, and for what pay? Who is to do no work, and for what pay?

RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies: King's Treasuries.
Men of England, wherefore plough
For the lords who lay ye low?
Wherefore weave with toil and care
The rich robes your tyrants wear?

LAMB

11 Mary had a little lamb,
Its fleece was white as snow,
And every where that Mary went
The lamb was sure to go. . . .

"What makes the lamb love Mary so?"
The eager children cry.

"Oh, Mary loves the lamb, you know,"
The teacher did reply.

SARAH JOSEPHA HALE, Mary's Lamb. The poem has been claimed for one John Roulstone, of Sterling, Mass., but is undoubtedly Mrs.
Hale's. It was first printed over her initials in the Juvenile Miscellany, Sept., 1830, and was included in her Poems for Our Children, published in Nov., 1830. (See FINLEY, The Lady of Godley's. Ch. 17.)

12 I was like a lamb or an ox that is brought

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xi, 19.

13 Behold the Lamb of God.
New Testament: John, i, 29. (Agnus Dei—Vulgate.)

14 The lamb thy riot dooms to bleed today,
Had he thy reason, would he skip and play?
Pleas'd to the last, he crops the flowery food,
And licks the hand just rais'd to shed his blood.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 81.

15 But the poor man had nothing, save one little ewe lamb, which he had bought and nourished up . . . and was unto him as a

¹⁵ Language, as well as the faculty of speech, was the immediate gift of God.

NOAH WEBSTER, Preface to His Dictionary.

Language is the expression of ideas, and if the people of one country cannot preserve an identity of ideas they cannot retain an identity of language.

NOAH WEBSTER, Preface to His Dictionary.

II—Language: Apothegms

¹⁶ Speak the language of the company that you are in; speak it purely, and unlarded with any other.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Feb., 1748.

What progress do you make in the language

[Italian] in which Charles the Fifth said that he would choose to speak to his mistress? . . . You already possess, and, I hope, take care not to forget, that language [English] which he reserved for his horse. You are absolutely master, too, of that language [French] in which he said he would converse with men.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 25 Jan., 1750.

¹ The language of the street is always strong. What can describe the folly and emptiness of scolding like the word jawing?

EMERSON, Journals, 1840.

His language is painful and free.

BRET HARTE, His Answer.

² We shall never understand one another until we reduce the language to seven words.

DRYDEN, Æneid: Dedication to Translation.

I like to be beholden to the great metropolitan English speech, the sea which receives tributaries from every region under heaven. I should as soon think of swimming across Charles River when I wish to go to Boston, as of reading all my books in originals, when I have them rendered for me in my mother tongue.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books.

There is no more welcome gift to men than a new symbol. . . . Greek mythology called the sea "the tear of Saturn." The return of the soul to God was described as "a flask of water broken into the sea." St. John gave us the Christian figure of "souls washed in the blood of Christ." The aged Michel Angelo indicates his perpetual study as in boyhood,—"I carry my satchel still." Machiavel described the papacy as "a stone inserted in the body of Italy to keep the wound open." To the Parliament debating how to tax America, Burke exclaimed, "Shear the wolf." Our Kentuckian orator said of his dissent from his companion, "I showed him the back of my hand."

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

1 Let foreign nations of their language boast,
What fine variety each tongue affords;
I like our language, as our men and coast;
Who cannot dress it well, want wit, not words.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Sun.

2 The American language differs from English
In that it seeks the top of expression while English seeks its lowly valleys.

WHITTIER, James Russell Lowell.

5 Oh, but the heavenly grammar did I hold
Of that high speech which angels' tongues turn gold! . . .

Or if that language yet with us abode
Which Adam in the garden talked with God!
But our untamed speech descends—poor heirs!

Grimy and rough-cast still from Babel's brick-

JOHN LYLY, Alexander and Campaspe. Act v,
sc. 1.

15 Merry larks are ploughmen's clocks.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 914.

Then my dial goes not true; I took this lark for a bunting.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 5, 5.

It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords and unpleasing
sharps.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, Act iii, 5, 27.

Larlike, Larlike lee!

Wha'll gang up the heaven wi' me?

No the lout that lies in his bed,

No the doolfu' that dreeps his head.

UNKNOWN, The Lark's Song.

II—Lark: Its Loveliness

The music soars within the little lark,
And the lark soars.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh, Bk. iii, l. 155.

Who loves not music, still may pause to hark
Nature's free gladness hymning in the lark.
BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon, Pt. iii, canto ii, l. 13.

Oh, stay, sweet warbling woodlark, stay,
Nor quit for me the trembling spray!

A hapless lover courts thy lay,

Thy soothing, fond complaining.

BURNS, Address to the Woodlark.

'Tis sweet to hear the merry lark,
That bids a blithe good-morrow.
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song.

The merry lark he soars on high,
No worldly thought o'ertakes him.
He sings aloud to the clear blue sky,
And the daylight that awakes him.
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song.

But the Lark is so brimful of gladness and
love,

The green fields below him, the blue sky above,

That he sings, and he sings, and for ever sings
he—

"I love my Love, and my Love loves me!"
S. T. COLERIDGE, Answer to a Child's Question.

And so, his senses gradually wrapt
In a half sleep, he dreams of better worlds,
And dreaming, hears thee still, O singing lark,
That singest like an angel in the clouds.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Fears in Solitude, l. 25.

I said to the sky-poised Lark:
"Hark—hark!

Thy note is more loud and free
Because there lies safe for thee
A little nest on the ground."

DINAM M. M. CRAIK, A Rhyme About Birds.

The lark now leaves his watery nest,
And climbing, shakes his dewy wings.
SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Morning Song.

The pretty Lark, climbing the welkin clear Chants with a cheer, Heer peer, I near my Dear;

Then stooping thence (seeming her fall to rue)

Adieu, she saith, adieu, dear Dear, adieu.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes
Week i, day 5. (Sylvester, tr.)

Over the cloudlet dim,
Over the rainbow's rim,
Musical cherub, soar, singing, away!
Then, when the gloaming comes,
Low in the heather blooms

Sweet will thy welcome and bed of love be!
Emblem of happiness,

Blest is thy dwelling-place—

O, to abide in the desert with thee!

JAMES HOOGE, The Skylark.

The shrill sweet lark.

THOMAS HOOD, Plea of the Midsummer Fairies.

For singing till his heaven fills,
'Tis love of earth that he instils.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Lark Ascending.

To hear the lark begin his flight,
And singing, startle the dull night,
From his watch-tower in the skies,
Till the dappled Dawn doth rise;
Then to come, in spite of sorrow,
And at my window bid good morrow.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 41.

And now the herald lark
Left his ground-nest, high tow'ring to descry
The morn's approach, and greet her with his song.

MILTON, Paradise Regained, Bk. ii, l. 279.

No more the mounting larks, while Daphne
sings,

Shall, list'ning, in mid-air suspend their wings.
POPE, Pastorals: Winter, l. 53.

Oh, far, far, far,
As any spire or star,
Beyond the cloistered wall!
Oh, high, high, high,
A heart-throb in the sky—
Then not at all!

LIZZIE WOODWORTH REESE, The Lark.

The lark whose notes do beat
The vaulty heaven, so high above our heads.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, Act iii, sc. 5,
l. 21.

Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 853.

The lark, that tirra-lyra chants,

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act iv, sc. 3, l. 9.

- ¹ Hail to thee, blithe Spirit!—
Bird thou never wert!—
That from Heaven, or near it,
Pourest thy full heart
In profuse strains of unpremeditated art.
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 1.
- All the earth and air
With thy voice is loud,
As, when Night is bare,
From one lonely cloud,
The moon rains out her beams, and Heaven is overflowed.
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 6.
- Like a glow-worm golden
In a dell of dew,
Scattering unbeholden
Its aerial hue
Among the flowers and grass which screen it from the view.
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 10.
- Teach us, Sprite or Bird,
What sweet thoughts are thine;
I have never heard
Praise of love or wine
That panted forth a flood of rapture so divine.
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 13.
- Better than all measures
Of delightful sound—
Better than all treasures
That in books are found,
Thy skill to poet were, thou scorner of the ground!
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 20.
- Teach me half the gladness
That thy brain must know,
Such harmonious madness
From my lips would flow,
The world should listen then—as I am listening now.
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 21.
- ² Now rings the woodland loud and long,
The distance takes a lovelier hue,
And crown'd in yonder living blue
The lark becomes a sightless song.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxv.
- ³ How the blithe Lark runs up the golden stair
That leans through cloudy gates from Heaven to Earth.
FREDERICK TENNYSON, The Skylark.
- ⁴ Not loftiest bard of mightiest mind
Shall ever chant a note so pure,
Till he can cast the earth behind,
And breathe in heaven secure.
WILLIAM WATSON, The First Skylark of Spring.
- ⁵ But He is risen, a later star of dawn,
Glittering and twinkling near yon rosy cloud;
Bright gem instinct with music, vocal spark;
The happiest bird that sprang out of the Ark!
WORDSWORTH, A Morning Exercise, l. 27.

- Ethereal minstrel! pilgrim of the sky!
Dost thou despise the earth where cares abound?
Or, while the wings aspire, are heart and eye
Both with thy nest upon the dewy ground?
Thy nest which thou canst drop into at will,
Those quivering wings composed, that music
still!
WORDSWORTH, To a Skylark.
- Leave to the nightingale her shady wood;
A privacy of glorious light is thine:
Whence thou dost pour upon the world a flood
Of harmony, with instinct more divine:
Type of the wise who soar, but never roam:
True to the kindred points of Heaven and Home!
WORDSWORTH, To a Skylark.
- The bird that soars on highest wing,
Builds on the ground her lowly nest;
And she that doth most sweetly sing,
Sings in the shade when all things rest:
—In lark and nightingale we see
What honour hath humility.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, Humility.
- The lark, that shuns on lofty boughs to build
Her humble nest, lies silent in the field.
EDMUND WALLER, Of the Queen.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 5,
l. 141.

6
Ah, "all things come to those who wait,"
(I say these words to make me glad),
But something answers soft and sad,
"They come, but often come too late."

MARY MONTGOMERY SINGLETON, *Tout Vient
à Qui Sait Attendre*.

While we send for the napkin the soup gets cold,
While the boquet is trimming the face grows old,
When we've matched our buttons the pattern is sold,

And everything comes too late—too late.

FITZ HUGH LUNLOW, Too Late.

DAVID GARRICK, Epilogue to Colman's English Merchant.

16
You laugh, and you are quite right,

For yours is the dawn of the morning,

For me is the solemn good night.

THEODORE EDWARD HOOR, Impromptu at Fidd-ham. There are other versions of this famous impromptu in allusion to young Stopford, who had laughed heartily at the previous verse, but this is the best. J. R. Planché, who was present, asserts that the last line should be, "And God send you a good night."

BURNS, Tam o' Shanter.
- 6 Having mentioned laughing, I must particularly warn you against it; and I could heartily wish that you may often be seen to smile, but never heard to laugh, while you live. Frequent and loud laughter is the characteristic of folly and ill manners: it is the manner in which the mob express their silly joy at silly things, and they call it being merry. In my mind there is nothing so illiberal and so ill-bred as audible laughter.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.
How low and unbecoming a thing laughter is,
not to mention the disagreeable noise that it makes, and the shocking distortion of the face that it occasions. . . . I am neither of a melancholy nor a cynical disposition, and am as willing and as apt to be pleased as anybody; but I am sure that, since I have had the full use of my reason, nobody has ever heard me laugh.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.
The vulgar often laugh, but never smile; whereas well-bred people often smile, but seldom laugh.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 4.

I struggle and struggle, and try to buffet down my cruel reflections as they rise; and when I cannot, I am forced to try to make myself laugh that I may not cry; for one or other I must do;
and is it not philosophy carried to the highest pitch for a man to conquer such tumults of soul as I am sometimes agitated by, and in the ¹⁵ Take it, girl! And fear no after,

Take your fill of all this laughter,
Laugh or not, the tears will fall,
Take the laughter first of all.
RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Song.

¹⁶ Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful; and the end of mirth is heaviness.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 13. Extrema gaudii luctus occupat.—Vulgate.

¹⁷ Better to write of laughter than of tears,
Because to laugh is proper to the man,
(Mieux est de ris que de larmes écrire, Pour ce que rire est le propre de l'homme.)
RABELAIS, Works: To the Reader.

To make the weeper laugh, the laugher weep,
He had the dialect and different skill.

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 124.

1 He who laughs on Friday will weep on Sunday.
(Tel qui rit vendredi, dimanche pleurera.)

2 No one is more profoundly sad than he who laughs too much.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus.

3 I have asked to be left a few tears
And some laughter.

CARL SANDBURG, Bundles.

4 When laughter is humble, when it is not based on self-esteem, it is wiser than tears. . . . There is no cure for birth and death save to enjoy the interval. The dark background which death supplies brings out the tender colours of life in all their purity.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Soliloquies in England.

5 All things are cause for either laughter or weeping. (Aut ridenda omnia aut fienda sunt.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 10.

6 I am not merry; but I do beguile
The thing I am by seeming otherwise.

LAW

I—Law: Definitions

Law is a form of order, and good law must necessarily mean good order.

ARISTOTLE, Politica. Bk. vii, ch. 4, sec. 5.

There are two, and only two, foundations of law, . . . equity and utility.

EDMUND BURKE, Tracts on the Popery Laws. Pt. i, ch. 3.

Laws, like houses, lean on one another.

EDMUND BURKE, Tracts on the Popery Laws. Pt. i, ch. 3.

Law is whatever is boldly asserted and plausibly maintained.

AARON BURR. (PARTON, Life and Times of Aaron Burr. Vol. i, p. 149.)

The absolute justice of the State, enlightened by the perfect reason of the State: that is law.

RUFUS CHOATE, Conservative Force of the American Bar.

The laws place the safety of all before the safety of individuals. (Leges omnium salutem singulorum saluti anteponunt.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iii, ch. 19, sec. 64.

The safety of the people shall be the highest law. (Salus populi suprema lex esto.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, sec. 3. Derived by tradition from the Twelve Tables of Roman law.

Judges ought above all to remember the Conclusion of the Roman Twelve Tables: Salus populi suprema lex; and to know that laws, except they be in order to that end, are but things captious, and oracles not well inspired.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Judicature.

Law is founded not on theory but upon nature. (Neque opinione sed natura constitutum esse jus.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. i, ch. 10, sec. 28.

Law is nothing but a correct principle drawn from the inspiration of the gods, commanding what is honest, and forbidding the contrary.

CICERO, Philippicæ. No. xi, sec. 12.

Reason is the life of the law; nay, the common law itself is nothing but reason. . . .

The law, which is perfection of reason.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes. Pt. i.

How long soever it hath continued, if it be against reason, it is of no force in law.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes. Pt. i.

Law governs man and reason the law.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3149.

Let us consider the reason of the case. For nothing is law that is not reason.

SIR JOHN POWELL, Coggs vs. Bernard (2 Ld. Raym. Rep. p. 911.)

The law is for the protection of the weak more than the strong.

SIR WILLIAM ERLE, Reg. v. Woolley. (4 Cox, C.C. 196)

The law groweth of sin, and doth punish it.

JOHN FLOREN, First Fruits. Fo. 32. (1578)

The law's made to take care of raskills.

GEORGE ELIOT, Mill on the Floss. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

The law, in its majestic equality, forbids the rich as well as the poor to sleep under bridges, to beg in the streets, and to steal bread.

ANATOLE FRANCE. (Cournots, Modern Plutarch, p. 27.)

The Law is what it is—a majestic edifice, sheltering all of us, each stone of which rests on another.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, Justice. Act ii. It is the Judge speaking.

Law, licensed breaking of the peace.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 286.

Law, grown a forest, where perplex

The mazes, and the brambles vex.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 292.

Laws spring from the instinct of self-preservation.

R. G. INGERBOLL, Some Mistakes of Moses.

The law is the last result of human wisdom acting upon human experience for the benefit of the public.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies, l. 223.

Laws are not made for particular cases, but for men in general.

SAKVEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

1 No law can possibly meet the convenience of every one: we must be satisfied if it be beneficial on the whole and to the majority.
LIVY, History. Bk. xxiv, sec. 3.

The law is blind, and speaks in general terms; She cannot pity where occasion serves.

THOMAS MAY, The Heir. Act iv. (1620)

2 The Habeas Corpus Act . . . the most stringent curb that ever legislation imposed on tyranny.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 6.

3 The man who does no wrong needs no law. ('Ο μὴδὲν ἀδικῶν οὐδεὶς δεῖται νόμου.)

MEANDER, Fragments. No. 845.

All laws are useless, for good men do not need them and bad men are made no better by them.

DEMONAX. (PLUTARCH, Apothegms.)

When men are pure, laws are useless; when men are corrupt, laws are broken.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming.

Just laws are no restraint upon the freedom of the good, for the good man desires nothing which a just law will interfere with.

J. A. FAOUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Reciprocal Duties of State and Subject.

It is only rogues who feel the restraint of law.

J. C. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Perfect Liberty.

The good needs fear no law, It is his safety and the bad man's awe.

MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act v, sc. 1.

4 Virtue alone is not sufficient for the exercise of government; laws alone carry themselves into practice.

MENCIVS, Works. Bk. iv, pt. 1, ch. 1, sec. 3.

5 Law can discover sin, but not remove, Save by those shadowy expiations weak.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 290.

So many laws argue so many sins.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 283.

6 Laws were made that the stronger might not in all things have his way. (Inde datæ leges, ne firmior omnia posset.)

OVIN, Fæsti. Bk. iii, l. 279.

7 The laws obey custom. (Leges mori serviunt.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 36.

With customs we live well, but laws undo us.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

8 A law should be a voice, as it were, sent down from heaven; it should command, not discuss. (Velut emissæ divinitus vox sit; jubeat, non disputet.)

POSIDONIUS. (SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epist. xciv, sec. 38.)

A law should be brief in order that the unlearned may grasp it more easily. (Legem enim brevem esse oportet, quo facilius ab imperitis teneatur.)

POSIDONIUS. (SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epist. xciv, sec. 38.)

9 Law, in a free country, is, or ought to be, the determination of the majority of those who have property in land.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

10 Law is the crystallization of the habit and thought of society.

WOODROW WILSON, Lecture, Princeton, 1893.

II—Law: Apothegms

11 The law is open.

New Testament: Acts, xix, 38.

12 The devil hath eleven points of the law against you, that is, possession.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 97. (1630)

Possession is nine points of the law.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy War. Bk. v, ch. 29.

Both these proverbs were in frequent use.

Possession is eleven points of the law and there are but twelve.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

That possession was the strongest tenure of the law.

PILPAX, Fables: The Cat and the Two Birds.

Eight points of the law: 1. A good cause; 2. A good purse; 3. An honest and skilful attorney; 4. Good evidence; 5. Able counsel; 6. An upright judge; 7. An intelligent jury; 8. Good luck.

Attributed to GEORGE AUGUSTUS SELWYN, when a candidate for Chamberlain of the City of London, c. 1750.

13 Law Is a Bottomless Pit.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, Title of Pamphlet, 1712.

He that goes to law (as the proverb is) holds a wolf by the ears.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

The worst of law is that one suit breeds twenty.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Lawsuits consume time, and money, and rest and friends.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Whose loves law dies either mad or poor.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Phoenix.

14 There is no magic in parchment or in wax.

WILLIAM HENRY ASHURST, Master v. Miller, 1763. (4 T. R. 320.)

The mysterious virtue of wax and parchment.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment; that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 84.

¹ Nowadays the law is ended as a man is friended.

HENRY BRINKLELOW, Complaint of Roderick Morri. Ch. 11. (c. 1542)

Matters be ended as they be friended.

THOMAS STANKE, England in the Reign of Henry VIII. Bk. I, ch. 3.

A friend in court is worth a penny in a man's purse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Bon fait avoir ami en cour,

Car le procès en est plus court.

A French variant of the proverb.

See also under COURT.

² Law and arbitrary power are in eternal enmity.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings, 16 Feb., 1788.

³ That which is a law to-day is none to-morrow.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

The law is not the same at morn'g and at night.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum.

New lords, new laws.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

And he that gives us in these days

New Lords may give us new laws.

GEORGE WITTEB, Contented Men's Morrice.

⁴ Arms and laws do not flourish together. (Τὸν αὐτὸν ἐκὼν καὶ νόμον καὶ εὖρος εἶναι.)

JULIUS CÆSAR. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Julius Cæsar. Ch. 35, sec. 3.)

The law speaks too softly to be heard amid the din of arms. (Τὸν νόμον οὐκ αὐτὸν τῶν ἐκὼν ψόφος οὐ κατακούσκειν.)

GAIUS MARIUS. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Gaius Marius. Ch. 28, sec. 2.)

Laws are dumb in the midst of arms. (Silent enim leges inter arma.)

CICERO, Pro Milone. Ch. 4, sec. 11.

The clatter of arms drowns the voice of the law.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

⁵ Agree, for the law is costly.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 316. (1605)

Agree, agree, says the old saw, the law is costly.

ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables of Æsop. (1692)

Come, agree, the law's costly.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

⁶ Who stood to gain? (Cui bono fuerit?)

LUCIUS CASSIUS LONGINUS, the judge, who used it as a maxim in instructing a jury to seek for the motive of a crime. (CICERO, Pro Milone. Ch. xii, sec. 32.)

For whose good? (Cui bono?)

CICERO, quoting from Lucius Cassius in the Second Philippic. "These two words," says

Forryth (Life), "have perhaps been oftener misapplied than any in the Latin language. They are constantly translated or used in the sense of, 'What good is it?' 'To what end does it serve?' Their real meaning is, 'Who gains by it?' 'To whom is it an advantage?'" Forryth goes on to explain that in a trial for murder Lucius Cassius instructed the jury to inquire who had a motive for the crime, who would gain by the death, in other words, "cui bono fuerit?"

There was an ancient Roman lawyer, of great fame in the history of Roman jurisprudence, whom they called Cui Bono, from his having first introduced into judicial proceedings the argument, "What end or object could the party have had in the act with which he is accused."

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings.

⁷ Laws go as kings like. (Allá van leyes do quieren Reyes.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. I, ch. 45.

She made what pleased her lawful. (Che libito fe' licito in sua legge.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 56. From the Latin, "Si libet, licet."

⁸ Who to himself is law, no law doth need, Offends no law, and is a king indeed.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act II, sc. 1.

⁹ After an existence of nearly twenty years of almost innocuous desuetude these laws are brought forth.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Message, 1 March, 1886.

I used those words and thought they would please the Western taxpayers, who are fond of such things.

GROVER CLEVELAND, referring to "innocuous desuetude." (Interview, New York Herald, 9 June, 1886.)

The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act II, sc. 2, l. 90.

¹² All things by Law. (Πάντα νόμῳ.)

DEMOCRITUS. (MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, sec. 31.)

¹³ A delusion, a mockery, and a snare.

SIR THOMAS DENHAM, an English judge, in his judgment in O'Connell vs. the Queen (11 Clarke and Finnally, 351): "If it is possible that such a practice as that which has taken place in the present instance should be allowed to pass without a remedy, trial by

- jury itself, instead of being a security to persons who are accused, will be a delusion, a mockery, and a snare." (4 Sept., 1894)

SAMUEL ROGERS, On a Year. Rogers is referring to the law of gravitation.

¹⁸ On a divine law divination rests.

SCHILLER, Wallenstein. Act i, sc. 9.

¹⁹ In the corrupted currents of this world

Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice,

And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself

Buys out the law: but 'tis not so above;

There is no shuffling, there the action lies

In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd,

Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,

To give in evidence.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 57.

²⁰ God is law, say the wise; O Soul, and let us rejoice,

For if He thunder by law the thunder is yet
His voice.

TENNYSON, The Higher Pantheism. St. 7.

¹ Foul shame and scorn be on ye all
Who turn the good to evil,
And steal the Bible from the Lord,
To give it to the Devil!

Than garbled text or parchment law
I own a statute higher;
And God is true, though every book
And every man's a liar!

WHITTIER, A Sabbath Scene. St. 18.

The Law of Nations

² The law of human society. (Jus humanæ societatis.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 7, sec. 21.

³ Natural law; the law of mankind. (Jus hominum.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 26, sec. 64.

⁴ The bond of union is closer between those who belong to the same nation, and closer still between those who are citizens of the same state. It is for this reason that our forefathers chose to understand one thing by the law of nations (jus gentium), and another by the civil or common law (jus civile).

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 17, sec. 69.

In every matter the consensus of opinion among all nations is to be regarded as the law of nature. (Omni autem in re consensio omnium gentium lex naturæ putanda est.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 30.

That which natural reason has established amongst all men is called the law of nations. (Quod naturalis ratio inter omnes homines constituit . . . vocatur jus gentium.)

GAJUS, Institutione Juris Civilis. Bk. i, sec. 1.

Against the law of nature, law of nations.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 889.

Miscellaneous Laws

⁵ I oft have heard of Lydford Law,
How in the morn they hang and draw,
And sit in judgement after.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Lydford Journey. St. 1. (1644)

First hang and draw,
Then hear the cause by Lidford law.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England, i. 399. (1662)

I have had Halifax law—to be condemned first and inquired upon afterwards.

LEICESTER. (MOTLEY, United Netherlands. Vol. i, p. 444.)

Are you going to hang him anyhow—and try him
afterwards?

MARK TWAIN, Innocents at Home. Ch. 5.

⁶ O king, establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not.

Old Testament: Daniel, vi, 8.

The thing is true, according to the law of Medes and Persians, which altereth not.

Old Testament: Daniel, vi, 12.

Let it be written among the laws of the Persians and the Medes, that it be not altered.

Old Testament: Esther, i. 19.

⁷ Draco made his laws not with ink, but with blood.

DEMADES. Draco had made the least theft punishable with death. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon.) Hence "Draconian," in the sense of severe.

⁸ Connecticut in her blue-laws, laying it down as a principle, that the laws of God should be the law of the land.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams,
24 Jan., 1814.

⁹ There is a written and an unwritten law.
Written law is that under which we live in different cities, but that which has arisen from custom is called unwritten law. (Νόμον διαπίπτειν δύο, ὃ μὲν γὰρ αὐτῶν γερραμένοις, ὃ δὲ ἄγραφοις.)

PLATO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Sec. 86.)

Dementia Americana; the unwritten law.

DELPHIN MICHAEL DELMAS. At the trial of Harry Thaw for the murder of Stanford
White, in 1907.

Brain-storm, the paranoia of the millionaire.

WILLIAM TRAVERS JEROME. The district attorney who prosecuted Thaw.

The silver-tongued spell-binder of the Pacific Coast.

Sobriquet of Delphin Michael Delmas.

¹⁰ First Clown: Argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.
Second Clown: But is this law?

First Clown: Ay, marry is't; crowner's quest
law.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 21.

¹¹ A sumptuary law. (Lex sumptuaria.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 52.

¹² For this is the law of the feudal days,
The law for one and all,

That whoso lives on the baron's land,
May feed as he will at the baron's hand,
But whoso feeds at the baron's hand,

Must answer the baron's call.

THOMAS F. WOODLOCK, The Law.

IV—Law: The Net of Law

¹³ Laws are like spiders' webs; they hold the weak and delicate who are caught in their meshes, but are torn in pieces by the rich and powerful.

ANACHARSIS, to Solon, when the latter was compiling his laws. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Ch. 5, sec. 2.)

Men keep their engagements when it is to the advantage of both parties not to break them.

SOLON, Answering Anacharsis. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon.) See also No. 7, below.

¹ Laws grind the poor, and rich men rule the law.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 386.

² The verdict acquits the raven, but condemns the dove. (Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 63.

³ In vain thy reason finer webs will draw,
Entangle justice in her net of law,
And right, too rigid, harden into wrong,
Still for the strong too weak, the weak too strong.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 191.

⁴ The net of law is spread so wide,
No sinner from its sweep may hide.
Its meshes are so fine and strong,
They take in every child of wrong.
O wondrous web of mystery!
Big fish alone escape from thee!

JAMES JEFFREY ROCHE, The Net of Law.

⁵ Petty sacrilege is punished, but sacrilege on a grand scale is honored by a triumphal procession. (Nam sacrilegia minuta puniuntur, magna in triumphis feruntur.)

SENeca, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxvii, sec. 24.

All, look up with reverential awe,
At crimes that 'scape, or triumph o'er the law.

POPE, Epilogue to Satires. Dial. i, l. 167.

⁶ Laws are generally found to be nets of such a texture, as the little creep through, the great break through, and the middle-sized are alone entangled in.

WILLIAM SHILSTONE, On Politics.

⁷ Laws are spiders' webs, which stand firm when any light and yielding object falls upon them, while a larger thing breaks through them and escapes.

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Sec. 14.)

One of the Seven [Wise Men of Greece] was wont to say: "That laws were like cobwebs; where the small flies were caught, and the great brake through."

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 181.

Should I sigh, because I see
Laws like spider-webs to be?
Lesser flies are quickly taken

While the great break out again.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, Care's Cure.

Laws like to cobwebs, catch small flies,
Great ones break them before your eyes.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

For the most part, laws are but like spiders' webs, taking the small gnats, or perhaps sometimes the fat flesh flies, but hornets that have sharp stings and greater strength, break through them.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk. 32.

Laws are like cobwebs, which may catch small flies, but let wasps and hornets break through.

SWIFT, Essay on the Facilities of the Mind.

⁸ The net's not spread to catch the hawk or kite
Who do us wrong, but for the innocent birds
Who do us none at all.

(Quia non rete accipitri tennitur neque milvo, Qui male faciunt nobis: illis qui nihil faciunt tennitur.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 330. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

⁹ The law doth punish man or woman
That steals the goose from off the common,

But lets the greater felon loose,
That steals the common from the goose.

UNKNOWN. An 18th century epigram. (See Notes and Queries. Ser. vii, 6, 469; 7, 98. Ser. viii, 10, 273.) There are various versions, all prompted by the Enclosure Acts. The version given above was written when Sir Charles Pratt, First Earl of Camden, enclosed a common strip of land in front of Camden House, 7 Oct., 1764.

¹⁰ There is no law without a loophole for him who can find it. (Es giebt kein Gesetz was hat nicht ein Loch, wer's finden kann.)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.

V—Law: Its Tyranny

¹¹ Law is king of all.

HENRY ALFORD, School of the Heart. Lesson 6.

Law is King. (Lex Rex.)

SAMUEL RUTHERFORD. Title of book published 1644.

¹² There is no worse torture than the torture of laws.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Judicature.

It is a hard thing to torture the laws so that they torture men.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. viii, aph. 13.

¹³ We, like the eagles, were born to be free. Yet we are obliged, in order to live at all, to make a cage of laws for ourselves and to stand on the perch.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Introduction.

AB soon as laws are necessary for men, men are no longer fit for freedom.

PYTHAGORAS.

1
People crushed by law have no hopes but from power. If laws are their enemies, they will be enemies to laws; and those who have much to hope and nothing to lose will always be dangerous.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter, to the Hon. C. J. Fox, 8 Oct., 1777.

Bad laws are the worst sort of tyranny.
EDMUND BURKE, Speech, Bristol.

2
Extreme law, extreme injustice. (Summum jus, summa injuria.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, sec. 10. See under JUSTICE AND INJUSTICE.

3
Our sense of private dignity can survive the most oppressive man-despot, but the despotism of law corrodes it.

NORMAN DOUGLAS, Good-bye to Western Culture.

4
Shall free-born men, in humble awe,
Submit to servile shame;
Who from consent and custom draw
The same right to be ruled by law,
Which kings pretend to reign?
DRYDEN, On the Young Statesman.

5
All rights and laws are still transmitted,
like an eternal sickness to the race.
(Es erben sich Gesetz und Rechte Wie eine ew'ge Krankheit fort.)
GOETHE, Faust. Pt. I, sc. 4, I. 449.

6
wearisome condition of humanity!
Born under one law, to another bound.
FULKE GREVILLE, Mustapha. Act v, sc. 4.

Law is the tyrant of mankind, and often compels us to do many things which are against nature.

HIPPIAS. (PLATO, Protagoras. Sec. 337.)

The law is laid down to you. (Dicta tibi est lex?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. II, epis. 2, I. 18.

9
Then too [in law] there are a thousand causes of disgust, a thousand delays to be endured. (Tunc quoque mille ferenda Taedia, mille morse.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xvi, I. 43.

10
The law is so lordly and loth to maken end.
LANOLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus iv, l. 199.

We have strict statutes and most biting laws.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act I, sc. 3, I. 19.

12
God's blood! is law for man's sake made, or man

For law's sake only, to be held in bonds?
SWINBURNE, Mary Stuart, Act I, sc. I.

VI—Law: Letter and Spirit

13
No man has ever yet been hanged for breaking the spirit of a law.

GROVER CLEVELAND. (RHODES, History of the United States, viii, 403; HIBBEN, Peerless Leader, p. ISS.)

14
The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.
New Testament: II Corinthians, iii, 6. (Litera enim occidit, Spiritus autem vivificat.)
—Vulgate.)

Legality kills us. (La legality nous tue.)
VLENNET, tpitres.

15
We are lost by what is lawful. (Perimus Ileit.)

SIR MATTHEW HALE, quoted from St. Gregory, Morals. Bk. v, homily 35, meaning, "We are demoralised by indulgence in things which are not contrary to law."

16
To the law and to the testimony.
Old Testament: Isaiah, viii, 20.

17
Exact laws, like all the other ultimates and absolutes, are as fabulous as the crock of gold at the rainbow's end.

G. N. LEWIS, The Anatomy of Science, p. 154.

18
But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.

New Testament: Romans, vii, 6.

19
Let him have all the rigour of the law.
SHAKESPEARE, // Henry VI. Act I, sc. 3, I. 199.
He . . . follows close the rigour of the statute,
To make him an example.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act I, sc. 4, I. 66.

Is it so nominated in the bond?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. I, l. 259.

20
The bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act I, sc. 3, I. 67.

21
In bondage to the letter still,
We give it power to cramp and kill,—
To tax God's fulness with a scheme
Narrower than Peter's house-top dream,
His wisdom and his love with plans
Poor and inadequate as man's.

WHITTIER, Miriam, l. 97.

22
An argument derived from authority is of the greatest force in law. (Argumentum ab auctoritate fortissimum est in lege.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, On Littleton, 144.

1 The mere repetition of the Canilena of the lawyers cannot make it law.

SIR THOMAS DENMAN, O'ConneU v. The Queen.

2 The acts of today may become the precedents of tomorrow.

FARRER HERSCHELL, Lord Chancellor, Speech, 23 May, 1878.

3 All the sentences of precedent judges that have ever been cannot altogether make a law contrary to natural equity.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. ii, ch. 26.

4 One precedent creates another. They soon accumulate and become law.

JUNIUS, Letters: Dedication.

5 A precedent embalms a principle.

WILLIAM SCOTT, BARON STOWELL, Opinion, while Advocate-General, 1788. (WILLIAM SCOTT, Lord StoweU.) BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 22 Feb., 1848; Endymion. Ch. 9.

6 It must not be; there is no power in Venice Can alter a decree established:

'Twill be recorded for a precedent,
And many an error by the same example
Will rush into the state.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 218.

7 Every law which originated in ignorance and malice, and gratifies the passions from which it sprang, we call the wisdom of our ancestors.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 5.

8 Mastering the lawless science of our law,
That codeless myriad of precedent,
That wilderness of single instances,
Through which a few, by wit or fortune led,
May beat a pathway out to wealth and fame.

TENNYSON, Aylmer's Field, l. 436.

VIII—Law: Obedience to Law

9 Where there are laws, he who has not broken them need not tremble. (Ove son leggi, Tremar non dee chi leggi non infranse.)

ALFIERI, Virginia. Sc. 2.

Who breaks no law is subject to no king.

CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act iv, sc. 1.

Fear God, and offend not the Prince nor his laws,

And keep thyself out of the magistrate's claws.
THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry.

10

Laws are not masters but servants, and he rules them who obeys them.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit: Political.

11

Law will never be strong or respected unless it has the sentiment of the people behind it. If the people of a State make bad laws, they will suffer for it. They will be the first to suffer. Let them suffer. Suffering, and nothing else, will implant that sentiment of responsibility which is the first step to reform.

JAMES BRYCE, American Commonwealth. Vol. i, p. 352.

I know no method to secure the repeal of bad or obnoxious laws so effective as their stringent execution.

U. S. GRANT, Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1869.

12

He who holds no laws in awe,

He must perish by the law.

BYRON, A Very Mournful Ballad on the Siege and Conquest of Athama. St. 12.

13

Let a man keep the law,—any law,—and his way will be strewn with satisfactions.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

14

Good men must not obey the laws too well.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

No law can be sacred to me but that of my nature. Good and bad are but names very readily transferable to that or this; the only right is what is after my own constitution; the only wrong what is against it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

The laws of God, the laws of man,

He may keep that will and can;

Not I: let God and man decree

Laws for themselves and not for me.

A. E. HOUSMAN, Laws.

17

A strict observance of the written laws is doubtless one of the high virtues of a good citizen, but it is not the highest. The laws of necessity, of self-preservation, of saving our country when in clanger, are of higher obligation.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol xii, p. 416.

18

Without a notion of a law-maker, it is impossible to have a notion of a law, and an obligation to observe it.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding. £lt. i, cfc iv, tec 8.

¹ A law observed is merely law; broken, it is law and executioner

MENANDER, Fragmenta. No. 700.

² It is the rule of rules and the general law of laws that everyone should observe that of the place where he is. (C'est la règle des règles, et générale loi des loix, que chacun observe celle du lieu où il est.)

By breaking of windows, or breaking of laws.

HANNAH MORE, Address to the Meeting in Spa Fields.

⁵ The parish makes the Constable, and when the Constable is made he governs the Parish.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: People.

⁶ Laws do not persuade just because they threaten. (Ob hoc illæ non persuadent, quia minantur.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, 37.

⁷ He hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 267.

Faith, I have been a truant in the law,
And never yet could frame my will to it;
And therefore frame the law unto my will.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 7.

⁸ We must not make a scarecrow of the law,
Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,
And let it keep one shape, till custom make it
Their perch and not their terror.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 1.

⁹ The brain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps o'er a cold decree.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 2, l. 19.

¹⁰ Laws were made to be broken.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 24.

To the States or any one of them, or any city of the States, Resist much, obey little,
Once unquestioning obedience, once fully enslaved,

Once fully enslaved, no nation, state, city of this earth, ever afterward resumes its liberty.

WALT WHITMAN, To the States.

IX--Law: Law-makers and Law-breakers

¹¹ What is a law, if those who make it
Become the forwardest to break it?

JAMES BEATTIE, The Wolf and the Shepherds,
l. 71.

It becometh a law-maker not to be a law-breaker.

UNKNOWN, Politeurphua, 95. (1669)

I impeach Warren Hastings of high crimes and misdemeanours. I impeach him in the name of the Commons House of Parliament, whose trust he has betrayed. I impeach him in the name of the English nation, whose ancient honor he has sullied. I impeach him in the name of the people of India, whose rights he has trodden underfoot, and whose country he has turned into a desert. Lastly, in the name of human nature itself, in the name of both sexes, in the name of every age, in the name of every rank, I impeach the common enemy and oppressor of all.

EDMUND BURKE, Trial of Warren Hastings, conclusion of speech, as condensed by Macaulay.

¹² No power should be above the laws. (Nulla

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

⁷ "Whatever is, is not," is the maxim of the anarchist, as often as anything comes across him in the shape of a law which he happens not to like.

RICHARD BENTLEY, Declaration of Rights.

⁸ It was the boast of Augustus . . . that he found Rome of brick and left it of marble; . . . but how much nobler will be the sovereign's boast when he shall have it to say that he found law dear, and left it cheap; found it a sealed book, left it a living letter; found it the patrimony of the rich, left it the inheritance of the poor; found it the two-edged sword of craft and oppression, left it the staff of honesty and the shield of innocence!

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech on Law Reform, House of Commons, Feb., 1828.

⁹ The law of England is the greatest grievance of the nation, very expensive and dilatory.

BISHOP GILBERT BURNET, History of His Own Times. (1723)

The law can take a purse in open court, ~~Which~~ it condemns a less delinquent for &c. . .

Old laws have not been suffer'd to be pointed, To leave the sense at large the more disjointed, And furnish lawyers, with the greater ease, To turn and wind them any way they please.

³ Laws are always useful to those who possess and vexatious to those who have nothing. (Les lois sont toujours utiles à ceux qui possèdent, et nuisibles à ceux qui n'ont rien.)

ROUSSEAU, Contrat Social. Bk. I, ch. 9, note.

⁴ "That sounds like nonsense, my dear."
"Maybe so, my dear; but it may be very good law for all that."

SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 9.

⁵ Equity, in law, is the same that the spirit is in religion: what everyone pleases to make it.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Equity.

Equity is a roughish thing: for law we have a measure, know what to trust to; equity is according to the conscience of him that is chancellor, and as that is larger or narrower, so is equity. 'Tis all one as if they should make the standard for the measure we call a foot, a chancellor's foot; what an uncertain measure would this be! One chancellor has a long foot, another a short foot, a third an indifferent foot. 'Tis the same thing in the chancellor's conscience.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Equity.

Law and equity are two things which God hath joined, but which man hath put asunder.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. I, No. 381.

⁶ A state with defective laws will have defective morals. (Itaque malis moribus uti videbis civitates usas malis legibus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, 39.

The more corrupt the state, the more numerous the laws. (Corruptissima republica, plurimæ leges.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. III, sec. 27.

⁷ Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch;

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth;

Between two blades, which bears the better temper;

Between two horses, which doth bear him best;

Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye,—

I have perhaps some shallow spirit of judgement;

But in these nice sharp quilllets of the law,

Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry VI. Act. II, sc. 4, l. 11.

⁸ When law can do no right,
Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act III, sc. 1, l. 185.

⁹ No laws, however stringent, can make the idle industrious, the thriftless provident, or the drunken sober.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 1.

¹⁰ Who ever knew an honest brute,
At law his neighbour prosecute?

SWIFT, The Logicians Refuted.

O great and sane and simple race of brutes
That own no lust because they have no law.

TENNYSON, Pelleas and Etarre, l. 471.

¹¹ The best laws, the noblest examples, are produced for the benefit of the good from the crimes of other men. (Leges egregias, exempla honesta, apud bonos ex delictis aliorum gigni.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 20.

¹² The law is good, if a man use it lawfully.

NEW TESTAMENT: 1 Timothy, I, 8.

¹³ Where is there any book of the law so clear to each man as that written in his heart?

LEO TOLSTOY, The Chinese Pilot.

¹⁴ When a people lose respect for one bad law, it is but a short step before they include the good laws with the bad and are shortly in rebellion against all law.

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, Drifting Sands of Party Politics, p. 42.

¹⁵ He it was that first gave to the law the air of a science. He found it a skeleton, and clothed it with life, colour, and complexion; he embraced the cold statue, and by his touch it grew into youth, health and beauty.

BARRY YELVERTON, LORD AVONMORE, On Blackstone.

SILAS BRYAN. To lawyers pleading their cases before him on the Circuit Bench. (HISSEY, The Peerless Leader, p. 6.)

¹⁸ But what his common sense came short,
He eked out wth law, man.

BURNS, Extempore in the Court of Session.

¹ When you have no basis for an argument, abuse the plaintiff. (In hominem dicendum est igitur, quum oratio argumentationem non habet.)

CICERO, Pro Flacco. Sec. 10.

When facts were weak, his native cheek
Brought him serenely through.

C. H. SPURGEON. Quoted as being said of an "eminent lawyer."

Bluster, sputter, question, cavil; but be sure your argument be intricate enough to confound the court.

WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer. Act III, sc. 1.

² If there were no bad people, there would be no good lawyers.

DICKENS, The Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 36.

³ Battledore and shuttlecock's a wery good game, when you a'n't the shuttlecock and two lawyers' battledores, in which case it gets too excitin' to be pleasant.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20.

⁴ Oh Sammy, Sammy, vy worn't there a al-leybi?

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

⁵ This house, where once a lawyer dwelt,
Is now a smith's. Alas!

How rapidly the iron age
Succeeds the age of brass!

WILLIAM ESKINE, Epigram.

⁶ Of three things the devil makes his mess:
Of lawyers' tongues, of scriveners' fingers,
you the third may guess.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 179. (1591)

⁷ Necessity has no law; I know some attorneys of the same.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734. See also under NECESSITY.

⁸ A good lawyer, a bad neighbor.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1737.

Franklin was quoting the French maxim,
"Bon avocat, mauvais voisin."

⁹ God works wonders now and then;

Behold! a lawyer, an honest man.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

"An Honest Lawyer"—book just out—

What can the author have to say?

Reprint perhaps of ancient tome—

A work of fiction all way.

GRACE HEMARD, Books Received.

¹⁰ Commonly physicians, like beer, are best when they are old; and lawyers, like bread, when they are young and new.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. II, ch. 1.

¹¹ The charge is prepar'd, the lawyers are met,
The judges all ranged,—a terrible show!

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act III, sc. 11.

¹² And many a burglar I've restored
To his friends and his relations.

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury.

And whether you're an honest man or whether you're a thief

Depends on whose solicitor has given me my brief.

W. S. GILBERT, Utopia, Limited. Act I.

¹³ If the laws could speak for themselves, they would complain of the lawyers in the first place.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, 224.

¹⁴ When lawyers take what they would give
And doctors give what they would take.

O. W. HOLMES, Later-Day Warnings.

¹⁵ Clergymen can marry you, but if you find you have made a mistake, in order to get unmarried, you have to hire a lawyer.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xxv, 158.

¹⁶ I would be loath to speak ill of any person who I do not know deserves it, but I am afraid he is an attorney.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (Mrs. PROZEL, Johnsoniana.)

¹⁷ Law, Logic, and Switzers may be hired to fight for anybody.

THOMAS NASH, Christ's Tears.

¹⁸ The good have no need of an advocate. (Mē berobai Bondeles.)

¹⁹ Fair and softly, as lawyers go to heaven.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

²⁰ A lawyer without history or literature is a mechanic, a mere working mason; if he possesses some knowledge of these, he may venture to call himself an architect.

SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 37.

²¹ Why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddities now, his quilletts, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 107.

The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act IV, sc. 2, l. 83.

²³ That litigious she pettifogger.

II—Lawyers: Their Fees

²
With books and money plac'd, for show,
Like nest-eggs, to make clients lay,
And for his false opinion pay.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. III, canto III, l. 624.

³
Asebia: We never valued right and wrong
But as they serve our cause.

Zelota: Our business was to please the throng
And court their wild applause.

Asebia: For this we brib'd the lawyer's tongue
And then destroy'd the laws.

DRYDEN, Albion and Anbanias. Act III, sc. 1.

⁴
My learned profession I'll never disgrace,
By taking a fee with a grin on my face,
When I haven't been there to attend to the case.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act I.

⁵
A man may as well open an oyster without a knife, as a lawyer's mouth without a fee.
BARTEN HOLYDAY, Technogamia, II, 5.

Once (says an author, where I need not say)
Two travellers found an Oyster in their way:
Both fierce, both hungry, the dispute grew strong,
While, scale in hand, Dame Justice pass'd along.
Before her each with clamour pleads the laws,
Explain'd the matter, and would win the cause.
Dame Justice, weighing long the doubtful right,
Takes, opens, swallows it before their sight.
The cause of strife remov'd so rarely well,
"There take (says Justice), take ye each a shell.

We thrive at Westminster on fools like you;
'Twas a fat Oyster—Live in peace—Adieu."
POPE, Verbalism from Boileau.

⁶
So wise, so grave, of so perplex'd a tongue,
And loud withal, that would not wag, nor scarce

Lie still without a fee.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act I, sc. 1.

⁷
What is the price of your voice? (Quod vocis pretium?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 119. Referring to a lawyer's fee.

⁸
They put off hearings wilfully,
To finger the refreshing fee.

BERNARD MANDEVILLE, Fable of the Bees.

⁹
There is no law for restitution of fees, sir.
MASONRUEN, The Old Law. Act I, sc. 1. (1656)

¹⁰ Litigious terms, fat contentions, and flowing fees.

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 172. Referring to a lawyer.

¹³
'Tis like the breath of an unfec'd lawyer; you gave me nothing for it.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act I, sc. 4, l. 142.

III—Lawyers: Their Virtues

¹⁴
The good lawyer is not the man who has an eye to every side and angle of contingency, and qualifies all his qualifications, but who throws himself on your part so heartily, that he can get you out of a scrape.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power.

¹⁵
He is one that will not plead that cause wherein his tongue must be confuted by his conscience.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States:
The Good Advocate. Bk. II, ch. 1.

¹⁶
The study of the law is useful in a variety of points of view. It qualifies a man to be useful to himself, to his neighbors and to the public. It is the most certain stepping-stone in a political line.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. viii, p. 17.

The only road to the highest stations in this country is that of the law.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, Letter to C. Revicshi, 17
March, 1771.

All lawyers, be they knaves or fools,
Know that a seat is worth the earning,

Since Parliament's astounding rules

Vouch for their honour and their learning.

J. E. T. ROGERS, On the Eagerness of Lawyers to Obtain Seats in the House.

¹⁷
The best and most blameless interpreter of the laws. (Optimus atque Interpres legum sanctissimus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 78. Referring to Pegasus.

¹⁸
Discourage litigation. Persuade your neighbors to compromise whenever you can. . . .
As a peace-maker the lawyer has a superior opportunity of being a good man. There will still be business enough.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Notes for Law Lecture, 1
July, 1850. STERN, Writings of Lincoln, p. 328.

¹
I went into the temple, there to hear
The teachers of our law, and to propose What might improve my knowledge or their own.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. 1, l. 211.

²
The man of law who never saw
The ways to buy and sell,
Weening to rise by merchandise,
I pray God speed him well!

SIR THOMAS MORE, A Merry Jest. (c. 1500)
Lines to similar effect, but concluding,
"God never speeds him well," are attributed to Sir John Fortescue, Chief Justice (1422-1476).

³
Bold of your worthiness, we single you
As our best-moving fair solicitor.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act II, sc.
1, l. 28.

⁴
The profession of the law is the only aristocratic element which can be amalgamated without violence with the natural elements of democracy. . . . I cannot believe that a republic could subsist if the influence of lawyers in public business did not increase in proportion to the power of the people.

DE TOUCHEVILLE, Democracy in America. Vol.
I, ch. 16.

IV—Lawyers: Their Faults

⁵
Our wrangling lawyers . . . are so litigious and busy here on earth, that I think they will plead their clients' causes hereafter, some of them in hell.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy:
Democritus to the Reader.

⁶
Your pettifoggers damn their souls,
To share with knaves in cheating fools.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. II, canto I, l. 515.

Is not the winding up witnesses,
And nicking, more than half the bus'ness?
For witnesses, like watches, go
Just as they're set, too fast or slow;
And where in Conscience they're strait-lac'd,
'Tis ten to one that side is cast.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. II, canto II, l. 359.

Make law and equity as dear
As plunder and free-quarter were;
And fierce encounters at the bar
Undo as fast as those in war;
Enrich brawds, whores, and usurers,
Pimps, scriv'ners, silenc'd ministers,
That get estates by being undone
For tender conscience, and have none.

BUTLER, Satire upon the Weakness and Misery of Man, l. 127.

⁷
He saw a lawyer killing a viper
On a dunghill hard by his own stable;
And the Devil smiled, for it put him in mind

Of Cain and his brother Abel.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Devil's Thoughts. St. 4.

He saw a lawyer killing a viper
On a dunghill beside his stable;

Hol quoth he, thou put'st me in mind

Of the story of Cain and Abel.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Devil's Walk. St. 6. An expansion of Coleridge's poem.

⁸
Then shifting his side (as a lawyer knows how).

COWPER, Report of an Adjudged Case.

⁹
Next bring some lawyers to thy bar,
By innuendo they might all stand there;
There let them expiate that guilt,
And pay for all that blood their tongues have spilt.

These are the mountebanks of state,
Who by the sleight of tongues can crimes create,

And dress up trifles in the robes of fate,

The mastiffs of a Government,

To worry and run down the innocent.

DANIEL DEFoe, A Hymn to the Pillory. St. 16.

¹⁰
The lawyer has spoiled the statesman.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Bk. v,
ch. 6. Referring to Lord Brougham.

¹¹
I know you lawyers can, with ease,
Twist words and meanings as you please.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. II, No. 1.

¹²
Lawyers are always more ready to get a man into troubles than out of them.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act III.

¹³
Come, you of the law, who can talk, if you
please,

Till the man in the moon will allow it's a cheese.

O. W. HOLMES, Lines Recited at the Berkshire Jubilee.

¹⁴
That one hundred and fifty lawyers should do business together is not to be expected.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. I, p. 86.
Referring to Congress.

How can expedition be expected from a body which we have saddled with an hundred lawyers, whose trade is talking?

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. XIV, p. 310.

¹⁵
I oft have heard him say how he admir'd Men of your large profession, that could speak

To every cause, and things mere contraries,
Till they were hoarse again, yet all be law.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act I, sc. 1.

¹⁶
Ye who plead for the poor, and take money at their hands, Ye lawyers, ye advocates, be sure of this:

When ye draw near to death, and pray for pardon,
Your pardon at your parting hence will be but small.

Saint Matthew bids me tell you this, and if I lie, blame him.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman: God's Bull of Pardon.

And he said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers, for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.

New Testament: Luke, xi, 46.

My suit has nothing to do with the assault, or battery, or poisoning, but is about three goats, which, I complain, have been stolen by my neighbor. This the judge desires to have proved to him; but you, with swelling words and extravagant gestures, dilate on the Battle of Cannæ, the Mithridatic war, and the perjuries of the insensate Carthaginians, the Syllæ, the Marii, and the Mucii. It is time, Postumus, to say something about my three goats.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 19.

You wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller; and then rejoin the controversy of three pence to a second day of audience.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 77.

The law the lawyers know about
Is property and land, . . .

Why Faith is more than what one sees,
And Hope survives the worst disease,
And Charity is more than these,
They do not understand.

H. D. C. FEPLER, The Law the Lawyers Know.

Piecemeal they win this acre first, then that,
Glean on, and gather up the whole estate;
Then strongly fencing ill-got wealth by law,
Indentures, cov'nants, articles, they draw,
Large as the fields themselves, and larger far
Than civil codes, with all their glosses, are.

FORE, Satires of Dr. Donne. Sat. ii, l. 91.

Why is there always a secret singing
When a lawyer cashes in?
Why does a hearse horse snicker
Hauling a lawyer away?

CARL SANDBURG, The Lawyers Know Too Much.

O perilous mouths,
That bear in them one and the self-same tongue,
Either of condemnation or approval;
Bidding the law make court'sy to their will;
Hooking both right and wrong to the appetite,

To follow as it draws.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 4, 172.

In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being season'd with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of evil?

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 75.

And do as adversaries do in law,
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, i, 2, 277.

You have clearly proved that ignorance, idleness, and vice, are the proper ingredients for qualifying a legislator; that laws are best explained, interpreted and applied, by those whose interest and abilities lie in perverting, confounding and eluding them.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Brobdingnag.

These

Fomenting discord, and perplexing right;
An iron race!

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 1291.

The toils of law—what dark insidious men
Have cumbrous added to perplex the truth,
And lengthen simple justice into trade.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 384.

Attorneys and rogues are vermin not easily rooted out of a rich soil.

WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann, 11 Aug., 1777.

A Lawyer art thou?—draw not nigh!
Go, carry to some fitter place
The keenness of that practised eye,
The hardness of that fallow face.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph.

LEADER

My foolish parents taught me to read and write. (Me litterulas stulti docuere parentes.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, ep. 73, l. 7.
- Well, for your favour, sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 17.

1 A little learning is a dangerous thing;
Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring:
There shallow draughts intoxicate the brain,
And drinking largely sobers us again.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 15.

Next these learn'd Jonson in this list I bring
Who had drunk deep of the Pierian Spring.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Of Poets and Poesie.

If a little knowledge is dangerous, where is the man who has so much as to be out of danger?

T. H. HUXLEY, Science and Culture: On Elementary Instruction in Physiology.

One must give the mind, not a slight tincture, but a thorough and perfect dye. (Il ne l'en faut pas arroser, il l'en faut teindre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

2 Ask of the Learn'd the way? The Learn'd are blind;

This bids to serve, and that to shun mankind:
Some place the bliss in Action, some in Ease,
Those call it Pleasure, and Contentment these.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 19.

So by false learning is good sense defaced:
Some are bewild'rd in the maze of schools,
And some made coxcombs Nature meant but fools.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 23.

3 How vain is learning unless intelligence go with it! (Ἡ οὐδὲν ἢ μάθησις, ἂν μὴ νοῦς παρῇ.)

STOBÆUS, Florilegium.

Whereto serveth learning, if understanding be not joined to it?

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 24.

4 How many perish in the world through vain learning.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i, ch. 3.

5 A learned man is an idler who kills time with study. Beware of his false knowledge: it is more dangerous than ignorance.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

6 Much learning shows how little mortals know;
Much wealth, how little worldlings can enjoy.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 520.

V—Learning: Never too Late to Learn

7 Learning is ever in the freshness of its youth, even for the old. (Ἄνδ' γὰρ βῆν τοὺς γέροντας αὖ μαθήσιν.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 584.

If I should not be learning now, when should I be?

LACRONE, when asked, in extreme age, why he was studying geometry. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS Lacydes. Sec. 5.)

8 It is well to live that one may learn. (Buena es Vivir para ver.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 32.

A man may live and learn.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, l. 80. (c. 1620)

I was innocent myself once, but live and learn.

GARRICK, Miss in Her Teens. Act i, sc. 2. (1747)

The longer one lives the more he learns.

THOMAS MOORE, Dream of Hindostan.

Learn to live, and live to learn,
Ignorance like a fire doth burn,
Little tasks make large return.

BAYARD TAYLOR, To My Daughter.

9 A seal for learning, which, in the case of wise and well-trained men, advances in even pace with age. (Studia doctrinæ, quæ quidem prudentibus et bene institutis pariter cum ætate crescunt.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 14, sec. 50.

10 Better learn late than never. (Ὀψιμαθῆ & ἀμαθῆ.)

CLEOBULUS. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium. Pt. iii, l. 79.)

11 Cease not to learn until thou cease to live;
Think that day lost wherein thou draw'st no letter

To make thyself more learned, wiser, better.
(Jusqu'au cercueil (mon fils) veuilles apprendre,

Et tien perdu le jour qui s'est passé,
Si tu n'y as quelque chose amassé,
Pour plus scavant et plus sage te rendre.)

GUY DE FAUV FIBRAC, Collection of Quatrains. (Joshua Sylvester, tr., c. 1608.)

It is better to learn late than never.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 864.

Learn young, learn fair; learn auld, learn mair.

W. G. BENHAM, Quotations, p. 799.

12 I grow old learning something new every day. (Ἐγώ γε αἶμα δὲ πολλὰ διδασκόμενος.)

SOLOON. (VALERIUS MAXIMUS. Bk. viii, ch. 7, sec. 14.) Valerius translates the phrase into Latin: "Quotidie aliquid addiscentem senescere."

Still I am learning. (Ancora imparo.)

The favorite maxim of Michelangelo.

13 Were man to live coeval with the sun,
The patriarch-pupil would be learning still.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 86.

14 Stop where I may, the snake Sensualism spits its venom upon me. . . . It has penetrated into the very sweetshops; and there, among the commoner sorts of confectionery, may be seen this year models of the female Leg, the whole definite and elegant article as far as the thigh, with a fringe of paper cut in imitation of the female drawers and embroidered in the female fashion!

ROBERT BUCHANAN, The Fleshly School of Poetry.

Down flow'd her robe, a tartan sheen,
Till half a leg was scrimply seen;
And such a leg! my bonny Jean
Could only peer it;
Sae straught, sae taper, tight an' clean,
Nane else cam near it.

ROBERT BURNS, The Vision. Duan I, st. 11.

2
A leg and foot, to speak more plain,
Rests here of one commanding;
Who though his wits he might retain,
Lost half his understanding.

GEORGE CANNING, Epitaph for the Tombstone Erected over the Marquis of Angleson's Leg, Lost at Waterloo.

The leg wounded in his country's service should be embalmed in memory, while the dishonored body rots, forgotten, in the dust.

UNKNOWN, Epigram on Benedict Arnold. His monument on the battlefield of Saratoga shows the leg which was wounded there.

Lose a leg rather than life.

THOMAS FULLER, Guemologia. No. 3278.

3
Then I shall be able to pull the leg of that chap Mike. He is always trying to do me.

WILLIAM BROWN CHURCHWARD, Blackbirding in the South Pacific, p. 215. (1888) See APPENDIX, p. 2296.

4
They took leg-bail and ran awa.

ROBERT FERGUSON, Poems, p. 234. (1774)

I'll give him leg-bail for my honesty.

5
The human knee is a joint and not an entertainment.

PERCY HAMMOND. (SULLIVAN, Our Times. Vol. III, p. 338.)

6
For here I leave my second leg,
And the Forty-second Foot!

THOMAS HOOD, Faithless Nelly Gray.

7
Since your legs resemble the horns of the moon, you could bathe your feet, Phœbus, in a drinking-horn. (Cum sint crura tibi simulent que cornua lune, In rhytio poterat, Phœbe, lavare pedes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. II, epig. 35.

8
On his last legs.

MIDDLETON AND MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act V, sc. 1. (1656)

9
Though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 5, l. 40.

10
Horses are tied by the heads, dogs and bears by the neck, monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man's over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act II, sc. 4, l. 7.

11
Taste your legs, sir; put them in motion.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act III, sc. 1, l. 87.

12
When a man's busy, why, leisure
Strikes him as wonderful pleasure;
'Faith, and at leisure once is he?
Straightway he wants to be busy.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Glove, l. 3.

13
He was never less at leisure than when at leisure. (Numquam se minus otiosum esse quam cum otiosus.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. III, ch. 1, sec. 1. Quoted as a saying of Scipio Africanus.

14
Ease (or leisure), with dignity. (Cum dignitate otium.)

CICERO, Pro Publio Sestio. Sec. 45. Usually quoted, "Otium cum dignitate." Described by Cicero as the supremely desirable object to all sane and good men.

What is more delightful than lettered ease? (Quid est enim dulcius otio litterato?)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. V, ch. 36, sec. 105.

O Granta! sweet Granta! where studious of ease,

I slumbered seven years, and then lost my dé-grees.

⁴ The wisdom of a learned man cometh by opportunity of leisure; and he that hath little business shall become wise.

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 24.

⁵ That man, in truth, who knows not leisure's use,

More trouble has than one by tasks pursued.

(Otio qui nescit uti

Plus negoti habet quam cum negotium in negotio.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Iphigenia. (Quoted by Aulus Gellius, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xix, ch. 10, sec. 12.)

⁶ How came he to have the leisure to die, when there is so much stirring?

EPAMINONDAS, of a man who died at the time of the battle of Leuctra. (PLUTARCH, Rules for the Preservation of Health.)

Zounds! how has he leisure to be sick,
In such a justling time?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 17.

⁷ A life of leisure and a life of laziness are two things.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

Employ thy time well if thou meanest to gain leisure.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

Idle folks have the least leisure.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

⁸ Leisure is the mother of Philosophy.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Pt. iv, ch. 46.

⁹ No blessed leisure for love or hope,
But only time for grief.

THOMAS HOOD, The Song of the Shirt. St. 10.

¹⁰ Leisure is the time for doing something useful.

NATHANIEL HOWE, A Chapter of Proverbs.

¹¹ For Solomon, he liv'd at ease, and full

¹⁵ Leisure is the reward of labour.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

¹⁶ There's no music in a rest, Katie, that I know of; but there's the making of music in it. And people are always missing that part of the life melody; and scrambling on without counting—not that it's easy to count; but nothing on which so much depends ever is easy.

JOHN RUSKIN, Ethics of the Dust. Lecture 4,

¹⁷ Leisure without study is death; it is a tomb for the living man. (Otium sine litteris mors est et hominis vivi sepultura.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epia. lxxxii, 3.

Nor should I regard leisure and freedom from trouble as a good; for what has more leisure than a worm? (Ne quietem quidem et molestia vacare bonum dicam; quid est otiosius verme?)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epia. lxxvii, 19.

¹⁸ His life was . . . an illustration of the truth of the saying that those who have most to do, and are willing to work, will find the most time.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 1.

² I knew one, that when he wrote a letter, he would put that which was most material, in the Post-script, as if it had been a by-matter.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Canning.
His sayings are usually like women's letters: all the pith is in the postscript.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Boswell Redivivus. Referring to Charles Lamb.

Jove and my stars be praised! Here is yet a postscript.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act II, sc. 5, l.
187.

A woman seldom writes her Mind, but in her Postscript.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 79.

³ The earth has nothing like a she epistle.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xlii, st. 105.

⁴ A letter does not blush. (Epistola enim non erubescit.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum. Bk. v, epis. 12.

⁵ For his letters, say they, are weighty and powerful; but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible.

New Testament: II Corinthians, x, 10.

⁶ He whistles as he goes, light-hearted wretch,
Cold and yet cheerful; messenger of grief
Perhaps to thousands, and of joy to some.

¹² Every day brings a ship,
Every ship brings a word;
Well for those who have no fear,
Looking seaward well assured
That the word the vessel brings
Is the word they wish to hear.

EMERSON, Letters.

¹³ The tongue is prone to lose the way,
Not so the pen, for in a letter
We have not better things to say,
But surely say them better.

R. W. EMERSON, Life.

In writing a letter to a friend we may find that we rise to thought and to a cordial power of expression that costs no effort.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration.

The power of a wafer or a drop of wax or gluten to guard a letter, as it flies over sea, over land, and comes to its address as if a battalion of artillery brought it, I look upon as a fine meter of civilization.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

¹⁴ Sent letters by posts.

Old Testament: Esther, viii, 10.

¹⁵ Letters, from absent friends, extinguish fear,
Unite division, and draw distance near;

The letter is too long by half a mile.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 54.

⁴ Kind messages, that pass from land to land;
Kind letters, that betray the heart's deep history,

In which we feel the pressure of a hand,—

One touch of fire,—and all the rest is mystery!

LONGFELLOW, The Seaside and Fireside: Dedication. St. 5.

⁵ Never read over your old letters.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, Suicides.

⁶ Good-bye—my paper's out so nearly,
I've only room for, Yours sincerely.

MOORE, The Fudge Family in Paris. Letter 6.

⁷ Letter-writing, that most delightful way of wasting time.

JOHN MOSLEY, Life of George Eliot.

⁸ Letters of Bellerophon. (Bellerophonem . . . tabellas.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 810. Bellerophon carried a letter to the king of Lycia, which, unknown to the bearer, contained a request that the king should put him to death.

⁹ I write many letters, but letters, alas, of the most unlettered kind! (Scribo plurimas, sed inlitteratissimas litteras.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10. There is nothing to write about, you say. Well, then, write and let me know just this—that there is nothing to write about. ("Nihil est," inquis, "quod scribam." At hoc ipse scribe, nihil est, quod scribas, vel solum illud.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 11. You will say you had no news to write me; and that probably may be true; but, without news, one has always something to say to those with whom one desires to have anything to do.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 12 Jan., 1757.

Let me hear from thee by letters.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act i, sc. 1, l. 57.

¹⁰ Tell him there's a post come from my master, with his horn full of good news.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 46.

¹¹ Thou bringest . . . letters into trembling hands.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. x.

¹² For my part, I could easily do without the post-office. . . . I never received more than one or two letters in my life that were worth the postage.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 2.

II—Letters: Love-Letters

¹³ Lay it by in some sacred deposit
For relics—we all have a few!

Love, some day they'll print it, because it
Was written to You.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A Nice Correspondent.

If She have written a letter, delay not an instant,
but burn it.

Tear it in pieces, O Fool, and the wind to her mate shall return it!

RUDYARD KIPING, Certain Maxims of Hafiz.

¹⁴ Love is the marrow of friendship, and letters are the elixir of love.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 1.

Love is the life of friendship; letters are
The life of love.

JAMES HOWELL, Touching the Vertue and Use of Familiar Letters, l. 1.

¹⁵ Great love-letters are written only to great women.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

¹⁶ Soon as thy letters trembling I uncloset,
That well-known name awakens all my woes.
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 29.

Line after line my gushing eyes o'erflow,
Lest thro' a safe variety of woe:
Now warm in love, now with'ring in my bloom,
Lost in a convent's solitary gloom!
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 35.

1 Heav'n first taught letters for some wretch's aid,
Some banish'd lover, or some captive maid;
They live, they speak, they breathe what love inspires,

Warm from the soul, and faithful to its fires;
The virgin's wish without her fears impart,
Excuse the blush, and pour out all the heart,
Speed the soft intercourse from soul to soul,
And wait a sigh from Indus to the Pole.
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 51.

And oft the pangs of absence to remove
By letters, soft interpreters of love.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Henry and Emma, l. 147.

2 What! have I 'scaped love-letters in the holiday-time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 1.

1—Liberty: Definitions

3 Among a people generally corrupt, liberty cannot long exist.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter, to the Sheriffs of Bristol.

Liberty, too, must be limited in order to be possessed.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter, to the Sheriffs of Bristol.

The only liberty I mean, is a liberty connected with order; that not only exists along with order and virtue, but which cannot exist at all without them.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, at Bristol, 13 Oct., 1774.

Abstract liberty, like other mere abstractions, is not to be found.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

4 Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

New Testament: II Corinthians, iii, 17.

5 Man's liberty ends, and it ought to end, when that liberty becomes the curse of his neighbours.

FREDERIC WILLIAM FARRAR, Ideals of Notions.

6 Liberty is always dangerous, but it is the safest thing we have.

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK, Liberty.

7 Only in fetters is liberty:
Without its banks could a river be?
LOUIS GINSBERG, Fetters.

8 The love of liberty is the love of others; the love of power is the love of ourselves.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Political Essays: On the Connection Between Toad-Eaters and Tyrants.

9 Liberty is the breath of progress.

R. G. INGERSOLL, How to Reform Mankind.

10 The God who gave us life, gave us liberty at the same time.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Summary View of the Rights of British America.

There can be no prescription old enough to supersede the Law of Nature and the grant of God Almighty, who has given to all men a natural right to be free, and they have it ordinarily in their power to make themselves so, if they please.

JAMES OTIS, Rights of the British Colonies, p. 14.

11 Liberty in the lowest rank of every nation is little more than the choice of working or starving.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Works, vi, 151.)

Ask this man what country and liberty mean, and he will reply that he wants money, and nothing to do. (Demandez à cet homme ce que c'est que la patrie et la liberté, il vous répondra qu'il veut de l'argent et ne rien faire.)

PAUL DE KOCK, L'Homme aux Trois Culottes.
Ch. 4.

12 The world has never had a good definition of the word liberty.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, Baltimore, 18
April, 1864. For full quotation see APPENDIX.

13 All that makes existence valuable to anyone depends on the enforcement of restraints upon the actions of other people.

J. S. MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 1.

The liberty of the individual must be thus far limited; he must not make himself a nuisance to other people.

J. S. MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 3.

14 The Mountain Nymph, sweet Liberty.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 36.

15 God makes no man a slave, no doubter free;
Abiding faith alone wins liberty.

JAMES JEFFREY ROCHE, Washington.

16 That treacherous phantom which men call Liberty.

RUSKIN, Seven Lamps of Architecture. Ch.
viii, sec. 10.

17 Liberty means responsibility. That is why most men dread it.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 42.

Liberty is given by nature even to mute animals. (Libertatem natura etiam mutis animalibus datam.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 17.

² Liberty, when it begins to take root, is a plant of rapid growth.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to James Madison, 2 March, 1788.

If the true spark of religious and civil liberty be kindled, it will burn. Human agency cannot extinguish it. Like the earth's central fire, it may be smothered for a time; the ocean may overwhelm it; mountains may press it down; but its inherent and unconquerable force will heave both the ocean and the land, and at some time or other, in some place or other, the volcano will break out and flame up to heaven.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address, 17 June, 1825, at Bunker Hill Monument.

³ Liberty exists in proportion to wholesome restraint; the more restraint on others to keep off from us, the more liberty we have.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech. 10 May, 1847.

A liberty to do that only which is good, just, and honest.

JOHN WINTHROP, Life and Letters, ii, 341.

⁴ Liberty has never come from the government. Liberty has always come from the subjects of it. The history of liberty is a history of resistance. The history of liberty is a history of limitations of governmental power, not the increase of it.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, New York Press Club, 9 Sept., 1912.

II—Liberty: Apothegms

⁵ The tree of liberty grows only when watered by the blood of tyrants. (L'arbre de la liberté ne croît qu'arrosé par le sang des tyrans.)

BERTRAND BARÈRE, Speech, French National Assembly, 1792.

The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants. It is its natural manure.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to William S. Smith, Paris, 13 Nov., 1787. (Writings, iv, 467.)

⁶ I pardon something to the spirit of liberty.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America, 22 March, 1775.

The people never give up their liberties except under some delusion.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, Bucks, 1784.

⁷ Liberty's in every blow! Let us do or die.

BURNS, Bruce to His Men at Bannockburn.

"Make way for liberty!" he cried,

Made way for liberty, and died.

MONTGOMERY, The Patriot's Pass-Word, l. 1

Fair Liberty was all his cry;

For her he stood prepared to die.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 411.

This hand, the tyrant smiting, ne'er will sword release,

Till liberty assure the quietude of peace.

A translation by John D. Long, formerly governor of Massachusetts, of the Latin lines by Algernon Sidney, the last of which, "Ense petit placidam sub libertate quietam," is the motto on the arms of Massachusetts.

⁸ O sweet name of liberty! (O nomen dulce libertatis!)

CICERO, In Verrem. No. v, sec. 63.

O liberty! how many crimes are committed in thy name! (O liberté! que de crimes on commet dans ton nom!)

MADAME ROLAND, Mémoires: Appendix. LAMARTINE, Histoire des Girondins, ch. li, p. 8, states that Madame Roland said this on the scaffold a moment before her execution, addressing a large statue of Liberty which had been erected beside the guillotine, but others allege that what she really said was, "O Liberté, comme on t'a jouée!" (O Liberty, how you have been trifled with).

⁹ Strangers to liberty, 'tis true;

But that delight they never knew

And therefore never missed.

COWPER, The Caged Linnets.

¹⁰ To those the truth makes free,
Sacred as truth itself is lawful liberty.

AUBREY DE VERE, Liberty.

¹¹ The sun of liberty is set; you must light up the candle of industry and economy.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN (attr.). Said to be in his correspondence.

¹² Where liberty dwells there is my country.
(Ubi libertas, ibi patria.)

A Latin phrase whose author is unknown, but which Algernon Sidney (c. 1640) adopted as his motto. A similar sentiment is attributed to Thomas Jefferson and Thomas Paine.

¹³ Liberty, thy thousand tongues

None silence, who design no wrongs.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 418.

¹⁴ The boisterous sea of liberty is never without a wave.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 253.

¹⁵ Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof.

Old Testament: Leviticus, xxv, 10. By an odd coincidence, in a letter written by a committee of the Pennsylvania Provincial Assembly, 1 Nov., 1751, ordering a bell for the tower of the new State House, it was directed that this quotation from the Bible should be inscribed around it "well-shaped in large letters." It was this bell, so tradition says, which announced the signing of the Declaration of Independence, 4 July, 1776, and it is still preserved in Independence Hall, Philadelphia.

1 He that would make his own liberty secure must guard even his enemy from oppression. THOMAS PAINE, Dissertation on First Principles of Government, p. 242.

Whether in chains or in laurels, liberty knows nothing but victories.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech on John Brown, 1 Nov., 1859.

2 I must have liberty Withal, as large a charter as the wind To blow on whom I please.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 47.

So loving-jealous of his liberty.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 182.

A sig for those by law protected! Liberty's a glorious feast!

Courts for cowards were erected, Churches built to please the priest.

ROBERT BURNS, The Jolly Beggars, line 292. Air, Jolly Morlocks, Fill Your Glasses.

3 With empty praise of liberty. (Inani jactatione libertatis.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 42.

4 Liberty . . . came after a long time. (Libertas . . . longo post tempore venit.)

VERGIL, Eclogues, No. i, l. 27.

5 I shall defer my visit to Faneuil Hall, the cradle of American liberty, until its doors shall fly open, on golden hinges, to lovers of Union as well as of Liberty.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Letter, April, 1851.

III—Liberty: Its Virtues

6 When Liberty is gone, Life grows insipid, and has lost its relish.

ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 3.

'Tis liberty alone that gives the flower Of fleeting life its lustre and perfume.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 446.

Oh! remember life can be No charm for him who lives not free.

THOMAS MOORE, Before the Battle.

7 But little do or can the best of us: That little is achieved through Liberty.

ROBERT BROWNING, Why I Am a Liberal.

8 Liberty . . . is one of the greatest blessings that Heaven has bestowed upon mankind, CHAVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 52.

9 Thou rising Sun! thou blue rejoicing Sky! Yea, every thing that is and will be free!

Bear witness for me, wheresoe'er ye be, With what deep worship I have still adored The spirit of divinest Liberty.

S. T. COLERIDGE, France: An Ode. St. 1.

Yes, while I stood and gazed, my temples bare,

And shot my being through earth, sea, and air.

Possessing all things with intensest love, O Liberty! my spirit felt thee there.

S. T. COLERIDGE, France: An Ode. St. 5.

Liberty, like day, Breaks on the soul, and by a flash from Heav'n Fires all the faculties with glorious joy.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 883.

10 The love of liberty with life is giv'n, And life itself th' inferior gift of Heav'n.

JOHN DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 291.

11 Liberty is worth whatever the best civilization is worth.

HENRY GILES, The Worth of Liberty.

12 For ever in thine eyes, O Liberty, Shines that high light whereby the world is saved,

And though thou slay us, we will trust to thee!

JOHN HAY, Liberty.

13 What light is to the eyes—what air is to the lungs—what love is to the heart, liberty is to the soul of man. Without liberty, the brain is a dungeon, where the chained thoughts die with their pinions pressed against the hingeless doors.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Progress.

14 Deep in the frozen regions of the north, A goddess violated brought thee forth, Immortal Liberty!

SMOLLETT, Ode to Independence, l. 5.

15 Behold in Liberty's unclouded blaze

We lift our heads, a race of other days.

CHARLES SPRACUE, Centennial Ode. St. 22.

16 I tell you, liberty is the best of all things; never live beneath the noose of a servile halter. (Dico tibi verum, libertas optima verum; Nunquam servili sub nexa vivo filii.)

SIR WILLIAM WALLACE, quoting a medieval proverb.

17 And, best beloved of best men, liberty, Free lives and lips, free hands of men free-born.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Althea.

18 If but the least and frailest, let me be Evermore numbered with the truly free Who find Thy service perfect liberty!

WHITTIER, What of the Day? l. 13.

1 I would rather belong to a poor nation that was free than to a rich nation that had ceased to be in love with liberty. We shall not be poor if we love liberty.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Mobile, Ala., 27 Oct., 1912.

IV—Liberty: Its Defense

2 It is the common fate of the indolent to see their rights become a prey to the active. The condition upon which God hath given liberty to man is eternal vigilance.

JOHN PHILIPOT CURRAN, Speech upon the Right of Election, 10 July, 1790.

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Public Opinion. This was an address delivered before the Massachusetts Antislavery Society, 28 Jan., 1852. The phrase is not in quotation marks. It has been said that Mr. Phillips was quoting Thomas Jefferson, but in a letter dated 14 April, 1879, Mr. Phillips wrote: " 'Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty' has been attributed to Jefferson, but no one has yet found it in his works or elsewhere." It has also been attributed to Patrick Henry.

3 Liberty can neither be got, nor kept, but by so much care, that mankind are generally unwilling to give the price for it.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 62.

4 The ground of liberty must be gained by inches.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. viii, p. 3.

We are not to expect to be translated from despotism to liberty in a feather bed.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. viii, p. 13.

5 By no sword save her own falls Liberty.

R. U. JOHNSON, Hands Across Sea.

6 Unless that liberty, which is of such a kind as arms can neither procure nor take away, which alone is the fruit of piety, of justice, of temperance, and unadulterated virtue, shall have taken deep root in your minds and hearts, there will not long be wanting one who will snatch from you by treachery what you have acquired by arms.

MILTON, Second Defence of People of England.

7 The manna of popular liberty must be gathered each day, or it is rotten. . . . Only by uninterrupted agitation can a people be kept sufficiently awake to principle not to let liberty be smothered by material prosperity. Republics exist only on tenure of being agitated.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Address; Public Opinion, Boston, 28 Jan., 1852.

8 Our liberties and our lives are in danger. (Libertas et anima nostra in dubio est.)

SALLUST, Catullina. Sec. 52.

9 God grants liberty only to those who love it, and are always ready to guard and defend it: WEBSTER, Speech, U. S. Senate, 3 June, 1834.

V—Liberty and Bondage

10 A day, an hour, of virtuous liberty is worth a whole eternity in bondage.

ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 1.

11 Chains or conquest, liberty or death.

ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 4, last line.

Is life so dear or peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take; but as for me, give me liberty, or give me death!

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Virginia House of Delegates, 23 March, 1775. (Arranged by William Wirt, 1817.)

12 The Athenians will not sell their liberties for all the gold either above or under ground.

ARISTIDES, to the Lacedaemonians. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Sec. 10.)

We sell our birthright whenever we sell our liberty for any price of gold or honor.

E. P. WHIFFLE, Outlooks on Society: Literature and Politics.

13 Eternal Spirit of the chainless Mind!

Brightest in dungeons, Liberty! thou art, For there thy habitation is the heart—

The heart which love of thee alone can bind.

BYRON, The Prisoner of Chillon: Introductory.

14 He who, through fear of poverty, forfeits liberty, which is better than mines of wealth, will . . . be a slave forever. (Sic qui pauperiem veritus potiore metallis libertate caret, . . . serviet aeternum.)

CICERO, Epistles. Bk. I, epls. 10, l. 39.

Those, who would give up essential liberty to purchase a little temporary safety, deserve neither liberty nor safety.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN (?), Historical Review of Pennsylvania. (1759)

This sentence was much used in the Revolutionary period. It occurs even so early as November, 1755, in an answer by the Assembly of Pennsylvania to the Governor.

PROTHINGHAM, Rise of the Republic of the United States.

15 Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

New Testament: Galatians, v, 1.

16 A bean in liberty is better than a corn in prison.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jaculis Prudentum.

Lean liberty is better than fat slavery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3158.

1 Preferring
Hard liberty before the easy yoke
Of servile pomp.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. II, l. 255.

2 Oh! if there be, on this earthly sphere,
A boon, an offering Heaven holds dear,
'Tis the last libation Liberty draws
From the heart that bleeds and breaks in her cause!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri, St. 11.

The tribute most high to a head that is royal,
Is love from a heart that loves liberty too.

THOMAS MOORE, The Prince's Day.

3 "An 't please Your Honour," quoth the peasant,
"This same dessert is not so pleasant:

Give me again my hollow tree,
A crust of bread and Liberty!"

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires, Bk. II, sat. 6, l. 218.

No use have I for such a life, and so farewell:
My wood and hole, secure from alarms, will solace me with homely vetch. (Haud mihi vita Est opus hac, et valeas: me silva cavusque Tutus ab insidiis tenui solabitur, ervo.)

HORACE, Satires, Bk. II, sat. 6, l. 115. Horace is telling the story of a peasant who tried to live in a palace.

I had rather munch a crust of brown bread and an onion in a corner, without ado or ceremony, than feed upon a turkey at another man's table, where I am forced to chew slowly, drink little, wipe my mouth every minute, and cannot sneeze or cough, or do other things that are the privileges of liberty and solitude.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. I, ch. 11.

4 He that roars for liberty
Faster binds a tyrant's power,
And the tyrant's cruel glee
Forces on the freer hour.

TENNISON, The Vision of Sin, Pt. IV, st. 17.

VI—Liberty and Licence

5 What is liberty without wisdom and without virtue? It is the greatest of all possible evils; for it is folly, vice, and madness, without tution or restraint.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

More liberty begets desire of more;
The hunger still increases with the store.

DRYDEN, Hind and the Panther, Pt. I, l. 519.

6 Liberty in the wild and freakish hands of fanatics has once more, as frequently in the past, proved the effective helpmate of autocracy and the twin-brother of tyranny.

OTTO KAHN, Speech, University of Wisconsin,
14 Jan., 1918.

The deadliest foe of democracy is not autocracy
but liberty frenzied. Liberty is not foolproof.
For its beneficent working it demands self-restraint.

OTTO KAHN, Speech, University of Wisconsin,
14 Jan., 1918.

7 It is not good to have too much liberty. It is not good to have all one wants.

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées, No. 379.

8 What in some is called liberty, in others is called licence. (Quæ in aliis libertas est, in aliis licentia vocatur.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria, Bk. III,
ch. 8, sec. 48.

Foster-child of licence, which fools call liberty.
(Alumna licentie, quam stulti libertatem vocant.)

TACITUS, Dialogus de Oratoribus, Sec. 40.

License they mean when they cry, Liberty!
For who loves that, must first be wise and good.
MILTON, On the Detraction Which Followed upon My Writing Certain Treatises.

9 Why, headstrong liberty is lash'd with woe;
There's nothing situate under heaven's eye
But bath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, II, 1, 15.

And liberty plucks justice by the nose.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, I, 3, 29.

10 Liberty, guest amiable,
Plants both elbows on the table.
(La liberté, convive aimable, Met ses deux coudes sur la table.)

VOLTAIRE.

11 The weight of too much liberty.

DIOPOKUS SICULUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 49.
The inscription on the portal of the library at Alexandria, Egypt. The phrase is usually translated as "Medicine for the mind," or "Nourishment for the soul," but λαρπαίον means a surgery, or hospital, or sanatorium—a place which one visits to be cured—and the reference is plainly to the library as a whole.

Food for the soul. (Nutrimētum spiritus.)

3 Consider what you have in the smallest chosen library. A company of the wisest and wittiest men that could be picked out of all civil countries, in a thousand years, have set in best order the results of their learning and wisdom. The men themselves were hid and inaccessible, solitary, impatient of interruption, fenced by etiquette; but the thought which they did not uncover to their bosom friend is here written out in transparent words to us, the strangers of another age.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books.

4 He that revels in a well-chosen library, has innumerable dishes, and all of admirable flavour.

WILLIAM GODWIN, The Enquirer: Early Taste for Reading.

5 This is my world! within these narrow walls, I own a princely service.

PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, My Study.

6 Every library should try to be complete on something, if it were only the history of pin-heads.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 8.

7 I have often thought that nothing would do more extensive good at small expense than the establishment of a small circulating library in every county, to consist of a few well-chosen books, to be lent to the people of the county, under such regulations as would secure their safe return in due time.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xii, p. 282.

8 What a place to be in is an old library! It seems as though all the souls of all the writers, that have bequeathed their labours to these Bodleians, were reposing here, as in some dormitory, or middle state. I do not want to handle, to profane the leaves, their winding-sheets. I could as soon dislodge a shade. I seem to inhale learning, walking amid their foliage; and the odour of their old moth-scented coverings is fragrant as the first bloom of those scintial apples which grew amid the happy orchard.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Oxford in the Vacation.

9 My library Was dukedom large enough.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 109.

Come, and take choice of all my library,

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 34.

10 I go into my library, and all history rolls before me. I breathe the morning air of the world while the scent of Eden's roses yet lingered in it. . . . I see the pyramids building; I hear the shoutings of the armies of Alexander. . . . I sit as in a theatre—the stage is time, the play is the play of the world.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: Books and Gardens.

II—Libraries: Their Faults

11 The richest minds need not large libraries.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table Talk: Learning-Books.

12 A library is but the soul's burial-ground. It is the land of shadows.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Star Papers: Oxford: The Bodleian Library.

13 Meek young men grow up in libraries.

EMERSON, Nature Addresses and Lectures: The American Scholar.

14 It is a vanity to persuade the world one hath much learning, by getting a great library.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane State: Of Books.

15 The dust and silence of the upper shelf.

MACAULAY, Essays: On Milton.

16 Burn the libraries, for their value is in this book.

OMAR. Referring to the Koran.

17 I love vast libraries; yet there is a doubt
If one be better with them or without,—
Unless he use them wisely, and, indeed,
Knows the high art of what and how to read.
At Learning's fountain it is sweet to drink,
But 'tis a nobler privilege to think;
And oft, from books apart, the thirsting mind

May make the nectar which it cannot find.
'Tis well to borrow from the good and great;
'Tis wise to learn; 'tis godlike to create!
J. G. Saxe, The Library.

¹ Since you cannot read all the books which you may possess, it is enough to possess only as many books as you can read. (Cum legere non possis, quantum habueris, satis est habere, quantum legas.)

² SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliū. Epis. ii, sec. 4.
A circulating library in a town is as an ever-green tree of diabolical knowledge.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act i, sc. 2.

³ Unlearned men of books assume the care,
As eunuchs are the guardians of the fair.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 83.

It is not observed that . . . librarians are wiser men than others.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Spiritual Laws.

II—Lies: Their Variety

¹⁴ You lie—under a mistake,—

For this is the most civil sort of lie

That can be given to a man's face.

CALDERON, Magic Prodigioso. Sc. 1. (Shelley, tr.)

If, after all, there should be some so blind
To their own good this warning to despise, . . .

I tell him, if a clergyman, he lies—
Should captains the remark, or critics, make,
They also lie too—under a mistake.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 208.

I mean you lie—under a mistake.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. I.

¹⁵ The best kind of lie, so I've heard, is a red-hot one. (Calidum esse audivi optimum mendacium.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 666.

That's a lie with a latchet;

All the dogs in town cannot match it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6157.

That's a loud one!

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89.

That's a lie with a lid on.

C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, p. 99.

¹⁶ There is a difference between telling a falsehood and lying. One who lies is not himself deceived, but tries to deceive another; he who tells a falsehood is himself deceived. One who lies deceives, as far as he is able; but one who tells a falsehood does not himself deceive, any more than he can help. A good man ought to take pains not to lie; a wise man, not to tell what is false.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 4, l. 76.

²⁰ If a man had the art of the second sight for seeing lies, as they have in Scotland for seeing spirits, how admirably he might entertain himself in this town by observing the different shapes, sizes and colours of those swarms of lies which buzz about the heads of some people.

SWIFT, The Examiner. No. 15.

²¹ Magnanimous lie! and when was truth so beautiful that it could be preferred to thee?

(Magnanima menzogna! o quando è il vero
Si bello che si possa a te preporre?)

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered. Bk. II, st. 77. Sophroniska, a Christian virgin, falsely took upon herself the guilt of having secreted a statue of the Virgin from heathen profanation.

There are 869 different forms of lying, but only one of them has been squarely forbidden. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

III—Lies: Condemnation

It is not the lie that passeth through the mind, but the lie that sinketh in, and setteth in it, that doth the hurt.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

The beginning of all is to have done with Falsity; to eschew Falsity as Death Eternal. THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 23 June, 1870.

Man everywhere is the born enemy of lies. CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 1.

It is the nature of a scoundrel to deceive by lying. (Improbi hominis est mendacio fallere.) CICERO, Pro Murena. Ch. 39, sec. 62.

He neither uttered falsehood nor could endure it. (Mendacium neque dicebat, neque pati poterat.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, Lives: Atticus.

Every violation of truth is not only a sort of suicide in the liar, but is a stab at the health of human society.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

As ten millions of circles can never make a square, so the united voice of myriads cannot lend the smallest foundation to falsehood.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 8.

Dare to be true: nothing can need a lie; A fault which needs it most, grows two thereby.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch.

Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle which fits them all.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6, l. 1.

It is better to be lied about than to lie.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. XI, p. 48.

There is no vice so mean, so pitiful, so contemptible; and he who permits himself to tell a lie once, finds it much easier to do it a second and third time, till at length it becomes habitual.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. v, p. 83.

Men lie, who lack courage to tell truth. JOAQUIN MILLER, Isa. Sc. 3.

Equivocation is half-way to lying, as lying the whole way to hell.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude, p. 36.

The mouth that lies slays the soul.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs: Scottish.

To lapse in fulness
Is sorer than to lie for need, and falsehood
Is worse in kings than beggars.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act III, sc. 6, l. 12.

You told a lie, an odious, damned lie:
Upon my soul, a lie, a wicked lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act V, sc. 2, l. 180.

Let me have no lying: it becomes none but tradesmen.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act IV, sc. 4, l. 743.

One falsehood treads on the heels of another. (Fallacia Alia aliam trudit.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 779.

It is a true saying that one falsehood leads easily to another.

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. I, sec. 33.

The silent colossal National Lie that is the support and confederate of all the tyrannies and shams and inequalities and unfairnesses that afflict the peoples—that is the one to throw bricks and sermons at.

MARK TWAIN, My First Lie.

He shall not prosper who deviseth lies. The Koran. Ch. 20.

IV—Lies: Condonation

A little inaccuracy saves a world of explanation.

C. E. AYRES, Science, the False Messiah.

A mixture of a lie doth ever add pleasure.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

Untruths . . . such as are wittily contrived, and are not merely gross and palpable.

FRANCIS BACON, Observations on a Libel.

For breaking of an oath, and lying,

Is but a kind of self-denying,
A saint-like virtue; and from hence
Some have broke oaths by Providence.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. II, canto II, l. 133.

A good portion of speaking well consists in knowing how to lie. (Bona pars bene dicendi est scire mentiri.)

ERASMUS, Philetymus et Pseudocheus.

Merely corroborative detail, intended to give artistic verisimilitude to a bald and unconvincing narrative.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act II.

No mere veracity robs your sagacity
Or perspicacity, Barney McGee.

RICHARD HOVEY, Barney McGee.

1 Yet to so gentle lies, pardon is due
A lie, well told, to some tastes is restorative;
Besides, we Poets lie by good authority
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams Bk. ii, No.
184. See also POETRY. POETIC LICENSE.

2 A good lie for its own sake is ever pleasing to honest men, but a patched up record never.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. i, p. 88.

3 What you do not know, relate as if you knew it well (Quæ nescieris, ut bene nota refer.)
OVID, Ars Amatoria Bk. i, l. 98.

4 Parables are not lies because they describe events which never happened.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Sc. ii.

V—Lies and Statistics

5 You may prove anything by figures.
THOMAS CARLYLE, Chartism No. 2. Quoted as the saying of "a witty statesman."

6 Figures won't lie, but liars will figure.
GENERAL CHARLES H. GROSVENOR, Representative from Ohio, who for many years was famous for his prognostications of the vote at Presidential elections.

7 Round numbers are always false.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (HAWKINS, Johnsoniana, 215.)

8 Statistics are like alienists—they will testify for either side
F. H. LA GUARDIA, The Banking Investigations.
(Liberty, 13 May, 1933.)

9 Figures often beguile me, particularly when I have the arranging of them myself; in which case the remark attributed to Disraeli would often apply with justice and force: "There are three kinds of lies: lies, damned lies, and statistics."

MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. i, p. 246.

This phrase has also been attributed to Henry Labouchère, Abraham Hewitt and Commander Holloway R. Frost.

VI—Lies and the Memory

10 A good memory is needed after one has lied.
(Il faut bonne mémoire après qu'on a menti.)
CORNEILLE, Le Menteur. Act iv, sc. 5.

11 There is nothing so pathetic as a forgetful liar.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

12 He who is not sure of his memory should not undertake the trade of lying. (Qui ne sent point assez ferme de mémoire, ne se doit pas mêler d'être menteur.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 9.

13 He who tells a lie, is not sensible how great a task he undertakes; for he must be forced to invent twenty more to maintain that one.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

14 A liar needs a good memory. (Mendacem memorem esse oportere)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. iv,
ch. 2, sec. 91.

This shows that liars ought to have good memories

ALGERNON SIDNEY, Discourses on Government.
Ch. ii, sec. 15.

Indeed, a very rational saying, that a liar ought to have a good memory.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermon: Concealment of Sin.

VII—Liars

15 Liars are always most disposed to swear.
(A giurar prestî i mentitor son sempre.)
ALFIERI, Virginia Act ii, sc. 3

A liar is always lavish of oaths. (Un menteur est toujours prodigue de serments.)

CORNEILLE, Le Menteur. Act iii, sc. 5.

16 When they speak truth they are not believed.
ARISTOTLE, when asked what liars lose by lying (DIODORUS LALTIUS, Aristotle Sec 17)

This is the punishment of a liar: He is not believed, even when he speaks the truth

Babylonian Talmud. Sanhedrin, fo. 89b.

A liar is not believed even when he tells the truth.
(Mendaci homini ne verum quidem dicenti cre-dere solemus.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 71, sec. 146.

But liars we can never trust,
Though they should speak the thing that's true.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Lying.

17 None speaks false, where there is none to hear.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. ii, st. 24.

The greater fool, the greater liar.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Miscellaneous Epigrams.
No. 6.

Do not tell everything, but never lie. . . . You may always observe that the greatest fools are the greatest liars.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 Feb., 1754.

18 It isn't every fool that's fit
To make a real good lie, that 'll sit
On her keel, and answer the helm.

THOMAS EDWARD BROWN, The Doctor.

20 There's a real love of a lie,
Liars find ready made for lies they make.

ROBERT BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Medium."

1 He lied with such a fervour of intention,
There was no doubt he earned his laureate pension.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 80.

2 With death doomed to grapple
Beneath this cold slab, he
Who lied in the Chapel
Now lies in the Abbey.

BYRON, Epitaph for William Pitt.

Some lie beneath the churchyard stone,
And some before the Speaker.
W. M. PRAED, School and School-fellows. St. 5.

3 It is the man who tells and who acts the lie who is guilty, and not he who honestly and sincerely believes the lie

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Sept., 1747.

4 Thou liar of the first magnitude!
CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 1.

You licked not your lips since you lied last.
THOMAS FULLER, Guemologus. No. 5931.

5 Even then the liar in you woke,
The traitor grew!
JOHN ERSKINE, Dialogue.

6 Show me a liar, and I will show you a thief.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacobi Prudentium.

7 A splendid liar (Splendide mendax.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode. 11, l. 34. Hypernestra alone, of all the fifty daughters of Danaus who had sworn to them to kill their husbands, broke her oath and was imprisoned, but declared innocent by the people.

One only, true to Hymen's flame,
Was traitress to her sire forsworn:
That splendid falsehood lights her name
Through times unborn.

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 11, l. 33.

To lie magnificently (Mentiri splendide.)
ERASMUS, Familiar Colloques.

8 He is a liar, and the father of it.
New Testament: John, viii, 44.

These lies are like the father that begets them,
gross as a mountain, open, palpable.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 249.

9 A man who has never been within the tropics does not know what a thunderstorm means; a man who has never looked on Niagara has but a faint idea of a cataract; and he who has not read Barère's Memoirs may be said not to know what it is to lie.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, ep. 45.

12 Thou liest in thy throat. (Mentiris in gut-ture.)

TITUS OATES, On Jude, p. 247.

He strode to Gauthier, in his throat
Gave him the lie. . . . The lie was dead,
And damned, and truth stood up instead.

ROBERT BROWNING, Count Gismond. St. 13.

But thou liest in thy throat.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 172.

13 I said in my haste, All men are liars.
Old Testament: Psalms, cxvi, 11. (Omnis homo mendax.—Vulgate.)

Whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.
New Testament: Revelation, xiii, 15.

14 I have no use for liars, national, international, or those found in private life.
THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Arlington Cemetery.

15 He will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
iv, sc. 3, l. 283.

He will lie as fast as a dog will trot.
JOHN PALSGRAVE, *Lesclairissement de la Langue
Françoise*, 610. (1530)

Thou canst cog, face and lie as fast as a dog can trot.

UNKNOWN, Hay Any Worke for Cooper, 65.
(1589)

She will lie as fast as a dog will lick a dish.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

16 Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 6, l. 103.

A heart for falsehood framed.
SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 5.

17 Lord, Lord, how subject we old men are to the vice of lying!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 325.

Lord, Lord, how this world is given to lying!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 149.

How you delight, my lords, I know not, I;
But, I protest, I love to hear him lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 175.

18 If thou deny'st it, twenty times thou liest;
And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,
Where it was forged, with my rapier's point.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 38.

19 Like one
Who having into truth, by telling of it,

Made such a sinner of his memory,
To credit his own lie.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 99.

A phrase which has puzzled the commentators. Boswell explains it: "Who having made his memory such a sinner as to credit his own lie by telling of it."

It was generally believed that he was indeed Duke Richard. Nay, himself with long and continual counterfeiting and with oft telling a lie, was turned by habit almost into the thing he seemed to be, and from a liar into a believer.

FRANCIS BACON, History of Henry VII.

1
An egg is not so full of meat as she is full of lies.

JOHN STILL, Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act v, sc. 2. (1565)

Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 1, 24.

2
An experienced, industrious, ambitious, and often quite picturesque liar.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Chinese Nightingale.

Life is the west-going dream—storms' breath,
Life is a dream, the sigh of the skies,
The breath of the stars, that nod on their pillows
With their golden hair mussed over their eyes.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Ghost of the Buffaloes.

13
Life is a mission. Every other definition of life is false, and leads all who accept it astray. Religion, science, philosophy, though still at variance upon many points, all agree in this, that every existence is an aim.

MAZZINI, Life and Writings. Ch. 5.

14
Life is a flame that is always burning itself out, but it catches fire again every time a child is born.

BERNARD SHAW, The Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God.

Life is a flame whose splendor hides its base.

GEORGE TUFTS, in letter to Emerson, (See Journal, 1868.)

15
Life is an arrow—therefore you must know
What mark to aim at, how to use the bow—
Then draw it to the head, and let it go!

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Arrow.

Life is an archer, fashioning an arrow

With anxious care, for in it life must trust;
A single flash across the earthly spaces
Straight to the throat of death—one conquering thrust!

CATHERINE CATE COLENTZ, Life.

1 Yet I know that I dwell in the midst of the roar of the Cosmic Wheel
In the hot collision of Forces, and the clangour of boundless Strife, Mid the sound of the speed of worlds, the rushing worlds, and the peal
Of the thunder of Life.

WILLIAM WATSON, Dawn on the Headland.

2 Our lives are albums written through
With good or ill, with false or true;
And as the blessed angels turn
The pages of our years,
God grant they read the good with smiles,
And blot the ill with tears!

WHITTIER, Written in a Lady's Album.

3 Our lives are songs; God writes the words
And we set them to music at pleasure;
And the song grows glad, or sweet or sad,
As we choose to fashion the measure.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Our Lives. Wrongfully claimed for Rev. Thomas Gibbons. (See Notes and Queries, 1 April, 1905, p. 249.)

II—Life: Definitions: The Pessimists

4 Life is the apprenticeship to progressive renunciation, to the steady diminution of our claims, of our hopes, of our powers, of our liberty.

AMIEL, Journal, 22 Oct., 1856.

Life is only a document to be interpreted.

AMIEL, Journal, 9 Sept., 1880.

5 Life is a school of probability.

BAGNOT, Literary Studies. Vol. II, p. 257.

6 Life, Crichton, is like a cup of tea; the more heartily we drink the sooner we reach the dregs.

J. M. BARRIE, The Admirable Crichton. Act I.

Life is a long lesson in humility.

J. M. BARRIE, The Little Minister. Ch. 3.

The life of every man is a diary in which he means to write one story, and writes another, and his humblest hour is when he compares the volume as it is with what he vowed to make it.

J. M. BARRIE, (Golden Book, Jan., 1931.)

7 Life is a bumper filled by fate.

THOMAS BLACKLOCK, Epigram on Punch.

8 Do what you will, this life's a fiction,
And is made up of contradiction.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Gnomia Verses. No. 23.

9 Life is all a variorum.

BURNS, The Jolly Beggars.

10

Life is like playing a violin solo in public and learning the instrument as one goes on.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, *Collected
Essays*. Vol. II, p. 93.

Life is the art of drawing sufficient conclusions from insufficient premises.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-books,
p. 10.

Life is one long process of getting tired.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-books,
p. 11.

To live is like to love—all reason is against it,
and all healthy instinct for it.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-books,
p. 227.

11 Life is a dusty corridor, I say,
Shut at both ends.

ROY CAMPBELL, The Flaming Terrapin. Pt. I.

How could life annoy me Any more?

Life: a lighted window And a closed door.

CLEMENT WOOD, I Pass a Lighted Window.

12 Ask what is human life—the sage replies,
With disappointment low'ring in his eyes,
"A painful passage o'er a restless flood,
A vain pursuit of fugitive false good,
A sense of fancied bliss and heartfelt care,
Closing at last in darkness and despair."
COWPER, Hope, l. 1.

To most, man's life but showed
A bridge of groans across a stream of tears.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus. Sc. 15.

13 Life is one demd horrid grind!

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 64. Mr.
Mantolini speaking.

14 Life's a tumble-about thing of ups and downs.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. I, ch. 8.

The teeter-board of life goes up,
The teeter-board of life goes down,
The sweetest face must learn to frown;
The biggest dog has been a pup.

JOAQUIN MILLER, William Brown of Oregon.

15 Life is a jest, and all things show it:
I thought so once, but now I know it.

JOHN GAY, My Own Epitaph.

Ah! Matt, old age has brought to me
Thy wisdom, less thy certainty;
The world's a jest, and joy's a trinket;
I knew that once, but now I think it.

J. K. STEPHEN, Senex to Motti Prior.

16 Life is made up of interruptions.

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act I.

17 Who but knows How it goes!—
Life's a last year's Nightingale,
Love a last year's Rose.

W. E. HENLEY, Echoes. No. 43.

Life is (I think) a blunder and a shame.

W. E. HENLEY, In Hospital: Waiting.

Life is a smoke that curls—

Curls in a flickering skein,
That winds and whisks and whirls,
A filament thin and vain,
Into the vast inane.

W. E. HENLEY, Of the Nothingness of Things.

Life is made up of sobs, sniffles, and smiles,
with sniffles predominating.

O. HENRY, Gifts of the Magi.

Life is a great bundle of little things.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

Life is not to be bought with heaps of gold;
Not all Apollo's Pythian treasures hold,
Or Troy once held, in peace and pride of sway,
Can bribe the poor possession of a day!

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. ix, l. 524. (Pope, tr.)

Life is not to be purchased at any price. (Non omni pretio vita emenda est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 7.

Life is just one damned thing after another.

Claimed by ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 137. (1911) Attributed, probably correctly, to Frank Ward O'Malley, in United Press story of his death, 19 Oct., 1932, and in Literary Digest, 5 Nov., 1932.

As I allays says to my brother,
If it isn't one thing it's the tother.

H. L. C. PEMBERTON, Geese: A Dialogue.

"I expect," he said, "I was thinking jest what a Rum Go everything is. I expect it was something like that."

H. G. WELLS, Kipps. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 8.

Life is progress from want to want, not from enjoyment to enjoyment.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life. Vol. iii, p. 53.)

Life is a leaf of paper white
Whereon each one of us may write
His word or two, and then comes night.

J. R. LOWELL, For an Autograph. St. 2.

Life is like a scrambled egg.

DON MARQUEZ, Frustration.

Life's a long headache in a noisy street.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street.

Life is a waste of wearisome hours,
Which seldom the rose of enjoyment
adorns,

And the heart that is soonest awake to the flowers,

Is always the first to be touch'd by the thorns.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh! Think Not My Spirits.

This life is all checker'd with pleasures and woes.
THOMAS MOORE, This Life Is All Checker'd.

Our life is but a pilgrimage of blasts,
And every blast brings forth a fear;
And every fear, a death.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Hieroglyph, lli, 4.

Real life is, to most men, a long second-best,
a perpetual compromise between the ideal and the possible.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Study of Mathematics.

Life is not a spectacle or a feast; it is a predicament.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Articles and Essays.

Life is a sorry mélange of gold and silver and stubble,
Of roses and wormwood and weeds, of rubies and rubble.

R. H. SCHAUFFLER, Nonsense.

Life is a shuttle.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act v, sc. 1, l. 25. Quoting a proverb.

Does not our life consist of the four elements?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 10. Referring to fire, water, earth, and air.

What is the life of man! Is it not to shift from side to side?—from sorrow to sorrow?
—to button up one cause of vexation, and unbutton another?

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iv, ch. 31.

When all is done, human life is, at the greatest and best, but like a froward child, that must be played with and humoured a little to keep it quiet till it falls asleep, and then the care is over.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, Discourse of Poetry. Last sentence. (1680)

Life at the greatest and best is but a froward child, that must be humoured and coaxed a little till it falls asleep, and then all the care is over.

GOLOSMTIH, The Good-Natured Man. Act 1. (1768) Goldsmith gives no indication that he is quoting.

Life is simply a mauvais quart d'heure made up of exquisite moments.

OSCAR Wilde, A Woman of No Importance. Act ii.

III—Life: Definitions: The Philosophers

Life does not proceed by the association and addition of elements, but by dissociation and division.

HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. 1.

For life is tendency, and the essence of a tendency is to develop in the form of a sheaf, creating, by its very growth, divergent directions among which its impetus is divided.

HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. 2.

Life appears as a wave which rises, and which is opposed by the descending movement of matter. At one point alone it passes freely, dragging with it the obstacle which will weigh on its progress but will not stop it. At this point is humanity.

HENRI BERGSON. (Newton, My Idea of God, p. 117.)

1 Life is like a library owned by an author. In it are a few books which he wrote himself, but most of them were written for him.

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK, Sermon: Life.

2 This Being of mine, whatever it really is, consists of a little flesh, a little breath, and the ruling Reason.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 2.

Deem not life a thing of consequence; look at the infinite void of the future, and the limitless space of the past.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 50.

3 Our life consisteth partly in folly, and partly in wisdom.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

4 Life is a fortress which neither you nor I know anything about.

NAPOLEON, Remark, to Dr. Antonomarchi, at St. Helena.

5 Life is that which holds matter together.

PORPHYRY. (EMERSON, Considerations by the Way.)

6 Life is neither a good nor an evil; it is simply the place where good and evil exist. (Vita nec bonum nec malum est; boni ac mali locus est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. xcix, 12.

7 Life is the co-ordination of actions.

HERBERT SPENCER, A Theory of Population. (Westminster Review, April, 1852.) Repeated in Principles of Biology. Pt. i, ch. 4, sec. 24.

A living thing is distinguished from a dead thing by the multiplicity of the changes at any moment taking place in it.

HERBERT SPENCER, Principles of Biology, i, 4, 25.

8 Then, what is life? I cried.

PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY, The Triumph of Life, l. 544. The first line of the last stanza written by Shelley the day before his death.

No power of genius has ever yet had the smallest success in explaining existence. The perfect enigma remains.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

The mystery of life is not a problem to be solved, it is a reality to be experienced.

VAN DER LEEUW, The Conquest of Illusion, 11.

9 Life's a very funny proposition you can bet, And no one's solved the problem properly as yet;

Young for a day, then old and gray, . . .

Life's a very funny proposition after all.

GEORGE M. COHAN, Life's a Funny Proposition. (From Little Johnny Jones, 1907.)

IV—Life: Apothegms

10 The less of routine, the more of life.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Habits.

Who but the learned and dull moral fool Could gravely have foreseen man ought to live by rule?

APHRA BEEN, The Golden Age. St. 7.

11 Life is short to the fortunate, long to the unfortunate. (Βραχὺς ὁ βίος ἀσπάρῃ καὶ μακρόν, μακρόν τε καὶ πένος.)

APOLLONIUS. (STOBEUS, Florilegium. Pt. cxxi, l. 34.)

O life! an age to the miserable, a moment to the happy. (O vita! misero longa, felici brevis.)

BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 36.

How short this Life, how long withal; how false its weal, how true its woe, This fever-fit with paroxysms to mark its opening and its close.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. iii, st. 23.

For men who are fortunate all life is short, but for the unfortunate one night is infinite time.

LUCIAN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 28.)

12 Who saw life steadily and saw it whole.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, To a Friend. Referring to Sophocles.

13 Weariness of life. (Tedium vitæ.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. vi, ch. 18, sec. 11.

14 Life, like poverty, makes strange bedfellows.

BULWER-LYTTON, The Caxtons. Pt. iv, ch. 4.

15 On the Rampage, Pip, and off the Rampage, Pip; such is life.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 15.

"Sairey," said Mrs. Harris, "such is life. Vich likewise is the head of all things."

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 29. Mrs. Gamp speaking.

16 "A porochial life, ma'am," continued Mr. Bumble, "is a life of woe."

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 17.

17 Man's life is but seventy salads long.

EMERSON, Essays; Second Series: Nature.

Life is eating us. We shall be fables presently.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

Life's well enough, but we shall be glad to get out of it, and they will all be glad to have us.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

We live ruins amid ruins.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Domestic Life.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 9.

* VI—Life, A Bubble

See also Man: A Bubble; World: A Bubble

7
The world's a bubble, and the life of man less than a span;
In his conception wretched, from the womb
so to the tomb:
Curst from his cradle, and brought up to years with cares and fears.
Who then to frail mortality shall trust,
But limns on water, or but writes in dust.

SIR FRANCIS BACON, The World. A paraphrase of a Greek epigram by Posidippus. Sometimes wrongly attributed to Sir Henry Wot-ton. Izaak Walton, a friend of Wotton, definitely ascribed it to Bacon. (Relique Wottoniance, p. 513. 1651.) Positively ascribed to Bacon by Thomas Farnaby, a contemporary and a scholar. (Florilegium Epigrammatum. 1629.)

What life shall a man choose? In court and mart
Are quarrels and hard dealing; cares at home;
Labors by land; terrors at sea; abroad,
Either the fear of losing what thou hast,
Or worse, nought left to lose; if wedded, much Discomfort; comfortless unwed; a life
With children troubled, incomplete without:
Youth foolish, age outworn. Qf these two choose then;

Or never to be born, or straight to die.
POSIDIPPUS (or PLATO, the Comic Poet).
(Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 359.)

8
How little do we know that which we are!
How less what we may be! The eternal surge

Of time and tide rolls on, and bears afar
Our bubbles.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 99.

9
This life's a hollow bubble,
Don't you know?
Just a painted piece of trouble,
Don't you know?

We come to earth to cwy,
We grow oldeh and we sigh,
Oldeh still and then we die,

Don't you know?

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, Fin de Stick. Referring to "Harvard indifference." See under INDIFFERENCE.

10
Life is mostly froth and bubble;
Two things stand like stone:
KINDNESS in another's trouble,
COURAGE in your own.

A. L. GORDON, Ye Weary Wayfarer. Fytte viii.

11
If Life an empty bubble be,
How sad for those who cannot see
The rainbow in the bubble!

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, Bramble-Rise.

12
And fear not lest Existence closing your Account and mine, should know the like no
more:

The Eternal Saki from that Bowl has poured

Millions of Bubbles like us, and will pour.
OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubdydt. St. 46. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

13
Man's life is but a jest,
A dream, a shadow, bubble, air, a vapour at the best.

G. W. THORNBURY, The Jester's Sermon.

For what are men who grasp at praise sublime,
But bubbles on the rapid stream of time,
That rise, and fall, that swell, and are no more,
Born, and forgot, ten thousand in an hour?

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 285.

VII—Life: A Disease

14
This strange disease of modern life,
With its sick hurry, its divided aims.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Scholar Gipsy. St.
21.

15
Why do not you look at this miserable little life, with all its ups and downs, as I do? At the very wont, 'tis but a scratch, a temporary ill, to be soon cured by that dear old doctor, Death.

EDWIN BOOTH, Letter to William Winter, 1886.

1 Let Nature and let Art do what they please,
When all is done, Life's an incurable disease.

All covet life, yet call it pain:

All feel the ill, yet shun the cure.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epigram Written in Mazarin's History of France.

5 It is silliness to live when to live is torment; and then have we a prescription to die when death is our physician.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 309.

VIII—Life: A Dream

6 Now that I've come

To this place—alone—

Life is a spent dream

And a gray stone.

VERNE BRIGHT, Gray Stone.

7 We shall start up, at last awake
From Life, that insane dream we take
For waking now, because it seems.

ROBERT BROWNING, Easter-Day. Sec. 14.

Life is an empty dream.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. II.

Life and love are all a dream.

BURNS, Lament.

Life is a dream. (La vida es sueño.)

CALDERON. Title of Comedy.

8 Now the summer prime is her blithest rhyme
In the being and the seeming,
And they that have heard the overword
Know life's a dream worth dreaming.

W. E. HENLEY, Echoes. No. 33.

9 Life is a kind of Sleep. old men sleep longest,
nor begin to wake but when they are to die.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 11.

Love to his soul gave eyes; he knew things are not as they seem.

The dream is his real life: the world around him is the dream.

F. T. PALGRAVE, Dream of Maxim Wledig.

10 To treat the whole spectacle as a dream withio a dream, from which it is still possible that death may awaken us.

13 For life is but a dream whose shapes return,
Some frequently, some seldom.

JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night.
Pt. i, st. 3.

Life a dream in Death's eternal sleep.

JAMES THOMSON, Philosophy.

14 Life, believe, is not a dream,

So dark as sages say;
Oft a little morning rain

Foretells a pleasant day!

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Life.

Tell me not, in mournful numbers,

Life is but an empty dream!—

For the soul is dead that slumbers,

And things are not what they seem.

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. St. 1.

Sing it not in mournful numbers. (Singet nicht in Trauertönen.)

IX—Life: A Game

15 The heroes of ancient and modern fame . . .
have treated life and fortune as a game to be well and skilfully played, but the stake not to be so valued but that any time it could be held a trifle light as air, and thrown up.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

As a rule, the game of life is worth playing, but the struggle is the prize.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Will and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 199.)

16 But helpless Pieces of the Game He plays Upon this Chequer-board of Nights and Days;

Hither and thither moves, and checks, and slays,

And one by one back in the Closet lays.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubaiyat. St. 69. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

The chess-board is the world, the pieces are the phenomena of the universe, the rules of the game are what we call the laws of Nature. The player on the other side is hidden from us. We know that his play is always fair, just, and patient. But also we know, to our cost, that he never overlooks a mistake, or makes the smallest allowance for ignorance.

HUXLEY, Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews: A Liberal Education.

While we least think it he prepares his Mate.
Mate, and the King's pawn played, it never ceases,

Though all the earth is dust of taken pieces.

JOHN MASKFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Streets. Pt. 4, last lines.

We are puppets, Man in his pride, and Beauty fair in her flower;

Do we move ourselves, or are moved by an unseen hand at a game

That pushes us off from the board, and others ever succeed?

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 126.

I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 4, l. 9.

Life will always remain a gamble, with prizes sometimes for the imprudent, and blanks so often to the wise.

JEROME K. JEROME.

We are in the world like men playing at tables; the chance is not in our power, but to play it is; and when it is fallen, we must manage it as we can.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living and Dying: Of Contentedness. Sec. 2.

The life of man is like a game with dice: if you don't get the throw you want, you must show your skill in making the best of the throw you do get. (Ita vitast hominum quasi quom ludas tessaris: Si illud quod maxime opus est jacta non cadit, illud quod cecidit forte, id arte ut corrigas.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 739.

Life is a game of whist. From unseen sources
The cards are shuffled, and the hands are dealt.

Blind are our efforts to control the forces
That, though unseen, are no less strongly felt.

I do not like the way the cards are shuffled,
But yet I like the game and want to play;
And through the long, long night will I, unruffled,

Play what I get, until the break of day.

EUGENE F. WARE, Whist.

Life is a game of whist
Between Man and Nature
In which Nature knows all Man's cards.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Handicapped.

X—Life: An Inn

We are all but Fellow-Travelers,
Along Life's weary way;
If any man can play the pipes,

In God's name, let him play.

JOHN BENNETT, Fellow-Travelers.

Way with funeral music—set

The pipe to powerful lips—

The cup of life's for him that drinks

And not for him that sips.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Cup of Life.

A fair, where thousands meet, but none can stay;

An inn, where travellers bait, then post away.

ISAAC HAWKINS BROWNE, Immortality of the Soul. (Tr. from the Latin by Soame Jenyns.)

For the world I count it not an inn, but an hospital, and a place not to live, but to die in.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 11.

Archbishop Leighton used often to say that if he were to choose a place to die in, it should be an inn; it looking like a pilgrim's going home, to whom this world was all as an inn, and who was weary with the noise and confusion in it. . . . And he obtained what he desired, for he died at the Bell Inn in Warwick Lane.

GILBERT BURNET, History of My Own Times.

This world is but a thoroughfare full of woe,
And we but pilgrims passing to and fro.

Death is an end of every worldly sore.

CHAUCER, The Knight's Tale, l. 1389.

Like pilgrims to th' appointed place we tend;
The world's an inn, and death the journey's end.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. iii, l. 887.

I depart from life as from an inn, and not as from my home. (Ex vita discedo, tamquam ex hospitio, non tamquam e domo.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 23, sec. 84.

We are in this life as it were in another man's house. . . . In heaven is our home, in the world is our Inn: do not so entertain thyself in the Inn of this world for a day as to have thy mind withdrawn from longing after thy heavenly home.

PAUL GERHARDT, Meditations. No. 38. (1630)

One doth but breakfast here, another dine;
he that lives longest does but sup; we must all go to bed in another World.

JOSEPH HENSHAW, BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH, Horæ Succisivæ, p. 20. (1631)

Man's life is like unto a winter's day,—
Some break their fast and so depart away;
Others stay dinner, then depart full fed;
The longest age but sups and goes to bed.
O reader, then behold and see

As we are now, so must you be.

Attributed to Bishop Henshawe, but probably an elaboration by an unknown hand of the quotation from Horæ Succisivæ given above. Variations of the stanza were used frequently as epitaphs.

Our Life is nothing but a Winter's day;
Some only break their Fast, and so away;
Others stay to Dinner, and depart full fed;
The deepest Age but Sups, and goes to Bed:
He's most in debt that lingers out the Day:
Who dies betime, has less, and less to pay.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Dream of Francies: On the Life of Man. (1633)

The life of man is a winter's day, and a winter's way.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Man's life is like a Winter's day:
Some only breakfast and away;
Others to dinner stay and are full fed,
The oldest man but sups and goes to bed.
Long is his life who lingers out the day,
Who goes the soonest has the least to pay;
Death is the Waiter, some few run on tick,
And some alas! must pay the bill to Nick!
Tho' I owed much, I hope long trust is given,
And truly mean to pay all bills in Heaven.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, Barnwell Churchyard, near Cambridge, England.

1
This life at best is but an inn,
And we the passengers.

JAMES HOWELL, A Fit of Mortification.

Nor is this lower world but a huge inn,
And men the rambling passengers.

JAMES HOWELL, The Voss. (Prefixed to his Familiar Letters.)

2
I came at morn; 'twas spring, I smiled,
The fields with green were clad;
I walked abroad at noon, and lo!
'Twas summer—I was glad;
I sate me down; 'twas autumn eve,
And I with sadness wept;
I laid me down at night, and then
'Twas winter, and I slept.

MARY PYTEL, Epitaph: A Life.

3
Many mortals given up to the belly and to sleep, uninstructed and uncultured, have passed through life like sojourners in strange lands; whose bodies indeed have been given up to pleasure, and their souls to a heavy burden. (Multi mortales dediti ventri atque somno, indocti, incultique vitam sicuti peregrinantes transiere; quibus profecto contra naturam corpus voluptati, anima oneri.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. 2, sec. 8.

4
This body is not a home but an inn, and that only for a short time. (Nec domum esse hoc corpus, sed hospitium, et quidem breve hospitium.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. cxx, 14.

Born for a very brief space of time, we regard this life as an inn which we are soon to quit that it may be made ready for the coming guest.

SENECA, Ad Polybium de Consolatione. Sec. 21.

Making a perpetual mansion of this poor halting-place.

SIR PHILIP SMYTH, Arcadia.

XI—Life: An Isthmus

5
Many witty authors compare the present time to an isthmus, or narrow neck of land, that rises in the midst of an ocean, immeasurably diffused on either side of it.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 590.

There is an eternity behind and an eternity before, and this little speck in the center, however long, is comparatively but a minute.

JOHN BROWN, after his arrest at Harper's Ferry, in October, 1859.

6
The poorest day that passes over us is the conflux of two Eternities; it is made up of currents that issue from the remotest Past and flow onwards into the remotest Future.

CARLYLE, Essays: Signs of the Times.

One life;—a little gleam of Time between two Eternities.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 5.

7
As stand we perch on point of Time, betwixt the two Eternities,

Whose awful secrets gathering round with black profound oppress our eyes.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ii, st. 4.

8
Life is a fragment, a moment between two eternities, influenced by all that has preceded, and to influence all that follows. The only way to illumine it is by extent of view.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Note-book: Life.

Vain, weak-built isthmus, which dost proudly rise
Up between two eternities!

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Life and Fame. l. 18.

10
Life is a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities. We strive in vain to look beyond the heights.

R. G. INGERSOLL, At His Brother's Grave.

What shall we call this undetermin'd state,
This narrow isthmus 'twixt two boundless oceans,

That whence we came, and that to which we tend?

GEORGE LIZLO, Arden of Feversham. Act III, sc. 2.

Life, as we call it, is nothing but the edge of the boundless ocean of existence where it comes on soundings.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 5.

12
Remember that man's life lies all within this present, as 't were but a hair's breadth of time; as for the rest, the past is gone, the future may never be. Short, therefore, is man's life, and narrow is the corner of the earth wherein he dwells.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. III, sec. 10.

This narrow isthmus 'twixt two boundless seas,

The past, the future, two eternities!

THOMAS MOORE, *Lalla Rookh: The Veiled
Prophet of Khorassan*. St. 42.

Placed on this isthmus of a middle state.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 3.

³ Amid two seas, on one small point of land,
Wenried, uncertain, and amaz'd we stand.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vanity of Human Wishes. Pt. iii, l. 616.

Lo! on a narrow neck of land,

'Twixt two unbounded seas, I stand.

CHARLES WESLEY, *O God Mine Inmost Soul
Convert*.

⁴ I desire to have both heaven and hell ever in my eye, while I stand on this isthmus of life, between two boundless oceans.

JOHN WESLEY, Letter to Charles Wesley, 1747.

XII—Life: A Medley

⁵ From fibers of pain and hope and trouble
And toil and happiness,—one by one,—
Twisted together, or single or double,

The varying thread of our life is spun

Hope shall cheer though the chain be galling;

Light shall come though the gloom be falling;

Faith will list for the Master calling

Our hearts to his rest,—when the day is done

A. B. BRADDON, When the Day Is Done.

Life is patchwork—here and there,

Scraps of pleasure and despair

Join together, hit or miss

ANNE BRONAUGH, Patchwork.

⁶ He fixed thee 'mid this dance
Of plastic circumstance.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra.

⁷ How many lives we live in one,

And how much less than one, in all!

ALICE CARY, Life's Mysteries.

⁸ What is it but a map of busy life,
Its fluctuations, and its vast concerns?

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 55.

⁹ In real life serious things and mere trifles, laughable things and things that cause pain, are wont to be mixed in strangest medley. It is necessary, then, that Tragedy, as being a mirror of life, must leave room for an 'element of comic humour.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry.

¹⁰ Half my life is full of sorrow,

Half of joy, still fresh and new;

One of these lives is a fancy,

But the other one is true.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Dream-Life.

¹¹ The Fates and Furies, as well as the Graces and Sirens, glide with linked hands over life.
(Die Parzen und Furien ziehen auch mit verbundnen Händen um das Leben, wie die Gra-zien und die Sirenen.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 140.

¹² Twist ye, twine ye! even so
Mingle shades of joy and woe,
Hope and fear, and peace, and strife,
In the thread of human life.

SCOTT, Guy Monnering. Ch. 4.

¹³ We have two lives:
The soul of man is like the rolling world,
One half in day, the other dipt in night;
The one has music and the flying cloud,
The other, silence and the wakeful stars.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Horton, l. 76.

¹⁴ Emblem of man, who, after all his moaning
And strain of dire immeasurable strife,
Has yet this consolation, all atoning—
Life, as a windmill, grinds the bread of Life.

LORD DE TAFFY, The Windmill

¹⁵ Through all the changing scenes of life,
In trouble and in joy

TATE AND BRADY, Psalms xxxiv

¹⁶ Our life contains a thousand springs,
And dies if one be gone.

Strange 'that a harp of thousand strings

Should keep in tune so long

ISAAC WATTS, Hymns. Bk. ii, No. 19.

¹⁷ Since well I've played my part, all clap your hands:

And from the stage dismiss me with applause

(Ἐπεὶ ἔτι πάντι καλῶς πέπαισται, δότε κρότον καὶ πάντες ἡμᾶς μετὰ χαρὰν προπέμψατε)

CÆSAR AUGUSTUS, Epigram, as he lay dying

The Emperor had called in his friends, and asked them whether it seemed to them that he had played the comedy of life fitly

(ecquid illi videretur mimum vitæ com-mode transgisse), and then spoke the epigram given above, sent them away, and died shortly afterwards. (SUETONIUS, Twelve Cæsars: Augustus. Ch. 90, sec. 1.)

¹⁸ The human comedy (La comédie humaine) HONORÉ DE BALZAC. The general title of his novels, adopted in 1842

Sit the comedy out, and that done,
When the Play's at an end, let the Curtain fall down

THOMAS FLATMAN, The Whim.

¹⁹ Remember that you are an actor in a play, the character of which is determined by the Playwright: if He wishes the play to be short.

it is short; if long, it is long; if He wishes you to play the part of a beggar, remember to act even this role adroitly. For this is your business: to play admirably the role assigned to you, but the selection of that role is Another's.

EPICETUS [?], Encheiridion. Sec. 17.

1 So likewise all this life of mortal man, what is it but a kind of stage play, where men come forth, disguised one in one array, and another in another, each playing his part?

ERASMUS, Praise of Folly.

For though the most be players, some must be spectators

BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Fuis et Probis.

Life is a tragedy wherein we sit as spectators for a while, and then act out our part in it.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

2 The endless mime goes on; new faces come,
New mummers babbie in each other's ears;
And some wear masks of woe, of laughter some,
Nor know they play Life's Comedy of Tears

JAMES B. KENYON, The Play.

3 Life has its heroes and its villains, its sou-brettes and its ingenues, and all roles may be acted well.

J. W. KRUTCH, The Modern Temper.

4 Life is a stage, so learn to play your part,
Laying gravity aside, or learn to bear its griefs.
(Σκηνὴ νῆς ὁ βίος καὶ πᾶσι βίον ἢ μᾶλ' ἄλγεα, τὴν σκηνὴν μεταβίβας, ἢ φέρει τὰς δόξας.)

PALLADAS, (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 72.)

This life a theatre we well may call,
Where every actor must perform with art,
Or laugh it through, and make a farce of all,
Or learn to bear with grace his tragic part.

PALLADAS, (Greek Anthology, x, 72. Bland, tr.)

If character be fate, no need to ask
Who set the stage, who cast you for the role;
Put on what men you are, put off the mask,
Put on the tragic pattern of your soul. . . .
Let him who plays the monarch be a king,
Who plays the rogue, be perfect in his part.

JOHN ERSKINE, At the Front, Sonnet iv.

5 My soul, sit thou a patient looker-on;
Judge not the play before the play is done:
Her plot hath many changes; every day
Speaks a new scene; the last act crowns the play.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Respice Finem.

6 Draw the curtain, the farce is played out.
(Tirez le rideau, la farce est jouée.)

RABELAIS, dying words, as he expired in a fit of laughter. (Works. Vol. i, p. 17. Dupont, ed., Paris, 1865.)

7 There is no incidental music to the dramas of real life.

SAX ROHMER, Insidious Dr. Fu Manchu. Ch. 9.

8 It is with life as with a play—it matters not how long the action is spun out, but how good the acting is. (Quomodo fabula, sic vita non quam diu, sed quam bene acta sit, refert.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvii, 20.

'Tis not the mere stage of life but the part we play thereon that gives the value. (Nicht der Tummelplatz des Lebens—sein Gehalt bestimmt seinen Werth.)

SCHILLER, Fiesco. Act iii, sc. 2.

9 Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 23.

10 Life's a long tragedy; this globe the stage,
Well fix'd and well adorn'd with strong machines,
Gay fields, and skies, and seas; the actors

many;

The plot immense.

ISAAC WATTS, Epistle to Mitio. Pt. i, l. 1.

For they are blest that have not much to rue—
That have not oft misheard the prompter's cue,
Stammered and stumbled, and the wrong parts played,

And life a Tragedy of Errors made.

WILLIAM WATSON, To a Friend.

Fate has written a tragedy; its name is "The Human Heart,"

The Theatre is the House of Life, Woman the mummer's part;

The Devil enters the prompter's box and the play is ready to start.

ROBERT W. SERVICE, The Harpy.

XIV—Life: A Tale

11 Every man's life is a fairy-tale written by God's fingers.

HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN, Works: Preface.

12 Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 109.

13 Life . . . is a tale

Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 26.

14 Life's but a span, or a tale, or a word,
That in a trice, or sudden, is rehearsed.
UNKNOWN, A Friend's Advice. (Roxburghe Ballads, li.)

XV—Life: A Voyage

15 We mortals cross the ocean of this world
Each in his average cabin of a life;

The best's not big, the worst yields elbow-room.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Most men make the voyage of life as if they carried sealed orders which they were not to open till they were fairly in mid-ocean.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Dante.

Life hath set No landmarks before us.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto v, sec. 14.

Life's a voyage that's homeward bound.

HERMAN MELVILLE. (COURNOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 87.)

Life is a perilous voyage. (Πλοῦς σφαλερὸς τὸ ἔργον.)

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, No. 65.)

Humble voyagers are we,
O'er Life's dim, unsounded sea,
Seeking only some calm clime;—
Touch us gently, gentle Time.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Middle Age.

O'er Ocean, with a thousand masts, sails forth
the stripling bold—

One boat, hard rescued from the deep, draws into port the old!

SCHILLER, Votive Tablets: Expectation and Fulfilment.

Life's uncertain voyage.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act v, sc. 1, l. 205.

Life is a voyage. The winds of life come strong
From every point; yet each will speed thy course along,

If thou with steady hand when tempests blow Canst keep thy course aright and never once let go.

THEODORE WILLIAMS, The Voyage of Life.

Old and young we are all on our last cruise.
R. L. STEVENSON, Crabbed Age and Youth.

XVI—Life: The Conduct of Life

Whilst I yet live, let me not live in vain.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4.

One must have lived greatly whose record would bear the full light of day from beginning to its close.

A. B. ALCOCK, Table Talk: Learning.

From fields of sense, and mines of thought,
Threads of life are twisted and wrought:
We are weaving Character, weaving Fate,
And Human History, little and great.

WILLIAM ALLINOMAM, Blackberries.

Let us be patient, tender, wise, forgiving,
In this strange task of living;

For if we fail each other, each will be
Grey driftwood lapsing to the bitter sea.

MARTIN ARMSTRONG, Body and Spirit.

For like a child, sent with a fluttering light
To feel his way along a gusty night,
Man walks the world. Again, and yet again,
The lamp shall be by fits of passion slain;
But shall not He who sent him from the door
Relight the lamp once more, and yet once more?
ATTAR, Manik-ut-Tahr. (Fitzgerald, tr.) See
Letters and Literary Remains of Edward Fitzgerald. Vol. ii, p. 457.

I live for those who love me, for those who know me true;
For the heaven that smiles above me, and awaits my spirit too;
For the cause that lacks assistance, for the wrong that needs resistance,
For the future in the distance, and the good that I can do.

Who first misuse, then cast their toys away.
COWPER, Hope, l. 127.

God asks no man whether he will accept life.
That is not the choice. You must take it. The only choice is how.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.

HORATIUS BONAR, Be True.

Do what thy manhood bids thee do, from none
but self expect applause;
He noblest lives and noblest dies who makes and keeps his self-made laws.

All other Life is living Death, a world where none but Phantoms dwell,
A breath, a wind, a sound, a voice, a tinkling of the camel-bell.

sts. 37-8.

To seek the True, to glad the heart, such is of life the Higher Law.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix, st.
28.

All is centred in a life intense,
Where not a beam, nor air, nor leaf is lost,
But hath a part of being.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 89.

To live content with small means; to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy, not respectable, and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasion, busy never; in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious grow up through the common: this is to be my symphony.

WILLIAM HENRY CHANNING, My Symphony.

Walk sober off, before a sprightlier age
Comes tit't'ring on, and shoves you from the stage.

12 The rules for a happy life. (Vitæ præcepta beatæ.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 4, l. 95.

Amid hopes and cares, amid fears and passions, believe every day that dawns to be your last.
Welcome will come to you another hour un-hoped for. (Inter spem curamque, timores inter et iras, Omnem crede diem tibi diluxisse supremum. Grata superveniet, quæ non sperabitur hora.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epls. 4, l. 12.

13 You'll see that, since our fate is ruled by chance,

Each man, unknowing, great,
Should frame life so that at some future hour
Fact and his dreamings meet.

VICTOR HUGO, To His Orphan Grandchildren.

14 Life must be filled up, and the man who is not capable of intellectual pleasures must content himself with such as his senses can afford.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (MISS PROZEL, Johnsoniana.)

That kind of life is most happy which affords us the most opportunities of gaining our own esteem.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ix, p. 114.

1 What a deal of cold business doth a man mispend the better part of life in! in scattering compliments, tendering visits, gathering and venting news, following feasts and plays, making a little winter-love in a dark corner.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Jactura Vitæ.

2 A sacred burden is this life ye bear:
Look on it, lift it, bear it solemnly,
Stand up and walk beneath it steadfastly.
Fail not for sorrow, falter not for sin,
But onward, upward, till the goal ye win.

FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE, Lines Addressed to the Young Gentlemen Leaving the Lenox Academy, Mass.

3 Who laughs in motley to the crowded court,
And makes for idle days an idle sport,
May teach us yet, in life's impartial school,
'Tis we wear asses' ears and play the fool.

JAMES B. KENYON, The Harlequin.

4 Measure thy life by loss instead of gain;
Not by the wine drunk, but by the wine poured forth;
For love's strength standeth in love's sacrifice;

And whoso suffers most hath most to give.

HARRIET ELEANOR KING, The Disciples.

5 Life's all getting and giving,
I've only myself to give.
What shall I do for a living?
I've only one life to live.
End it? I'll not find another.
Spend it? But how shall I best?
Sure the wise plan is to live like a man
And Luck may look after the rest!

RUDYARD KIPPLING, The Wishing-Caps.

6 Children of yesterday, heirs of tomorrow,
What are you weaving? Labor and sorrow?
Look to your looms again. Faster and faster
Fly the great shuttles prepared by the Master.
Life's in the loom! Room for it, room!

MARY A. LATHBURY, Song of Hope.

The years of men are the looms of God, let down from the place of the sun
Wherein we are weaving away, till the mystic web is done—

Weaving blindly, but weaving surely, each for himself his fate.

We may not see how the right side looks: we can only weave and wait.

ARTHUR G. CHRISTIAN, The Tapestry Weavers.

7 And in the wreck of noble lives
Something immortal still survives.

LONGFELLOW, Building of the Ship, l. 375.

What else remains for me?

Youth, hope and love;

To build a new life on a ruined life.

LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora: In the Garden. Pt. viii.

Thus at the flaming forge of life

Our fortunes must be wrought;

Thus on its sounding anvil shaped

Each burning deed and thought.

LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith. St. 8.

8 The freer step, the fuller breath,

The wide horizon's grander view,

The sense of life that knows no death—

The life that maketh all things new.

SAMUEL LONGFELLOW, The Horizon's View.

9 Life may be given in many ways,

And loyalty to Truth be sealed

As bravely in the closet as the field,

So bountiful is fate.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

11 We spend our lives in learning pilotage,

And grow good steersmen when the vessel's crank!

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Wisdom of Eld.

12 To measure life, learn thou betimes, and
know,
Toward solid good what leads the nearest way:

For other things mild Heav'n a time ordains,

And disapproves that care, though wise in show,

That with superfluous burden loads the day,
And when God sends a cheerful hour, refrains,

MILTON, Sonnets: To Cyriac Skinner.

13 My business and my art is to live. (Mon métier et mon art, c'est vivre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

Life and good living—what do we want beside?
(Le vivre et le couvert, que faut-il davantage?)

LA FONTAINE, Fables.

Living is an art; and, to practise it well, men need, not only acquired skill, but also a native tact and taste.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Texts and Pretexts, p. 129.

The finest art, the most difficult to learn, is the art of living.

JOHN MACY, About Women, p. 122.

The art of life is to be so well known at a good restaurant that you can pay with a cheque.

E. V. LUCAS, Over Bemerton's.

It is "to live happily" and not, as Antisthenes declares, "to die happily," which makes human felicity. (C'est "le vivre heureusement," non, comme disoit Antisthenes, "le mourir heureusement," qui fait l'humaine félicité.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

How mean we seem when we look back into our lives!

GEORGE MOORE, Ave, p. 81.

To live as fully, as completely as possible, to be happy, and again to be happy is the true aim and end of life. "Ripeness is all."

LLEWELYN POWYS, Impassioned Clay, p. 94.

It is better to live recklessly and dangerously and even disastrously than not to live at all.

LLEWELYN POWYS, Impassioned Clay, p. 95.

Make no doubt of it, to have had an unhappy life is to have failed in life. It is the one consummate error, and around the death-bed of such a one the very angels weep.

LLEWELYN POWYS, Impassioned Clay, p. 98.

The essential thing is that in this brief interval between darkness and darkness, we should be thrillingly and passionately amused.

JOHN COWPER POWYS.

Since the span of life which we enjoy is short, let us make the memory of our lives as long as possible. (Quoniam vita ipsa qua fruimur brevis est, memoriam nostri quam maxime longam effecere.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 1.

That man alone lives and makes the most of life who devotes himself to some occupation, courting the fame of a glorious deed or a noble career.

SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 2.

Nothing can be meaner than the anxiety to live on, to live on anyhow and in any shape; a spirit with any honour is not willing to live except in its own way, and a spirit with any wisdom is not over-eager to live at all.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 164.

The largest portion of life passes while we are doing ill, a goodly share while we are doing nothing, and the whole while we are doing that which is not to the purpose.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epls. I, sec. 1.

We break up life into little bits and fritter it away. (Diducimus illum in particulas ac lachrimamus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epls. xxxii, 2.

O gentlemen, the time of life is short! To spend that shortness basely were too long. If life did ride upon a dial's point,

Still ending at the arrival of an hour.

And if we live, we live to tread on kings;
If die, brave death, when princes die with us!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 82.

Life is too short to waste
In critic peep or cynic bark,
Quarrel or reprimand;
'Twill soon be dark;
Up! mind thine own aim and
God save the mark!

EMERSON, To J. W.

Life is too short for mean anxieties.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act II, sc. 9.

Reason thus with life:

If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing
That none but fools would keep.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act III, sc. 1, l. 6.

To suffer woes which Hope thinks infinite;
To forgive wrongs darker than death or night;
To defy Power, which seems omnipotent;
To love, and bear, to hope till Hope creates
From its own wreck the thing it contemplates;
Neither to change, nor falter, nor repent;
This, this thy glory, Titan, is to be
Good, great and joyous, beautiful and free;
This is alone Life, Joy, Empire, Victory!

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act iv, l. 570.

There are two things to aim at in life: first, to get what you want; and, after that, to enjoy it. Only the wisest of mankind achieve the second.

LOGAN PEARSALE SMITH, Afterthoughts.

To be honest, to be kind—to earn a little and to spend a little less, to make upon the whole a family happier for his presence, to renounce when that shall be necessary and not be embittered, to keep a few friends but these without capitulation—above all, on the same grim condition to keep friends with himself—here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Christmas Sermon.

To love playthings well as a child, to lead an adventurous and honourable youth, and to settle, when the time arrives, into a green and smiling age, is to be a good artist in life and deserve well of yourself and your neighbour.

R. L. STEVENSON, Crabbed Age and Youth.

Not what we would but what we must Makes up the sum of living;
Heaven is both more and less than just
In taking and in giving.

R. H. STODARD, The Country Life.

The secret of life is not to do what one likes, but to try to like that which one has to do.

DINAH MARIA MULLOCK CRAIK.

⁴ The art of life, of a poet's life, is, not having anything to do, to do something.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 29 April, 1852.

⁵ I'll take life's hazards, rue not hours well wasted,

Hide my heart's wounds, ask no miraculous balm;

And ere I die, perhaps I shall have tasted
At last a little calm.

The mighty blessing "while we live to live."

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 87.

With too much quickness ever to be taught;
With too much thinking to have common
thought:

You purchase pain with all that joy can give,
And die of nothing but a rage to live.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 97.

¹³ We, we live! ours are the hours,
And the living have their claims.
(Wir, wir leben! Unser sind die Stunden Und der Lebende hat Recht.)

SCHILLER, An die Freude. St. 1.

¹⁴ As long as you live, keep learning how to live.
(Quemadmodum vivas, quamdiu vivas.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. lxxvi, sec. 3. Quoted as a proverb.

Even in the longest life real living is the least portion thereof. (Etiam in longissima vita minimum esse, quod vivitur.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. xcix, 12.

Let us balance life's account every day. (Cotidie cum vita paria faciamus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. ci, sec. 8.

Begin at once to live, and count each separate day as a separate life. (Ideo propera vivere e singulos dies singulas vitas puta.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. ci, sec. 10.

Antonio: True; save means to live.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act II, sc. 1, l. 49.

² May you live all the days of your life.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. II.

³ A short life and a merry life, I cry.

JOHN TATHAM, The Rump. Act I. (1660)

⁴ I cannot rest from travel: I will drink Life to the lees.

TENNYSON, Ulysses, l. 6.

⁵ We live not in our moments or our years: The present we fling from us like the rind Of some sweet future, which we after find Bitter to taste.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, To —.

⁶ Enjoy your own lot. (Utere sorte tua.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. XII, l. 932.

Somehow the grace, the bloom of things has flown.

And of all men we are most wretched, who Must live each other's lives and not our own.

OSCAR WILDE, Humanistad. St. 68.

⁷ Set forth the wine and the dice, and perish who thinks of tomorrow!

Here's Death twitching my ear, "Live," says he, "for I'm coming!"

(Pone merum et talos. Pereat, qui crastina curat!)

Mors aurem vellens, "vivite," ait, "venio.")

VERGIL, Copa, l. 37. (Helen Waddell, tr.)

Quoted by Justice O. W. Holmes in radio address on his 90th birthday, 8 March, 1931: "Death plucks my ear and says, 'Live—I am coming.'"

⁸ Since the bounty of Providence is new every day,

As we journey through life let us live by the way.

WALTER WATSON, Sit Down, My Crony.

⁹ Let us live, then, and be glad,

While young life's before us;

After youthful pastime had,

After old age, hard and sad,

Earth will slumber o'er us.

(Gaudemus igitur dum juvenes sumus;

Post jucundam juventutem,

Post molestant senectutem,

Nos habebit humus.)

UNKNOWN, Gaudemus Igitur. (Symonds, tr.)

¹⁰ While we live, let us live. (Dum vivimus, vivamus.)

UNKNOWN. The earliest known appearance of this familiar Latin phrase is in Inscriptiones Græcæ, a medieval collection of proverbs.

Live while you live, the epicure would say, And seize the pleasures of the present day; Live while you live, the sacred preacher cries, And give to God each moment as it flies.

Lord, in my view let both united be;

I live in pleasure when I live to Thee.

DR. PHILIP DODDRIDGE, Epigram on His Family Arms. The motto attached to the arms was "Dum Vivimus, Vivamus."

Others mistrust and say, "But time escapes:

Live now or never!"

He said, "What's time? Leave Now for dogs and apes!

Man has Forever."

ROBERT BROWNING, A Grammarian's Funeral.

¹¹ The pleasures of youth are flowers but of May;

Our Life's but a Vapour, our body's but clay.

Oh, let me live well though I live but one day.

UNKNOWN, The Old Woman's Wishes.

(D'URFEX, Pills to Purge Melancholy. 1661.)

XVIII—Life: I Have Lived!

¹² I die,—but first I have possess'd, And come what may, I have been bless'd.

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1114.

¹³ However, as far as I am concerned, I have lived my time. (Sed mihi quidem βεβιωται.)

CICERO, Epistula ad Atticum. Bk. XIV, epis. 21.

To-morrow let my sun his beams display, Or in clouds hide them: I have lived to-day.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, A Vole.

¹⁴ Fill my hour, ye gods, so that I may not say, whilst I have done this, "Behold, also, an hour of my life is gone,"—but rather, "I have lived an hour."

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

¹⁵ We are the masters of the days that were: We have lived, we have loved, we have suffered . . . even so.

W. E. HENLEY, What Is to Come.

¹⁶ That man lives happy and in command of himself, who from day to day can say, "I have lived!" (Ille potens sui lætusque deget, cui licet in diem dixisse Vixi!)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. III, ode 29, l. 41.

Happy the man, and happy he alone,

He, who can call to-day his own:

He who, secure within, can say:

"To-morrow do thy worst, for I have liv'd to-day."

HORACE, Odes, III, 29. (Dryden, tr., l. 65.)

Not Heav'n itself upon the past has pow'r; But what has been, has been, and I have had my hour.

HORACE, Odes, III, 29. (Dryden, tr., l. 71.)

¹⁷ I have fought my fight, I have lived my life, I have drunk my share of wine;

From Trier to Cologne there was never a knight
Led a merrier life than mine.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Knight's Leap. A similar inscription appears under the painting
by Frans Hals, "The Laughing Cavalier."

¹
I have lived; nor shall maligner fortune ever
Take from me what an earlier hour once gave.

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 84.

²
I have enjoyed earthly happiness,
I have lived and loved.
(Ich habe genossen das irdische Glück,
Ich habe gelebt und geliebet.)

SCHILLER, Piccolomini. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 9.

I have lived and I have loved;
I have waked and I have slept;
I have sung and I have danced;
I have smiled and I have wept.

CHARLES MACKEY, Vixi.

³
When a man has said, "I have lived," every morning he arises he receives a bonus. (Quisquis dixit "vixi," cotidie ad lucrum surgit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epist. xii, sec. 9.

⁴
What expiating agony
May for him, damned to poesy,
Shut in that little sentence be—
What deep austerities of strife—
He "lived his life." "He lived his life."

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Judgement in Heaven:
Epilogue.

⁵
I have lived; I have run the course Fortune
allotted me;

Now my shade shall descend illustrious to the grave.

(Vixi, et quem dederat cursum Fortuna,
percegi:

Et nunc magna mei sub terras currit imago.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 653.

XIX—Life: Living Life Over

⁸
Yet for my own part I would not live over my hours past, or begin again the thread of my days, not upon Cicero's ground, because I have lived them well, but for fear I should live them worse.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 49.

Few men would be content to cradle it once again; except a man can lead his second life better than the first, a man may be doubly condemned for living evilly twice.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 13.

⁷
If I were to live my life over again, I would do all that I have done. (Si je recommençais ma carrière, je ferais tout ce que j'ai fait.)

FONTANELLE, Dialogues des Morts.

Were I to live my life over again, I should live it just as I have done. I neither complain of the past, nor fear the future.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

Vain was the man, and false as vain,
Who said, were he ordained to run
His long career of life again

He would do all that he had done.

THOMAS MOORE, My Birthday.

⁶
I should have no objection to a repetition of the same life from its beginning, only asking the advantages authors have in a second edition to correct some faults of the first.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

XX—Life: Quality, Not Quantity

¹¹
It matters not how long we live, but how.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Water.

¹²
A short space of life is long enough for living well and honorably. (Breve tempus ætatis satis longum est ad bene honesteque vivendum.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xix, sec. 70.

Who well lives, long lives; for this age of ours Should not be numbered by years, days, and hours.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
ii, day 4. (Sylvester, tr.)

¹³
The life given us by nature is short; but the memory of a well-spent life is eternal. (Brevis a natura nobis vita data est; at memoria bene redditæ vitæ sempiterna.)

CICERO, Philippicæ. No. xiv, sec. 12.

No one has lived too short a life who has performed its duties with unblemished character.
(Nemo parum diu vixit, qui virtutis perfectæ perfecto functus est munere.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i,
ch. 43, sec. 109.

¹⁴
Life is not measured by the time we live.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Village. Bk. ii.

Life is not dated merely by years. Events are sometimes the best calendars.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Venetia. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

¹⁵
So that my life be brave, what though not long?

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Sonnets. No. xli.

I have lived enough, for I die unconquered.
(Satis vixi, invictus enim morior.)

EPAMINONDAS. (CORNELIUS NEPOS, Lives: Epaminondas.)

It is the depth at which we live and not at all the surface extension that imports.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

To live long is almost everyone's wish, but to live well is the ambition of a few.

JOHN HUGHES, The Lay Monh. No. 18.

It is not a great thing to have been to Jerusalem, but to have lived well is a great thing. (Non magnum est Hierosolymis fuisse, sed bene vixisse magnum est.)

ST. JEROME. (ERASMUS, De Colloquiorum Utilitate.)

Nor love thy life, nor hate; but what thou livest

Live well; how long or short permit to heaven.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 549.

I have lived to a riper age than years can show. 'Tis deeds make old: these must thou number: with these was my life fulfilled, not with idle years.

OVID, Consolatio ad Liviam, l. 448.

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;

In feelings, not in figures on a dial.

We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives

Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Country Town.

He, who grown aged in this world of woe, In deeds, not years, piercing the depths of life, So that no wonder waits him.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 5.

A life spent worthily should be measured by a nobler line,—by deeds, not years.

SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act iv, sc. 1.

Think'st thou existence doth depend on time? It doth; but actions are our epochs.

BYRON, Manfred. Act ii, sc. i, l. 54.

It is no happiness to live long, nor unhappiness to die soon; happy is he that hath lived long enough to die well.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. ii, No. 84.

The measure of a man's life is the well-ascending of it, and not the length.

PLUTARCH, Consolatio ad Apollonium.

No parent would wish for his children that they might live forever, but rather that their lives might be noble and honored. (Neque quisquam parens liberis uti aeterni forent optavit, magis uti boni honestique vitam exigerent.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 85, sec. 50.

Life, if thou knowest how to use it, is long enough. (Vita, si scias uti, longa est.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitæ. Sec. ii.

Mere living is not a good, but living well. (Non enim vivere bonum est, sed bene vivere.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 4.

We should strive, not to live long, but to live rightly. (Non ut diu vivamus curandum est, sed ut satis.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xciii, 2.

The point is, not how long you live, but how nobly you live. (Quam bene vivas refert, non quam diu.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 15.

He liveth long who liveth well!

All other life is short and vain;

He liveth longest who can tell

Of living most for heavenly gain.

HORATIUS BONAR, He Liveth Long Who Liveth Well.

Wish not so much to live long as to live well. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

They only have lived long who have lived virtuously.

SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act iv, sc. 1.

Desire not to live long, but to live well;

How long we live not years, but actions, tell.

ROWLAND WATKINS, Flamma sine Fumo: The Hour Glass.

For they lived long enough, that have lived well enough.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, 83. (1560)

The wise man will live as long as he ought, not as long as he can. . . . He always reflects concerning the quality, and not the quantity, of his life. (Itaque sapiens vivit, quantum debet, non quantum potest. . . . Cogitat semper, qualis vita, non quanta sit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 4.

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

The good man should not live as long as it pleases him, but as long as he ought. (Cum bono viro vivendum sit non quamdiu juvat sed quamdiu oportet.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, 3.

It is with life as with a play: what matters is not how long it is, but how good it is. (Quomodo fabula, sic vita: non quam diu, sed quam bene acta sit, refert.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvii, 20.

Life is long if it is full. (Longa est vita, si plena est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xciii, 2.

Let us see to it that our lives, like jewels of great price, be noteworthy not because of their width, but because of their weight.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xciii, 4.

Just as one of small stature can be a perfect man, so a life of small compass can be a perfect life.

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epis. xciii, 7. Circles are praised, not that abound in largeness, but the exactly round: So life we praise that does excel Not in much time, but acting well.

EDMUND WALLER, Long and Short Life.

1 The measure of a happy life is not from the fewer or more suns we behold, the fewer or more breaths we draw, or meals we repeat, but from the having once lived well, acted our part handsomely, and made our exit cheerfully.

LORD SHAPTESBURY, Characteristics. Vol. i, p. 316.

2 The life of a man of virtue and talent, who should die in his thirtieth year, is, with regard to his own feelings, longer than that of a miserable priest-ridden slave who dreams out a century of goodness.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab: Notes.

Perhaps the perishing ephemeron enjoys a longer life than the tortoise.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab: Notes.

3 That life is long, which answers life's great end.

The time that bears no fruit, deserves no name;

The man of wisdom is the man of years. YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 773.

Life is too strong for you—
It takes life to love Life.

EDGAR LEE MASTERS, Lucinda Matlock.

XXIII—Life: A Little Work, A Little Play

14 We are the voices of the wandering wind,
Which moan for rest and rest can never find;

Lo! as the wind is so is mortal life,
A moan, a sigh, a sob, a storm, a strife.
EDWIN ARNOLD, Light of Asia. Bk. III, l. 23.

15 I've played a little, And I've worked a lot,
I've loved and I've hated, As who would not?
I've had some fun And I've had some sorrow,
I've had to steal And I've had to borrow,
I've sinned a little, But all in all
I've hardly tasted Life at all.
But Death just smiled as he beckoned ahead—
"That was life," He gently said.
MILT BRONSTON, Merry-Go-Round.

16 A little sun, a little rain,
A soft wind blowing from the west,
And woods and fields are sweet again,
And warmth within the mountain's breast.

A little love, a little trust,
A soft impulse, a sudden dream,
And life as dry as desert dust,
Is fresher than a mountain stream.
STEEVENSON A. BROOKS, Earth and Men.

They are not long, the weeping and the
laughter,
Love and desire and hate:
I think they have no portion in us after
We pass the gate.
ERNEST DOWSON, Vita Summa Brevis.

They are not long, the days of wine and roses:
Out of a misty dream
Our path emerges for a while, then closes
Within a dream.
ERNEST DOWSON, Vita Summa Brevis.

A sunbeam in a winter's day,
Is all the proud and mighty have
Between the cradle and the grave.
JOHN DYER, Grongor Hill, l. 89.

⁶
He lives not who can refuse me;
All my force saith, Come and use me:
A gleam of sun, a summer rain,
And all the zone is green again.
EMERSON, Fragments: Nature. Frag. 28.

A train of gay and clouded days
Dappled with joy and grief and praise,
Beauty to fire us, saints to save,
Escort us to a little grave.
EMERSON, Fragments: Life. Frag. 1.

⁷
A little season of love and laughter,
Of light and life, and pleasure and pain,
And a horror of outer darkness after,
And the dust returneth to dust again.

Then the lesser life shall be as the greater,
And the lover of life shall join the hater,
And the one thing cometh, sooner or later,
And no one knoweth the loss or gain.
ADAM LINDSAY GORDON, The Swimmer. St. 10.

⁸
Life has given me of its best—
Laughter and weeping, labour and rest,
Little of gold, but lots of fun;
Shall I then sigh that all is done?
No, not I; while the new road lies
All untrodden, before my eyes.
NORAH M. HOLLAND, Life.

⁹
None knoweth a better thing than this:
The Sword, Love, Song, Honour, Sleep.
None knoweth a surer thing than this:
Birth, Sorrow, Pain, Weariness, Death.
WILLIAM SHARP, Chant of Ardan the Pict.

A little while the tears and laughter,
The willow and the rose;
A little while, and what comes after
No man knows.

An hour to sing, to love and linger,
Then lutanist and lute
Will fall on silence, song and singer
Both be mute.
DON MARQUIS, A Little While.

¹¹
A little time for laughter,
A little time to sing,
A little time to kiss and cling,
And no more kissing after.
PHILIP BOURKE MARSTON, After.

¹²
A little work, a little sweating, a few brief, flying years; a little joy, a little fretting, some smiles and then some tears; a little resting in the shadow, a struggle to the height, a futile search for El Dorado, and then we say Good Night.
WALT MASON, The Journey.

¹³ Life is vain; a little love, a little hate, and then—Good-day! Life is short; a little hopping, a little dreaming, and then—Good-night!
Life is whatever God wills it; and, such as it is, it's enough!
(La vie est vaine: Un peu d'amour,
Un peu de haine . . . Et puis—bon jour!
La vie est brève: Un peu d'espoir,
Un peu de rêve . . . Et puis—bon soir!
La vie est telle Que dieu la fit;
Et, telle qu'elle, Elle suffit!)

LÉON VON MONTENÆKEN, Peu de Chose et Presque Trop.

Life is but jest; a dream, a doom,
A gleam, a gloom—and then, good rest!
Life is but play; a throb, a tear,
A sob, a sneer—and then, good day.
LÉON VON MONTENÆKEN, Nothing and Too Much. His English version of Peu de Chose.

A little work, a little play
To keep us going—and so, good-day!
A little warmth, a little light
Of love's bestowing—and so, good-night!
A little fun, to match the sorrow
Of each day's gowing—and so, good-morrow!
A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing—and so, good-bye!
GEORGE DU MAURIER. Paraphrase of Peu de
Chose by Montaigne, used as conclusion for Tribby. Last couplet inscribed on Du Maurier memorial tablet, Hampstead churchyard.

Enough! or Too much.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

1 A little pain, a little pleasure,
A little heaping up of treasure;
Then no more gazing upon the sun.
All things must end that have begun.

JOHN PAYNE, Kyrielle.

2 A sudden wakin', a sudden weepin',
A li'l suckin', a li'l sleepin';
A cheel's full joys an' a cheel's short sorrows,
Wi' a power o' faith in gert tomorrows.

EDEN PHILLIPOTS, Man's Days.

3 One wakes, rises, dresses, goes out;
One comes home, dines, sups, goes to bed,
sleeps.
(On s'éveille, on se lève, on s'habille, et on sort;
On rentre, on dîne, on soupe, on se couche,
on dort.)

DE PUIS, C'Est la Vie!

What trifling coil do we poor mortals keep;
Wake, eat and drink, evacuate, and sleep.

MATTHEW PRION, Human Life.

To get the whole world out of bed
And washed, and dressed, and warmed, and fed,
To work, and back to bed again,
Believe me, Saul, costs worlds of pain.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy.

4 Man has here two and a half minutes—one to smile, one to sigh, and a half to love: for in the midst of this minute he dies. (Der Mensch hat hier dritthalb Minuten, eine zu lächeln—eine zu seufzen—und eine halbe zu lieben: denn mitten in dieser Minute stirbt er.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus. Ch. 4.

5 Say, what is life? 'Tis to be born,
A helpless Babe, to greet the light
With a sharp wail, as if the morn
Foretold a cloudy noon and night;
To weep, to sleep, and weep again,
With sunny smiles between; and then?

J. G. Saxe, The Story of Life.

6 A little gain, a little pain,
A laugh, lest you may moan;
A little blame, a little fame,
A star-gleam on a stone.
ROBERT W. SERVICE, Just Think.

7 Forenoon and afternoon and night—Forenoon
And afternoon and night—forenoon, and what!

The empty song repeats itself. No more?
Yea, that is life: Make this forenoon sublime,
This afternoon a psalm, this night a prayer,
And time is conquered and thy crown is won.
E. R. SELL, Life.

8 A little fruit a little while is ours,
And the worm finds it soon.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

A little sorrow, a little pleasure,
Fate metes us from the dusty measure
That holds the date of all of us;
We are born with travail and strong crying,
And from the birth-day to the dying
The likeness of our life is thus.
SWINBURNE, Iliad. St. 18.

9 What is this passing scene?
A peevish April day!

A little sun—a little rain,
And then night sweeps along the plain,
And all things fade away.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, On Disappointment.

10 This is the height of our deserts:
A little pity for life's hurts;
A little rain, a little sun,
A little sleep when work is done.
UNKNOWN, Deservings.

XXIV—Life: Whence and Whither

11 I was born some time ago, but I know not
why:

I have lived—I hardly know either how or where:

Some time or another, I suppose, I shall die;
But where, how, or when, I neither know nor care!

GEORGE ARNOLD, An Autobiography.

12 What endless questions vex the thought, of Whence and Whither, When and How.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. ii, st. 3.

Between two worlds, life hovers like a star
Twixt night and morn, upon the horizon's verge.
How little do we know that which we are!
How less what we may be!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 99.

13 Seek not the wherefore, race of human kind.
DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto iii, l. 35.

14 You hail from Dream-land, Dragon-fly?
A stranger hither? So am I,
And (sooth to say) I wonder why
We either of us came!

AGNES M. DARMESTETER, To a Dragonfly.

15 A man's ingress into the world is naked and bare,

His progress through the world is trouble and care;

And lastly, his egress out of the world, is nobody knows where.

If we do well here, we shall do well there; I can tell you no more if I preach a whole year.

JOHN EDWIN, The Eccentricities of John Edwin. Vol. 1, p. 74.

Our ingress into the world
Was naked and bare;
Our progress through the world
Is trouble and care;

Our egress from the world
Will be nobody knows where:
But if we do well here,
We shall do well there.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. ii, The Cobbler of Hagenau. Quoted as "a familiar tune."

1 Not whence, but why and whither are the vital questions.

A. W. GREELY, Reminiscences, p. 338.

2 I think, oftentimes, that lives of men may be likened to wandering winds that come and go

Not knowing whence they rise, whither they blow

O'er the vast globe, voiceful of grief or glee.
PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, A Comparison.

Our life is but a dark and stormy night,
To which sense yields a weak and glimmering light,

While wandering man thinks he discerneth all
By that which makes him but mistake, and fall.

EDWARD HERBERT, To His Mistress, For Her Picture.

3 Every cradle asks us "Whence?" and every coffin "Whither?"

R. G. INGERSOLL, Oration at a Child's Grave.

4 For men to tell how human life began
Is hard; for who himself beginning knew?
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 280.

5 Life have we loved, through green leaf and through sere,

Though still the less we knew of its intent.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise:

L'Envoi.

6 Into this Universe, and Why not knowing
Nor Whence, like Water willy-nilly flowing;
And out of it, as Wind along the Waste,
I know not Whither, willy-nilly blowing.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 29. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

7 Like following life thro' creatures you dissect,

You lose it in the moment you detect.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epim. i, l. 29.

8 Our past is clean forgot,
Our present is and is not,
Our future's a sealed seedplot,
And what betwixt them are we?

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Cloud Confines. St. 5.

9 If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within, and all God's workings see,

We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key.

MARY LOUISE SMITH, Sometime.

10 What use to brood? This life of mingled pains

And joys to me
Despite of every Faith and Creed, remains
The Mystery.

TENNYSON, To Mary Boyle.

11 Never had anyone so correct an estimate of life but that circumstances, time and experience ever bring him something new and ever instruct him. (Numquam ita quisquam bene subducta ratione ad vitam fuit, Quin res, ætas usus semper aliquid apponet novi, Aliquid moneat.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 855. (Act v, sc. 4.)

12 Life is arched with changing skies:
Rarely are they what they seem:
Children we of smiles and sighs—
Much we know, but more we dream.

WILLIAM WINTER, Light and Shadow.

13 Here are we, in a bright and breathing world:
Our origin, what matters it?

16 Life is short and time is swift;
Roses fade and shadows shift.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Epigrams.

17 The King in a carriage may ride,
And the Beggar may crawl at his side;
But in the general race,
They are travelling all the same pace.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Chrononotus.

18 How short is life! how frail is human trust!
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. III, l. 235.

Our life is short, and our days run
As fast away as does the sun.

ROBERT HERRICK, Corinna's Going a-Maying.
Those who complain of the shortness of life, let it slide by them without wishing to seize and make the most of its golden minutes.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Spirit of the Age, p. 336.

1 It is pleasant to know that if one is now and then ingenious and fifty per cent lucky, he may hope to live out his three score years and ten although intellectually honest and self-respecting.

FRANKLIN H. GIDDINGS, The Mighty Medicine.

2 There are three wicks, you know, to the lamp of a man's life: brain, blood, and breath.
Press the brain a little, its light goes out, followed by both the others. Stop the heart
a minute, and out go all three of the wicks.
Choke the air out of the lungs, and presently the fluid ceases to supply the other centers of flame, and all is soon stagnation, cold, and darkness.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 11.

3 As leaves on the trees, such is the life of man.
(Οἷη περ φύλλων γενεή, τυχὴ δὲ καὶ ἀνθρώπων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 146.

Like leaves on trees the race of man is found,
Now green in youth, now with'ring on the
ground:

Another race the following spring supplies,
They fall successive, and successive rise.

HOMER, The Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 181. (Pope, tr.)

Like phantoms painted on the magic slide,
Forth from the darkness of the past we glide,
As living shadows for a moment seen
In airy pageant on the eternal screen,
Traced by a ray from one unchanging flame,
Then seek the dust and stillness whence we came.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 73.

There, like the wind through woods in riot,
Through him the gale of life blew high;
The tree of man was never quiet:
Then 'twas the Roman, now 'tis I.

A. E. HOUSMAN, On Wenlock Edge.

4 Who knows whether the gods will add tomorrow to the present hour? (Quis scit, an adijunctum hodiernæ crastina summæ Tempora di superbi?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 17.

How foolish it is to set out one's life, when one is not even owner of the morrow!

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. ci, sec. 4.

No man has been so favored of the gods
That he could pledge himself another day.
(Nemo tam divos habuit faventes, Crastinum ut posset sibi polliceri.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 619.

Learn that the present hour alone is man's.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 33.

5 For what is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away.

New Testament: James, iv, 14.

6 I would not live alway: let me alone; for my days are vanity.

Old Testament: Job, vii, 16.

I would not live alway; I ask not to stay
Where storm after storm rises dark o'er the way.

WILLIAM A. MUHLBERG, I Would Not Live Alway. St. 2.

They live ill who think they will live for ever.
(Male vivunt qui se semper victuros putant.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 364.

He that lives longest lives but a little while.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, No. 71.

7 The short bloom of our brief and narrow life flies fast away. While we are calling for flowers and wine and women, age is upon us.
(Festinat enim decurrere velox
Flosculus angustæ miseræque brevissima vitæ
Fortio; dum hibimus, dum scria unguenta puellas

Poscimus, obrepit non intellecta senectus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 126.

See how the autumn leaves float by decaying,
Down the wild swirls of the rain-swollen
stream;

So fleet the works of men, back to their earth
again;

Ancient and holy things fade like a dream.

Nay! see the spring-blossoms steal forth a-mayning,

Clothing with tender hues orchard and glen;
So, though old forms pass by, ne'er shall their spirit die.

Look! England's bare boughs show green leaf
again.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Old and New: A Parable.
Kingsley's only poetical contribution to Politics for the People, published 13 May, 1848, signed "Parson Lot." Omitted from many editions of his poems. The third and fourth lines were on the curtain of the famous opera house of Senator Tabur,
Denver, Colorado, 1880.

8 Time fleeteth on, youth soon is gone,
Naught earthly may abide;

Life seemeth fast, but may not last—

It runs as runs the tide.

C. G. LELAND, Many in One. Pt. ii, st. 21.

Ab! love, the world is fading,

Flower by flower,

Each has his little house,

And each his hour.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, A Ballad of Kind Little Creatures.

9 Take them, O great Eternity!

Our little life is but a gust

That bends the branches of thy tree,

And trails its blossoms in the dust!
LONGFELLOW, Suspira.

There's nothing certain in man's life but this:
That he must lose it.

OWEN MEREDITH, Clytemnestra. Pl. xx.

From golden dawn to purple dusk,
Piled high with bales of smiles and tears,
The caravans are dropping down
Across the desert-sands of years.

J. CORSON MILLER, The March of Humanity.

Life is too short for any distant aim;
And cold the dull reward of future fame.

LAOY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Epistle to the Earl of Burlington.

How short is human life! the very breath
Which frames my words accelerates my death.

HANNAH MORE, King Heschiah.

Between us and hell or heaven there is nothing but life, which of all things is the frailest.

PASCAL, Thoughts. Sec. iii, No. 213.

Nature has given man no better thing than shortness of life. (Natura vero nihil hominibus brevitæ vitæ præstitit melius.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii,
ch. 51, sec. 3.

Creatures of such an extempore being that the whole term of their life is confined within the space of a day; for they are brought forth in the morning, are in the prime of their existence at noon, grow old at night, and then die.

PLUTARCH, Consolatio ad Apollonium.

Life is but a day at most.

BURNS, Lines Written in Friars' Carse Hermitage.

Alas, the moral brings a tear!
'Tis all a transient hour below;
And we that would detain thee here,
Ourselves as fleetly go!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Stanzas to J. P. Kemble.

Even so our life like to this fading flower
Doth spring, bud, blossom, wither in an hour.
Each stealing moment on it makes a prey,
Strals away part, till all is stole away.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack, 1664.

Lord, make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know how frail I am.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxix, 4.

The days of our years are three-score years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow; for it is soon cut off and we fly away.

Old Testament: Psalms, xc, 10.

As for man his days are as grass: as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth.

Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 15.

The wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more.

Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 16.

You know how little while we have to stay,
And, once departed, may return no more.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubâiyât. St. 3. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

The Wine of Life keeps oozing drop by drop,
The Leaves of Life keep falling one by one.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubâiyât. St. 8. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

Think, in this batter'd Caravanserai
Whose Portals are alternate Night and Day,
How Sultân after Sultân with his Pomp
Ahode his destin'd Hour and went his way.

Crown'd with a flower or two, and there an end.

TENNYSON, Lucretius, l. 228.

My life is like a summer rose
That opens to the morning sky,
But ere the shades of evening close,
Is scattered on the ground—to die.

RICHARD HENRY WILDS, My Life. Fraudulently claimed by Patrick O'Kelly.

My life is like the autumn leaf
That trembles in the moon's pale ray;
Its hold is frail—its date is brief,
Restless,—and soon to pass away.

RICHARD HENRY WILDS, My Life.

XXVI.—Life: Its Sweetness

"Life is sweet, brother." "Do you think so?"
"Think so!—There's night and day, brother, both sweet things; sun, moon, and stars,
brother, all sweet things; there's likewise
a wind on the heath. Life is very sweet, brother; who would wish to die?"

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 25.

So precious life is! Even to the old
The hours are as a miser's coins!

T. B. ALDRICH, Broken Music.

Have you found your life distasteful?
My life did, and does, smack sweet.
Was your youth of pleasure wasteful?
Mine I saved and hold complete.

Do your joys with age diminish?
When mine fail me, I'll complain.
Must in death your daylight finish?
My sun sets to rise again.

ROBERT BROWNING, As the "Mermaid." St. 10.

How good is man's life, the mere living! how fit to employ
All the heart and the soul and the senses forever in joy.

ROBERT BROWNING, Soul. Sec. 9.

The life of man, says our friend Herr Sauerteig, the life even of the meanest man, it were good to remember, is a Poem.

CARLYLE, Count Cagliostro: Flight First.

Life is not void or stuff for scornors;
We have laughed loud and kept our love,
We have heard singers in tavern corners
And not forgotten the birds above;
We have known suitors and sons of thunder
And not unworthily walked with them,
We have grown wiser and lost not wonder;
And we have seen Jerusalem.
G. K. CHESTERTON, To F. C.

Life to the last enjoy'd, here Churchill lies.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Candidate, l. 152.

Of divers voices is sweet music made:
So in our life the different degrees
Render sweet harmony among these wheels.
DANTE, Paradiso. Canto vi, l. 127. (Cary, tr.)

By the Lord of Ludgate it's a mad life to be lord mayor; it's a stirring life, a fine life,
a velvet life, a careful life.

DEKKER, The Shoemaker's Holiday. Act v, sc. 1.

'Tis not for nothing that we life pursue;
It pays our hopes with something still that's new.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act iv, sc. 1.

The life of man is the true romance, which,
when it is valiantly conducted, will yield the imagination a higher joy than any fiction.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: New England Reformers.

Life is a festival only to the wise. Seen from the nook and chimney-side of prudence, it wears a ragged and dangerous front.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Heroism.

Life is good only when it is magical and musical,
a perfect timing and consent, and when we do not anatomize it. . . . You must hear the bird's song without attempting to render it into nouns and verbs.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

When life is true to the poles of nature, the streams of truth will roll through us in song.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

Sooner or later that which is now life shall be poetry, and every fair and manly trait shall add a richer strain to the song.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

Chance cannot touch me! Time cannot hush me!

Fear, hope, and longing, at strife,
Sink as I rise, on, on, upward forever,
Gathering strength, gaining breath—naught can sever

Me from the Spirit of Life!

MARGARET FULLER, Dryad Song. St. 4.

When life leaps in the veins, when it beats in the heart,

When it thrills as it fills every animate part,
Where lurks it? how works it? . . . we scarcely detect it.

OWEN MELEDONTH, Lullie. Pt. II, canto I, sec. 5.

Life's a pudding full of plums,
Care's a canker than benumbs,
Wherefore waste our elocution
On impossible solution?

Life's a pleasant institution,
Let us take it as it comes!

W. S. GILBERT, The Gondoliers. Act I.

1 My worthy friend, all theories are gray,
And green alone Life's golden tree.
(Grat, theurer Freund, ist alle Theorie Und grün des Lebens goldner Baum.)
GOETHE, Faust. Pt. I, sc. 4, l. 515.

2 Late may you return to the skies, and long may you be happily present to your people.

populo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. I, ode 2, l. 45. To Cæsar
Augustus.

Happy long life, with honor at the close,
Friends' painless tears, the softened thought of foes!

J. R. LOWELL, Memoria Postum: R. G. S.
Just Fate, prolong his life, well spent,
Whose indefatigable hours
Have been as gayly innocent
And fragrant as his flowers.

Curtis: Postscript*, l. 49.

5 It is good for us to be here.

New Testament: Matthew, xvii, 4.

6 When I fail to cherish it [life] in every fibre
the fires within are waning.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.
Ch. I.

They may rail at this life—from the hour I began it,
I found it a life full of kindness and bliss;
And until they can show me some happier planet,
More social and bright, I'll content me with this.

From a boy

I gloated on existence, Earth to me
Seemed all-sufficient and my sojourn there
One trembling opportunity for joy.

ALAN SEEDER, Sonnet: I Loved.

11

O excellent! I love long life better than figs.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act I,
sc. 2, l. 32.

O, our lives' sweetness!

That we the pain of death would hourly die
Rather than die at once!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 184.

12

The One remains, the many change and pass;
Heaven's light forever shines, Earth's shadows fly;

Life, like a dome of many-coloured glass,
Stains the white radiance of Eternity.

SHELLEY, Adonais.

A Dome of Many-Coloured Glass.

AMY LOWELL, Title of book of poems.

13

I know I am—that simplest bliss
That millions of my brothers miss.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Prince Denakalon. Act IV.

14

Life is a sweet and joyful thing for one who has some one to love and a pure conscience.

LEO TOLSTOY, Two Hussars. Ch. 9.

15

Ah! somehow life is bigger after all
Than any painted Angel could we see
The God that is within us!

OSCAR WILDE, Humankind. St. 60.

16

The pleasure which there is in life itself.
WORDSWORTH, Michael. l. 77.

XXVII—Life: Its Bitterness

17

Gosh! I feel like a real good cry!

Life, he says, is a cheat, a fake.
Well, I agree with the grouchy guy—
The best you get is an even break.
F. P. ADAMS, Ballade of Schopenhauer's Philosophy.

1
When life ceases to be a promise it does not cease to be a task; its true name even is trial.

AMEL, Journal, 29 Jan., 1866.

2
Ah, love, let us be true
To one another! for the world, which seems
To lie before us like a land of dreams,
So various, so beautiful, so new,
Hath really neither joy, nor love, nor light,
Nor certitude, nor peace, nor help for pain;
And we are here as on a darkling plain Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight,

Where ignorant armies clash by night.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Dover Beach, l. 29.

Wandering between two worlds, one dead,
The other powerless to be born,
With nowhere yet to rest my head,
Like these, on earth I wait forlorn.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Grande Chartreuse, l. 85.

What shelter to grow ripe is ours?

What leisure to grow wise? . . .

Too fast we live, too much are tried,
Too harass'd, to attain

Wordsworth's sweet calm, or Goethe's wide
And luminous view to gain.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, In Memory of the Author of Obermann, l. 71.

How many noble thoughts,
How many precious feelings of man's heart,
How many loves, how many gratuities,
Do twenty years wear out, and see expire!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 177.

3
With aching hands and bleeding feet
We dig and heap, lay stone on stone;
We bear the burden and the heat
Of the long day, and wish 'twere done.
Not till the hours of light return,
All we have built do we discern.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Morality, St. 2.

For most men in a brazen prison live,
Where, in the sun's hot eye,
With heads bent o'er their toll, they languidly
Their lives to some unmeaning taskwork give.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, A Summer Night, l. 37.

4
Every life, even the most selfish and the most frivolous, is a tragedy at last, because it ends with death.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Savonarola: Preface.

I love the doubt, the dark, the fear,
That still surroundeth all things here.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Hymn to Death.

5
It is a misery to be born, a pain to live, a trouble to die. (Nasci miserum, vivere poena, angustia mori.)

St. BERNARD, De Consideratione, Ch. 3.

6
There is so much trouble in coming into the world, and so much more, as well as meanness, in going out of it, that 'tis hardly worth while to be here at all.

LORD BOLINGBROKE. (EMERSON, Representative Men; Montaigne.)

7
My life is read all backward, and the charm of life undone.

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship.

Life treads on life, and heart on heart;
We press too close in church and mart
To keep a dream or grave apart.

E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets; l. 820.

8
O Life! thou art a galling load,
Along a rough, a weary road.

BURNS, Despondency.

9
Desolate—Life is so dreary and desolate—
Women and men in the crowd meet and mingle,

Yet with itself every soul standeth single,
. . . Fighting its terrible conflicts alone.

ALICE CARY, Life, St. 2.

10
Tell me, all-judging Jove, if this be fair,
To make so short a life so full of care?

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, On Human Life.

11
I took one draught of life,
I'll tell you what I paid,
Precisely an existence—
The market-price, they said.

EMILY DICKINSON, Further Poems, cxx.

12
Ah, life could be so beautiful, Yet never is.
CARLETON DREWRY, Father and Son.

13
When I consider life, 'tis all a cheat.
Yet fool'd with hope, men favour the deceit;
Trust on, and think tomorrow will repay.
Tomorrow's falser than the former day; . . .
Strange cozenage! none would live past years
again,

Yet all hope pleasure in what yet remain;
And from the dregs of life think to receive
What the first sprightly running could not give.

DAVIDEN, Aureng-Zeb, Act iv, sc. 1.

When I consider Life and its few years—
A wisp of fog betwixt us and the sun;
A call to battle, and the battle done
Ere the last echo dies within our ears;
A rose choked in the grass; an hour of fears;
The gusts that past a darkening shore do beat;
The burst of music down an unlistening street—
I wonder at the idleness of tears.

LIZZIE WOODWORTH REEKS, Life.

14
Once I supposed that only my manner of living was superficial; that all other men's was solid. Now I find we are all alike shallow.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. v, p. 198.

1 All the bloomy flush of life is fled.
GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 128. (1770)
Life's bloomy flush was lost.

GEORGE CHABRE, The Parish Register. Pt. ii, l. 453. (1807)

2 Nothing can exceed the vanity of our existence but the folly of our pursuits.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i, sc. 1.

As a desolate bird that through darkness its lost way is winging,
As a hand that is helplessly raised when Death's sickle is swinging,
So is life! Ay, the life that lends passion and breath to my singing.

H. RIDER HAGGARD, Sorais's Song. (Allan Quartermain, Ch. 15.)

3 For Life I had never cared greatly,
As worth a man's while.

THOMAS HARDY, For Life I Had Never Cared Greatly.

4 To what a point of insignificance may not human life dwindle! To what fine, agonizing threads will it not cling!

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Literary Remains. Vol. II, p. 246.

For Fate has wove the thread of life with pain!
And twins, ev'n from the birth, are Misery and Man!

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 263. (Pope, tr.)

I say that I am myself, but what is this Self of mine

But a knot in the tangled skein of things where chance and chance combine?

DON MARQUIS, Heir and Serf.

5 Oh! take, young scrapp, take thy harp,
And play to me so cheerily;

For grief is dark, and care is sharp,
And life wears on so wearily.

THOMAS HOOD, To Hope.

6 When I meet the morning beam,
Or lay me down at night to dream,
I hear my bones within me say,
"Another night, another day."

A. E. HOUSMAN, The Immortal Part.

7 Life is a pill which none of us can bear to swallow without gilding.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (PROZEL, Johnsoniana.)

Life is to most a nauseous pill,
A treat for which they dearly pay:

Let's take the good, avoid the ill,
Discharge the debt, and walk away.

PHILIP FRANKAU, Human Frailty.

8 Life is barren enough surely with all her trappings; let us therefore be cautious how we strip her.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. i, p. 345.

Human life is everywhere a state in which much is to be endured, and little to be enjoyed.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 11.

Condemn'd to Hope's delusive mine,
As on we toil from day to day,
By sudden blasts, or slow decline,
Our social comforts drop away.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Dr. Robert Level.

9 "Enlarge my life with multitude of days!"
In health, in sickness, thus the suppliant prays:

Hides from himself his state, and shuns to know

That life protracted is protracted woe.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 253.

The weariness, the fever, and the fret
Here, where men sit and hear each other groan.

KEATS, Ode to a Nightingale. St. 3.

10 For men must work, and women must weep,
And the sooner it's over, the sooner to sleep;
And good-bye to the bar and its moaning.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Three Fishers.

11 Life can be bitter to the very bone
When one is poor, and woman, and alone.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street.

12 The basic fact about human existence is not that it is a tragedy, but that it is a bore.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices.

Our civilization promises to make the question of a living easier and easier; and meanwhile living becomes emptier and emptier.

FRANK K. NOTCH, King Mob, p. 224.

13 In tragic life, God wot,
No villain need be! Passions spin the plot:
We are betrayed by what is false within.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 43.

Passions Spin the Plot.

VARDIS FISHER. Title of novel.

14 Life is a parting and not a meeting,
A comradeship of the lonely mile,
Only an hour for a passing greeting,
Only a friendship for a while.

DOUGLAS MALLOCH, A Day.

15 A bitter life 'twixt pain and nothing tost.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: The Hill of Venus.

16 Moan, moan, ye dying gales!
The saddest of your tales

Is not so sad as life.

HENRY NEALE, Moon, Moon, Ye Dying Gales.

¹ The life of man is the plaything of Fortune, a wretched life and a vagrant, tossed between riches and poverty.

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology, Bk. x, epig. 80.)

The wretch, at summing up his misspent days,
Found nothing left, but poverty and praise.

JOHN OLDHAM, *A Satire: Spenser Dissuading
the Author*, l. 182.

The life of man, solitary, poor, nasty, brutish, and short.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan: Of Man.

² O life! is all thy song, "Endure and—die?"

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Life.

³ Does the road wind up-hill all the way?
Yes, to the very end.

Will the day's journey take the whole long day?

From morn to night, my friend.

CHRISTINA ROSETTI, Up-Hill.

⁴ Life did not present its sunny side to thee.
(Nicht seine Freudenseite kehrte dir Das Leben zu.)

SCHILLER, Marie Stuart. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 136.

⁵ This is the state of man: today he puts forth

The tender leaves of hopes; tomorrow blossoms,

And bears his blushing honours thick upon
him:

The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,
And, when he thinks, good easy man, full surely

His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 352.

The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 100.

⁶ To live I find it deadly dolorous,
For life draws care, and care continual woe.

EDMUND SPENSER, Daphnida, l. 450.

⁷ The long mechanic pacings to and fro,
The set, grey life, and apathetic end.

TENNYSON, Love and Duty, l. 17.

⁸ Life holds more disappointment than satisfaction. (Τὸ δὲ κέρδι τοῦ βίου ὥλιδος τοῦ ἐμπόρου.)

THEOPHRASTUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Theophrastus. Bk. v, sec. 41.)

⁹ It is truly a misery to live upon earth. . . .
For to eat, drink, watch, sleep, rest, labor,
and to be subject to other necessities of nature, is truly a great misery and affliction.

. . . And therefore the prophet devoutly prays to be freed from them, saying, "From my necessities, deliver me, O Lord."

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi.
Ch. 22.

¹⁰ I tell you we're in a blessed drain-pipe, and we've got to crawl along it till we die.

107.

¹⁵ Life hath more awe than death.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Water.

¹⁶ Life! we've been long together
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;

'Tis hard to part when friends are dear,—
Perhaps 't will cost a sigh, a tear;

Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time;

Say not "Good-night," but in some brighter
clime

Bid me "Good-morning."

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Life. St. 2. Wordsworth said of this stanza: "I am not in the habit of grudging people their good things, but I wish I had written those lines."

1 They that yet never learn'd to live and die,
Will scarcely teach it others feelingly.

Husbandry*; August's Abstract.

Some laugh, while others mourn;

Some toil, while others pray;

One dies, and one is born:

So runs the world away.

SAMUEL WESLEY, The Way of the World.

12 All say, "How hard it is to die"—a strange complaint from people who have had to live. Pity is for the living, envy for the dead.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

A myriad of men are born; they labor and sweat and struggle for bread; they squabble and scold and fight; they scramble for little mean advantages over each other. Age creeps upon them; . . . ambition is dead; pride is dead; vanity is dead; longing for release is in their place. It comes at last—the only unpoisoned gift earth ever had for them—and they vanish from a world where they were of no consequence.

MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. ii, p. 37.

13 Many people are so afraid to die that they never begin to live.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Counsels by the Way; Courage.

14 Who die of having lived too much

In their large hours.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Tomb of Burns.

15 Why do we then shun Death with anxious strife?

If Light can thus deceive, wherefore not Life?

BLANCO WHITE, Sonnet: Night.

16 O I see now that life cannot exhibit all to me, as day cannot,

I see that I am to wait for what will be exhibited by death.

WALT WHITMAN, Night on the Prairies.

17 And the wild regrets and the bloody sweats

None knew so well as I:
For he who lives more lives than one
More deaths than one must die.
Quesar Wilde, Ballad of Reading Gool, iii, 37.

Life is much flatter'd, Death is much traduc'd.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 444.

Life makes the soul dependent on the dust;
Death gives her wings to mount above the spheres. . . .

Death but entombs the body; life the soul.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 448.

Be happy while ye'er leevin,
For y'er a lang time deid.

UNKNOWN, Motto for a House. (Notes and Queries, 7 Dec., 1901.)

XXIX—Life: A Journey to Death

And I still onward haste to my last night;
Time's fatal wings do ever forward fly:
So every day we live, a day we die.

CAMPBELL, Divine and Moral Songs, No. 17.

We do not die wholly at our deaths: we have moulded away gradually long before. . . .
Death only consigns the last fragment of what we were to the grave.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Winterslow: On the Feeling of Immortality in Youth.

For life is nearer every day to death. (Nam vita mortis propior est quotidie.)

PRÆDUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 25, l. 10.

Every moment of life is a step toward the grave.
(Chaque instant de la vie est un pas vers la mort.)

CARRILLON, Tite et Bérénice. Act i, sc. 5.

He that begins to live begins to die.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Hieroglyphics. Epig. 1.

Our life's a clock, and every gasp of breath Breathes forth a warning grief, till Time shall strike a death.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Hieroglyphics, ix, 6.

What new thing then is it for a man to die, whose whole life is nothing but a journey to death? (Quid est enim novi hominem mori, cujus tota vita nihil aliud quam ad mortem iter est?)

SENECA, Ad Polybium de Consolatione. Sec. 30.

What man can you show me who places any value on his time, who reckons the worth of every day, who understands that he is dying daily?

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epin. i, sec. 2.

The hour which gives us life begins to take it away. (Prima que vitam dedit hora, carpit.)

SENECA, Heracles Furens, l. 874.

While man is growing, life is in decrease;
And cradles rock us nearer to the tomb.
Our birth is nothing but our death begun;

As tapers waste, that instant they take fire.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 717.

Our life is but a chain of many deaths.

YOUNG, The Revenge. Act iv, sc. 1.

Life is real! Life is earnest!

And the grave is not its goal.

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

XXX—Life: A Preparation for Death

May we so live we dread not here to die;
So die, we dread not afterward to live.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Waters.

So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed

By an unflinching trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT, Thanatopsis.

Made ev'ry day he had to live

To his last minute a preparative.

SAMUEL BUTLER, To the Memory of Duval.
Sec. 2.

Learn to live well, that thou may'st die so too;

To live and die is all we have to do.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Prudence, l. 93.

Live so, that, when you come to die,
You will have wished to live.

(Lebe, wie Du, wenn du stirbst, Wünschen wirst, gelebt zu haben.)

C. F. GELLERT, *Geistliche Oden und Lieder:
Vom Tode*.

Let all live as they would die.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Teach me to live that I may dread
The grave as little as my bed.

BISHOP THOMAS KEN, Evening Hymn.

Then, like a thankful guest,
Rise cheerfully from life's abundant feast
And with a quiet mind go take thy rest.

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 95.
(Creech, tr.)

So may'st thou live, till like ripe fruit thou drop

Into thy mother's lap, or be with ease
Gather'd, not harshly pluck'd, for death mature.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 532.

LIGHT

Light, even though it passes through pollution, is not polluted. (Lux, etai per immunda transeat, non inquinatur.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Johannis Evang. Ch. i, tr. 5, sec. 15. See also SUN: UNPOLLUTED.

¹ The first creature of God, in the works of the days, was the light of the sense, the last was the light of reason.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

God's first creature, which was light.

FRANCIS BACON, New Atlantis. Sec. 14. Quoted by Ruskin, Crown of Wild Olive. Lecture 4.

Light.—God's eldest daughter.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Building.

Hail, holy light, offspring of Heav'n firstborn!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 1.

Light, the prime work of God.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 70.

² Light that makes things seen, makes some things invisible; were it not for darkness and the shadow of the earth the noblest part of the creation had remained unseen and the stars in heaven as invisible as on the fourth day when they were created above the horizon with the sun and there was not an eye to behold them.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Garden of Cyrus. Ch. 4.

The rising sun to mortal sight reveals This earthly globe, but yet the stars conceal.

So may the sense discover natural things, Divine above the reach of human wings.

C. B., To the Memory of Sir Thomas Overbury.

Then sorrow, touch'd by These, grows bright

With more than rapture's ray:

As darkness shows us worlds of light

We never saw by day.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh, Thou Who Dry'st the Mourner's Tear.

'Twas a light that made

Darkness itself appear A thing of comfort.

SOUTHEY, The Curse of Kehama. Pt. 23, l. 28.

³ I feel and seek the light I cannot see.

S. T. COLERIDGE, II Zepolya. Act i, sc. 1.

⁴ I saw myself the lambent easy light

Gild the brown horror, and dispel the night.

DRYDEN, Hind and Panther. Pt. ii, l. 658.

⁵ Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing

it is for the eyes to behold the sun.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xi, 7.

⁶ Light is the first of painters. There is no object so foul that intense light will not make it beautiful.

EMERSON, Nature. Ch. 3, par. 2.

⁷ And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.

Old Testament: Genesis, i, 3.

Let there be Light, said God, and forthwith Light

Ethereal, first of things, quintessence pure,

Sprung from the deep; and, from her native east,
To journey through the acry gloom began,
Spher'd in a radiant cloud.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 243.

If the light is,

It is because God said, Let there be light.

D. G. ROSSETTI, At the Sunrise in 1848.

⁸ Through love to light! O wonderful the way
That leads from darkness to the perfect day!

R. W. GILDER, After-song.

Against the darkness outer

God's light his likeness takes,

And he from the mighty doubter

The great believer makes.

R. W. GILDER, The New Day. Pt. iv, Song 15.

⁹ Where there is much light, the shadows are deepest. (Wo viel Licht ist, ist starker Schatten.)

GOETHE, Götz von Berlichingen, l. 24.

Every light has its shadow.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 349.

¹⁰ Lamps make oil-spots, and candles need snuf-fing; it is only the light of heaven that shines pure and leaves no stain.

¹² You stand in your own light.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Do we stand in our own light, wherever we go,

And fight our own shadows forever?

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto ii, sec. 5.

¹³ The light of Heav'n restore;

Give me to see, and Ajax asks no more.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 729. (Pope, tr.)

The prayer of Ajax was for light;

Through all that dark and desperate fight,

The blackness of that noonday night.

LONGFELLOW, The Golem of Life. St. 9.

Father Zeus, deliver thou from darkness the sons of the Achæans, and make clear sky, and grant us to see with our eyes. In the light do thou even slay us, seeing such is thy good pleasure.

(Ἐν δὲ φάει καὶ θνατοῖς, ἐπεὶ οὐ γὰρ σῶμα σῶμα.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 645. The prayer of Ajax.

Thy prayer was "Light—more Light—while

Time shall last!"

Thou sawest a glory growing on the night,

But not the shadows which that light would cast,

Till shadows vanish in the Light of Light.
 TENNYSON, Inscription on the Window in Memory of Caxton. St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, London. Caxton's motto was "Fiat Lux."

More light! (Mehr Licht!)

GOETHE, Last words.

He seeks to produce not smoke from light, but light from smoke. (Non fumum ex fulgore, sed ex fumo dare lucem.)

HORACE, Art Poetica, l. 143.

Like our dawn, merely a sob of light.

VICTOR HUO, La Légende des Siècles.

And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not.

New Testament: John, i, 5. (Lux in tenebris. —Vulgate.)

The true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

New Testament: John, i, 9.

And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

New Testament: John, iii, 19.

The shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

Old Testament: Proverbs, iv, 18.

He was a burning and a shining light.

New Testament: John, v, 35.

I am the light of the world.

New Testament: John, viii, 12. (Lux mundi. —Vulgate.)

Ye are the light of the world.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 14.

Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you.

New Testament: John, xii, 35.

The great world of light, that lies behind all human destinies.

LONGFELLOW, To a Child.

Medicinal as light.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.

New Testament: Luke, i, 79.

The tolerance and equity of light That gives as freely to the shrinking flower As to the great oak flaring to the wind.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

In the dark a glimmering light often suffices for the pilot to find the pole star and set his course.

Into her scornful eyes!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 167.

The most terrible and nimble stroke

Of quick, cross lightning!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 34.

Merciful Heaven,

Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt

Split'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak
Than the soft myrtle.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 114.

Brief as the lightning in the collied night,

That, in a spleen, unfolds both heaven and earth,
And ere a man hath power to say "Behold!"
The jaws of darkness do devour it up:
So quick bright things come to confusion.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 145.

It is too rash, too unadvised, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which does cease to be Ere one can say "It lightens."

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 118.

Thunder crumples the sky,
Lightning tears at it.

LEONORA SPEYER, The Squall.

We saw the large white stars rise one by one,

Or, from the darken'd glen,
Saw God divide the night with flying flame,
And thunder on the everlasting hills.

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women, l. 223.

The lightnings flash a larger curve, and more
The noise astounds; till overhead a sheet
Of livid flame discloses wide, then shuts
And opens wider; shuts and opens still Expansive, wrapping ether in a blaze.
Follows the loosen'd aggravated roar,
Enlarging, deepening, mingling, peal on peal,
Crush'd horrible, convulsing heaven and earth.

iii, p. 347.

Reach the bays—
I'll tie a garland here about his head;
'Twill keep my boy from lightning.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil, v. 4. The bay was supposed by the Romans to protect against lightning because it was the tree of Apollo; hence, according to Pliny, Tiberius and other Roman emperors wore a wreath of bay as an amulet, especially in thunder storms.

AMY LOWELL, Lilacs.

Now you are a very decent flower,

A reticent flower,

A curiously clear-cut, candid flower,

Standing beside clean doorways,

Friendly to a house-cat and a pair of spectacles,

Making poetry out of a bit of moonlight

And a hundred or two sharp blossoms.

AMY LOWELL, Lilacs.

¹² Go down to Kew in lilac-time, in lilac-time,
in lilac-time;

Go down to Kew in lilac-time (it isn't far from London!)

And you shall wander hand in hand with love in summer's wonderland;

Go down to Kew in lilac-time (it isn't far from London!)

ALFRED NOYES, The Barrel-Organ.

¹³ The purple clusters load the lilac-bushes.

AMELIA C. WELBY, Hopeless Love.

¹⁴ Warble me now for joy of lilac-time.

WALT WHITMAN, Warble for Lilac-Time.

When lilacs last in the dooryard bloom'd,
And the great star early droop'd in the western sky in the night,

I mourn'd, and yet shall mourn with ever-returning spring.

WALT WHITMAN, When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd. St. 1.

The lilac-bush tall-growing with heart-shaped leaves of rich green,
With many a pointed blossom rising delicate, with the perfume strong I love,

With every leaf a miracle.

WALT WHITMAN, When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd. St. 3.

1 Who thought of the lilac? "I," dew said,
"I made the lilac out of my head."
"She made the lilac? Pooh!" trilled a linnet,
And each dew-note had a lilac in it.
HUMBERT WOLFE, The Lilac.

LILY

2 I like the chaliced lilies,
The heavy Eastern lilies,
The gorgeous tiger-lilies,
That in our garden grow.
T. B. ALDRICH, Tiger-Lilies.

3 And lilies are still lilies, pulled
By smutty hands, though spotted from their white.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 741.
And lilies white, prepared to touch
The whitest thought, nor soil it much.
E. B. BROWNING, A Flower in a Letter.

4 Dante's purple lilies, which he blew
To a larger bubble with his prophet breath.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vii, l. 935.

5 Very whitely still
The lilies of our lives may reassure
Their blossoms from their roots, accessible
Alone to heavenly dews that drop not fewer,
Growing straight, out of man's reach, on the hill.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese.
No. xxiv.

6 And every rose and lily there did stand
Better attired by Nature's hand.
ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Garden.

The lilies
Contending with the roses in her cheeks,
Who shall most set them off.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act v, sc. 3.

7 And the stately lilies stand
Fair in the silvery light,
Like saintly vestals, pale in prayer;
Their pure breath sanctifies the air,
As its fragrance fills the night.
JULIA C. R. DORR, A Red Rose.

8 Lilies are whitest in a blackamoor's hand.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3244.

9 By cool Siloam's shady rill
How sweet the lily grows!
REGINALD HEBER, First Sunday After Epiphany.

10 The lily is all in white, like a saint,
And so is no mate for me.
THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

11 We are Lilies fair,
The flower of virgin light;
Nature held us forth, and said,
"Lo! my thoughts of white."
LEIGH HUNT, Lilies.

12 Like these cool lilies may our loves remain,
Perfect and pure, and know not any stain.
ANDREW LANG, A Vow to Heavenly Venus.

13 Go bow thy head in gentle spite,
Thou lily white,
For she who spies thee waving here,
With thee in beauty can compare
As day with night.
J. M. LEGARÉ, To a Lily.

14 O lovely lily clean,
O lily springing green,
O lily bursting white,
Dear lily of delight,
Spring in my heart agen
That I may flower to men.
JOHN MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy.
Last st.

15 Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:
And yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.
New Testament: Matthew, vi, 28, 29; Luke,
xii, 27.

Yet neither spins nor cards, nor cares nor frets,
But to her mother Nature all her care she lets.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto vi, st. 16.

"Look to the lilies how they grow!"
"Twas thus the Saviour said, that we,
Even in the simplest flowers that blow,
God's ever-watchful care might see."
DAVID MOIR, Lilies.

"Thou wert not, Solomon! in all thy glory
Array'd," the lilies cry, "in robes like ours;
How vain your grandeur! Ah, how transitory
Are human flowers!"
HORACE SMITH, Hymn to the Flowers. St. 10.

16 Is not this lily pure?
What fuller can procure
A white so perfect, spotless clear
As in this flower, doth appear?
FRANCIS QUARLES, School of the Heart. Ode 30.

17 How bravely thou becomest thy bed, fresh
lily.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 15.

Like the lily,
That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd,
I'll hang my head and perish.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 151.

18 And the wand-like lily, which lifted up,
As a Mœnad, its moonlight-coloured cup,

Till the fiery star, which is its eye,
Gazed through clear dew on the tender sky.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, l. 33.

1
Now folds the lily all her sweetness up,
And slips into the bosom of the lake.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vii, l. 171.

2
But lilies, stolen from grassy mold,
No more curled state unfold,
Translated to a vase of gold;
In burning throne though they keep still Serenities unthawed and chill.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, Gilded Gold.

3
White as any lily flower.
UNKNOWN, King Horn, l. 15. (c. 1310)
Her cheeks round, white as the flour de lys.
WILLIAM CAXTON, Charles the Great. (1485)

II—Lily-of-the-Valley

4
The lily of the vale, of flowers the queen,
Puts on the robe she neither sew'd nor spun.
MICHAEL BRUCE, Elegy.

5
White bud! that in meek beauty dost lean
Thy cloistered cheek as pale as moonlight snow,
Thou seem'st, beneath thy huge, high leaf of
green,
An Eremita beneath his mountain's brow.
GEORGE CARLY, The Lily of the Valley.

6
And the Naiad-like lily of the vale,
Whom youth makes so fair and passion so
pale,
That the light of its tremulous bells is seen,
Through their pavilions of tender green.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, l. 21.

7
Where scattered wild the Lily of the Vale
Its balmy essence breathes.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 445.

8
That shy plant . . . the lily of the vale,
That loves the ground, and from the sun withholds
Her pensive beauty.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ix, l. 540.

14
A canner, exceedingly canny,
One morning remarked to his granny,
"A canner can can
Anything that he can,
But a canner can't can a can, can he?"
CAROLYN WELLS, The Canner.

15
A Tutor who tooted the flute
Tried to teach two young tooters to toot.
Said the two to the Tutor,
"Is it harder to toot, or
To tutor two tooters to toot?"
CAROLYN WELLS, The Tutor.

16
There's a Portuguese person called Howell
Who lays on his lies with a trowel;
Should he get over lying
'Twill be when he's done dying
For living is lying to Howell.

J. McNEILL WHISTLER. Referring to Charles Augustus Howell, an adventurer of the period. It was Howell who, in 1869, exhumed the body of D. G. Rossetti's first wife, in order to recover the manuscripts which Rossetti had impulsively placed in the coffin nine years previously.

17
There was an old man of Nantucket

Oh, won't you come up, come all the way up,
Come all the way up to Limerick?

UNKNOWN, Won't You Come Up to Limerick?

The chorus following the singing of an extemporized nonsense verse at convivial parties, the reference being to the town of Limerick, Ireland. The first instance of a limerick occurs in the anonymous History of Sixteen Wonderful Old Women, published in 1820.

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM

Abraham wore a stovepipe hat
That brushed the stars down where he walked;

His eyes were terrible to look at,
His eyes were black pools when he talked.

JOSEPH AVELANDER, Abraham Lincoln.

Some opulent force of genius, soul, and race,
Some deep life-current from far centuries
Flowed to his mind and lighted his sad eyes,
And gave his name, among great names, high place.

JOEL BENTON, Another Washington.

Into his heart's great jar Truth's brother poured
Strong love for men and freedom—fatal deed!

Some liked the wine, and some its making scored;

One broke the jar that held his own life's need.

CHARLES GRANGER BLANDIN, Lincoln.

No king this man, by grace of God's intent;

No, something better, freeman,—President!
A nature, modeled on a higher plan,
Lord of himself, an inborn gentleman!

GEORGE HENRY BOKER, Our Heroic Themes.
Read before Phi Beta Kappa at Harvard, 20
July, 1865, one of the earliest and most discriminating tributes to Lincoln.

Great in his goodness, humble in his state,
Firm in his purpose, yet not passionate,
He led his people with a tender hand,
And won by love a sway beyond command.

GEORGE HENRY BOKER, Our Heroic Themes.

Oh, slow to smite and swift to spare,
Gentle and merciful and just!
Who, in the fear of God, didst bear
The sword of power, a nation's trust!
W. C. BRYANT, Abraham Lincoln.

Our pastoral captain, skilled to crook
The spear into the pruning hook,
The simple, kindly man,
Lincoln, American.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Lincoln.

To set the stones back in the wall
Lest the divided house should fall,
The beams of peace be laid,
While kings looked on, afraid.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Lincoln.

Unheralded, God's captain came
As one that answers to his name;
Nor dreamed how high his charge,
His privilege how large.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Lincoln.

If so men's memories not a monument be,
None shalt thou have. Warm hearts, and not cold stone,

Must mark thy grave, or thou shalt lie, unknown.
Marbles keep not themselves; how then, keep
thee?

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Thy Monument.

O Uncommon Commoner! may your name
Forever lead like a living flame!
Unschool'd scholar! how did you learn
The wisdom a lifetime may not earn?

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, The Uncommon Commoner.

Great Nature's forces, unrestrained and free,
Produced, by chance, this giant of mankind,
And challenged man to solve his mystery.

REMBRANDT W. B. DITMARS, Lincoln.

Spontaneous! Inspired! The perfect flower
Of chance, he was by liberal Nature sent
To lead men nobly with unconscious power,
And justify the law of accident.

REMBRANDT W. B. DITMARS, Lincoln.

Hail, Lincoln! As the swift years lengthen
Still more majestic grows thy fame;
The ties that bind us to thee strengthen;
Starlike-immortal shines thy name.

NATHAN HASKELL DOLE, Lincoln's Birthday.

His heart was as great as the world, but there was no room in it to hold the memory of a wrong.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Greatness.

We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more.

J. S. GIBBONS, We Are Coming, Father Abraham. (New York Evening Post, 16 July, 1862.)

A martyr to the cause of man,
His blood is freedom's eucharist,
And in the world's great hero list
His name shall lead the van.

CHARLES G. HALPIN, The Death of Lincoln.

Lincoln had faith in time, and time has justified his faith.

BENJAMIN HARRISON, Lincoln Day Address,
Chicago, 1898.

Strange mingling of mirth and tears, of the tragic and grotesque, of cap and crown, of Socrates and Rabelais, of Æsop and Marcus Aurelius—Lincoln, the gentlest memory of the world.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Lincoln.

Lincoln was not a type. He stands alone—no ancestors, no fellows, no successors.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Lincoln.

Hundreds of people are now engaged in smoothing out the lines on Lincoln's face—forcing all features to the common mold—so that he may be known, not as he really was, but, according to their poor standard, as he should have been.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Lincoln.

Another expense we didn't used to have was buyin' an entirely new life of Lincoln ever month or so.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 21.

If the good people in their wisdom shall see fit to keep me in the background, I have been too familiar with disappointment to be much chagrined.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Communication, Sangamon Journal, when first a candidate for the Illinois State Legislature, 1832.

Nobody ever expected me to be President. In my poor, lean, lank face nobody has ever seen that any cabbages were sprouting.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, against Douglas, in campaign of 1860.

They have seen in his [Douglas's] round, jolly, fruitful face, post-offices, land-offices, marsh-ships and cabinet-appointments, charge-ships and foreign missions, bursting out in wonderful exuberance.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, against Douglas, in campaign of 1860.

His head is bowed. He thinks of men and kings.

Yea, when the sick world cries, how can he sleep?

Too many peasants fight, they know not why;

Too many homesteads in black terror weep.

VACCEL LINDSAY, Abraham Lincoln Walks at Midnight.

That nation has not lived in vain which has given the world Washington and Lincoln, the best great men and the greatest good men whom history can show.

HENRY CABOT LODGE, Lincoln. Address before Massachusetts Legislature, 12 Feb., 1909.

Great captains, with their guns and drums,
Disturb our judgment for the hour,
But at last silence comes;

These are all gone, and, standing like a tower,

Our children shall behold his fame,

The kindly-earnest, brave, foreseeing man,
Sagacious, patient, dreading praise, not blame,
New birth of our new soil, the first American.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

Nature, they say, doth dote,
And cannot make a man
Save on some worn-out plan
Repeating us by rote:

For him her Old World moulds aside she threw
And, choosing sweet clay from the breast
Of the unexhausted West,

With stuff untainted shaped a hero new.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

A blend of mirth and sadness, smiles and tears;

A quaint knight-errant of the pioneers;

A homely hero, born of star and sod;

A Peasant-Prince; a Masterpiece of God.

WALTER MALONE, Abraham Lincoln.

When the Norm Mother saw the Whirlwind Hour
Greatening and darkening as it hurried on,

She left the Heaven of Heroes and came down
To make a man to meet the mortal need.

She took the tried clay of the common road—
Clay warm yet with the genial heat of earth,

Dashed through it all a strain of prophecy,

Tempered the heap with thrill of human tears

Then mixed a laughter with the serious stuff.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

Here was a man to hold against the world,
A man to match the mountains and the sea.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

The color of the ground was in him, the red earth,
The smack and tang of elemental things:

The rectitude and patience of the cliff,

The goodwill of the rain that loves all leaves,

The friendly welcome of the wayside well,

The courage of the bird that dares the sea,

The gladness of the wind that shakes the corn,

The pity of the snow that hides all scars, . . .

The tolerance and equity of light.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

One fire was on his spirit, one resolve—
To send the keen axe to the root of wrong,

Clearing a free way for the feet of God,

The eyes of conscience testing every stroke.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

So came the Captain with the mighty heart;
And when the judgment thunders split the house,

Wrenching the rafters from their ancient rest,

He held the ridgepole up, and spiked again

The rafters of the house.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

And when he fell in whirlwind, he went down
As when a lordly cedar, green with boughs,
Goes down with a great shout upon the hills,
And leaves a lonesome place against the sky.
EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

I am Ann Rutledge who sleeps beneath these weeds,
Beloved of Abraham Lincoln,
Wedded to him, not through union,
But through separation.
Bloom forever, O Republic,
From the dust of my bosom.
EDGAR LEE MASTERS, Ann Rutledge. Engraved on her tombstone at Petersburg, Ill.

But from her beauty and her doom
A man rose merciful and just;
And a great People still can feel
The passion of her dust.

When Abraham Lincoln was murdered
The one thing that interested Matthew Arnold
Was that the assassin Shouted in Latin
As he leapt on the stage.
This convinced Matthew
There was still hope for America.
CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Point of View. The Latin phrase was "Sic semper tyrannis."

Mr. Lincoln was deficient in those little links which make up the path of a woman's happiness.

MARY OWENS, explaining her refusal to marry
Lincoln.

I have now come to the conclusion never again to think of marrying, and for this reason: I can never be satisfied with anyone who would be blockhead enough to have me.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Mrs. Browning,
1 April, 1838, after being rejected by Mary Owens.

6
For he, to whom we had applied
Our shopman's test of age and worth,
Was elemental when he died,
As he was ancient at his birth:
The saddest among kings of earth,
Bowed with a galling crown, this man
Met rancor with a cryptic mirth,
Laconic—and Olympian.
E. A. ROBINSON, The Master.

7
When Abraham Lincoln was shoveled into

Look on this cast, and know the hand
That bore a nation in its hold;
From this mute witness understand
What Lincoln was—how large of mould.
E. C. STEDMAN, The Hand of Lincoln.

Lo, as I gaze, the statured man,
Built up from yon large hand appears:
A type that nature wills to plan
But once in all a people's years.
E. C. STEDMAN, The Hand of Lincoln.

 ANTEMUS WARD, Interview With Lincoln.

2 O Captain! my Captain! our fearful trip is done,
 The ship has weather'd every rack, the prize we sought is won,
 The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,
 While follow eyes the steady keel, the vessel grim and daring;
 But O heart! heart! heart!
 O the bleeding drops of red,
 Where on the deck my Captain lies,
 Fallen cold and dead.

WALT WHITMAN, O Captain! My Captain!

The ship is anchor'd safe and sound, its voyage closed and done.
 From fearful trip the victor ship comes in with object won;
 Exult, O shores, and ring, O bells!
 But I with mournful tread,
 Walk the deck my Captain lies,
 Fallen cold and dead.

WALT WHITMAN, O Captain! My Captain!

This dust was once the man,
 Gentle, plain, just and resolute, under whose cautious hand,
 Against the foulest crime in history known in any land or age,
 Was saved the Union of these States.

WALT WHITMAN, This Dust Was Once the Man.

3 There is no name in all our country's story
 So loved as his today:
 No name which so unites the things of glory
 With life's plain, common way.
 ROBERT WHITAKER, Abraham Lincoln.

4 Lincoln was a very normal man with very normal gifts, but all upon a great scale, all knit together in loose and natural form, like the great frame in which he moved and dwelt.
 WOODROW WILSON, Address, Chicago, 12 Feb., 1909.

5 You lay a wreath on murdered Lincoln's bier,
 You, who with mocking pencil went to trace,
 Broad for the self-complacent British sneer,
 His length of shambling limb, his furrowed face.

TOM TAYLOR, Abraham Lincoln. This poem appeared in Punch, 6 May, 1865, accompanying a full-page cartoon with the caption, "Britannia Sympathizes with Columbia," representing Punch among the mourners at Lincoln's bier, upon which Britannia is laying a wreath. It was Punch's apology for its scurrilous abuse and caricature of Lincoln during the whole period of the war. The poem has often been ascribed to Shirley Brooks, but an entry in his diary, under date of 10

May, 1865, is conclusive evidence that the verses were written by Taylor. Brooks wrote: "Dined Punch, all there. Let out my views about some verses on Lincoln in which T. T. had not only made P. eat 'umble pie, but swallow dish and all." So far from being the writer of the verses, he condemned their publication. At the time the poem appeared, it was also ascribed to Tennyson.

Beside this corpse, that bears for winding sheet
 The Stars and Stripes he lived to rear anew,
 Between the mourners at his head and feet,
 Say, scurril jester, is there room for you?

Yes, he had lived to shame me from my soe'er,
 To lame my pencil and confute my pen—
 To make me own this kind of Princes peer,
 This rail-splitter a true-born king of men.
 TOM TAYLOR, Abraham Lincoln.

Sore heart, so stopped when it at last beat high!
 Sad life, cut short just as its triumph came!
 TOM TAYLOR, Abraham Lincoln.

Vile hand, that brandest murder on a strife,
 Whate'er its grounds, stoutly and nobly striven,
 And with the martyr's crown, crownest a life
 With much to praise, little to be forgiven.
 TOM TAYLOR, Abraham Lincoln.

The lion is, beyond dispute,
Allow'd the most majestic brute;
His valour and his generous mind
Prove him superior of his kind.
JOHN GAY, Fables, Pt. ii, fab. 9.

¹²
This country, Francesco . . . had scarce
seen the lions.
ROBERT GREENE, Works. Vol viii, p. 68. (1590)
The reference was originally to the lions in the Tower of London, but was soon extended to mean any unusual sight.

This is not the right season of the year to show the lions.

17 I hope we shall not be as wise as the frogs to whom Jupiter gave the stork as their king.
To trust expedients with such a king on the throne would be just as wise as if there were a lion in the lobby, and we should vote to let him in and chain him, instead of fastening
the door to keep him out.

COLONEL SILVUS TITUS, Speech, on the Exclusion Bill, House of Commons, 7 Jan., 1680.

This, Titus's most famous speech, was delivered against the limitation which Charles offered to impose upon a Catholic sovereign rather than pass the bill excluding his brother from the throne. "A lion in the lobby" passed into a proverb.

But Titus said, with his uncommon sense,
When the Exclusion Bill was in suspense:

"I hear a lion in the lobby roar;

Say, Mr. Speaker, shall we shut the door
And keep him there, or shall we let him in
To try if we can turn him out again?"

JAMES BRAMSTON, Art of Politics.

18 I girded up my Lions & fled the Seen.

I—Literature: Definitions

¹⁰ Literature is the thought of thinking Souls.
CARLYLE, Essays: Memoirs of the Life of Scott.

¹¹ Literature is "The expression of a nation's mind in writing."

CHANNING, Remarks on American Literature.

¹² Literature . . . is an art, a science, a profession, a trade, and an accident. The literature that is of lasting value is an accident. It is something that happens.

S. McC. CROTHERS, Free Trade vs. Protection in Literature.

¹³ There is first the literature of knowledge, and secondly, the literature of power. The function of the first is—to teach; the function of the second is—to move; the first is a rudder, the second an oar or a sail. The first speaks to the mere discursive understanding; the second speaks ultimately, it may happen, to the higher understanding of reason.

DE QUINCEY, Essays on the Poets: Pope.

Books, we are told, propose to instruct or to amuse. Indeed! . . . The true antithesis to knowledge, in this case, is not pleasure but power. All that is literature seeks to communicate power: all that is not literature seeks to communicate knowledge.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Letters to a Young Man.

No. 3. De Quincey adds that he is indebted for this distinction to "many years' conversation with Mr. Wordsworth."

Literature exists to please—to lighten the burden of men's lives; to make them for a short while forget their sorrows and their sins, their silenced hearths, their disappointed hopes, their grim futures—and those men of letters are the best loved who have best performed literature's truest office.

BURRELL, Obiter Dicta: Office of Literature.

Literature does not please by moralizing us; it moralizes us because it pleases.

H. W. GARRON, The Profession of Poetry, p. 264.

¹⁴ Literature is an avenue to glory, ever open for those ingenious men who are deprived of honours or of wealth.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 24.

Literature—the most seductive, the most deceiving, the most dangerous of professions.

JOHN MORLEY, Life of Burke, p. 9.

¹⁵ Literature is the effort of man to indemnify himself for the wrongs of his condition.

EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: London.

¹⁶ Literature, taken in all its bearings, forms the grand line of demarcation between the human and the animal kingdoms.

WILLIAM GODWIN, The Enquirer: Early Taste for Reading.

¹ Literature flourishes best when it is half a trade and half an art.

WILLIAM RALPH INGE, The Victorian Age.

Literature was formerly an art and finance a trade: to-day it is the reverse.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. I, No. 65.

² The classics are only primitive literature. They belong to the same class as primitive machinery and primitive music and primitive medicine.

STEPHEN LEACOCK, Behind the Beyond: Homer and the Humbug.

The fashion of liking Racine will pass like that of coffee. (La mode d'aimer Racine passera comme la mode du café.)

MADAME DE SÉVIGNÉ, as quoted by Voltaire. (Lettres, 29 Jan., 1690.) La Harpe compressed the epigram to, "Racine passera comme le café." Since neither Racine nor coffee has passed, the prophecy may, from one angle, be considered a good one.

³ Language put to its best purpose, used at its utmost power and with the greatest skill, and recorded that it may not pass away, evaporate and be forgotten, is what we call, for want of a better word, literature.

J. W. MACKAIL, Classical Studies, p. 214.

⁴ American literature is English literature made in this country. . . . The American spirit in literature is a myth.

JOHN MACY, Spirit of American Literature. Ch. 1.

Alas for the South! Her books have grown fewer—

She was never much given to literature.

J. GORDON COOGLER. An immortal rhyme by a southern bard.

⁵ Take the whole range of imaginative literature, and we are all wholesale borrowers. In every matter that relates to invention, to use, or beauty, or form, we are borrowers.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, The Lost Arts.

Literature is a succession of books from books. . . . Every novel was suckled at the breasts of older novels, and great mothers are often prolific of anemic offspring.

JOHN MACY, Spirit of American Literature. Ch. 1.

⁶ Great literature is simply language charged with meaning to the utmost possible degree.

⁸ What a place to plunder! (Was für Plunder!)

FIELD MARSHALL VON BLÜCHER, on viewing London from St. Paul's, after the peace banquet at Oxford, 1814. But the correct translation of "Was für Plunder" is "What trash! what rubbish!" What Blücher must have said was "Was für Plünder," to plunder, to sack. The Umlaut makes all the difference. Thackeray also forgot it:

¹³ Oh, mine in snows and summer heats,
These good old Tory brick-built streets!
My eye is pleased with all it meets
In Bloomsbury.

WILFRED WHITTEN, Bloomsbury.

And as sure as London is built of bricks.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Education.

¹⁴ Earth has not anything to show more fair:
Dull would he be of soul who could pass by
A sight so touching in its majesty.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets, Pt. ii, No. 30. Composed upon Westminster Bridge.

N'er saw I, never felt, a calm so deep!
The river glideth at his own sweet will.

Dear God! the very houses seem asleep;
And all that mighty heart is lying still!

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets, Pt. ii, No. 36.

II—London: Criticism

¹⁵ Lo, where huge London, huger day by day,
O'er six fair counties spreads its hideous sway!
ALFRED AUSTIN, The Golden Age.

¹⁶ I came to Gotham, where many, if not all,
I saw were fools. (Veni Gotham, ubi multos, Si non omnes, vidi stultos.)

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, Barnaby Rannerium, (1638)

A mighty mass of brick, and smoke, and slapping,
Dirty and dusty, but as wide as eye
Could reach, with here and there a sail just skipping

In sight, then lost amidst the forestry
Of masts; a wilderness of steeples peeping
On tiptoe through their sea-coal canopy;
A huge, dun cupola, like a foolscap crown
On a fool's head—and there is London Town!

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto x, st. 82.

Thou art in London—in that pleasant place,
Where every kind of mischief's daily brewing.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto xii, st. 23.

¹⁷ That monstrous tuberosity of civilised life,
the capital of England.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus, Bk. iii, ch. 6.

There is a Stupidest of London men, actually resident, with bed and board of some kind, in London.

CARLYLE, Essays: Biography.

London Bridge was made for wise men to go over and fools to go under.

JOHN CLARKE, Paranomia, 249. (1639) A reference to the danger incurred by boats in shooting the rapids of the old bridge, where Anne Killigrew, to whose memory Dryden wrote a famous ode, was drowned in 1685.

There is a saying also that London Bridge was built upon wool-picks.

JOHN ATUREY, Natural History of Wiltshire, p. 98. (c. 1685)

Let but thy wicked men from out thee go,
And all the fools that crowd thee so,
Even thou, who dost thy millions boast,
A village less than Islington will grow,
A solitude almost.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Solitude.

Metlunk I see

The monster London huch at me.

London-over-the-Border

A term applied to the Metropolitan district in Essex, derived from an article on that area in Household Words (12 Sept., 1857) entitled Londoners-over-the-Border. The article has been attributed without authority to Charles Dickens.

Ye towers of Julius, London's lasting shame,
With many a foul and midnight murder fed.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard. Pt. ii, st. 3. Referring to the Tower of London.

Purg'd by the sword, and purified by fire,
Then had we seen proud London's hated walls;
Owls would have hooted in St. Peter's choir,
And foxes stunk and litter'd in St. Paul's.
THOMAS GRAY, Impromptu on Lord Holland's Seat at Kingsgate.

People-pestered London.

NICHOLAS GRIMALD, The Lover to His Dear.

London has a great belly but no palate.

THOMAS HOBBS, History of Civil Wars, p. 169.

London's the dining-room of Christendom.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, City Pageant.

London! the needy villain's gen'ral home,
The common shore of Paris, and of Rome;
With eager thirst, by folly or by fate,
Sucks in the dregs of each corrupted state.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 93.

For who would leave, unbrib'd, Hibernia's land,
Or change the rocks of Scotland for the Strand?

Here nahee, rapine, accident, conspire,

And now a rabble rages, now a fire;
Their ambush here relentless rufians lay,
And here the felt attorney prowls for prey;
Here falling houses thunder on your head,
And here a female atheist talks you dead.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 9.

Where London's column, pointing at the skies,
Like a tall bully, lifts the head and lies.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 339.

Londoner-like ask as much more as you will take

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 349. (1678)

You are now

In London, that great sea, whose ebb and flow

At once is deaf and loud, and on the shore
Vomits its wrecks, and still howls on for more.

SHELLEY, Letter to Maria Gisborne, l. 192.

We looked o'er London, where men wither and choke,

Roofed in, poor souls, renouncing stars and skies,

THORNDIKE WATTS-DUNTON, A Talk on Waterloo Bridge.

LONELINESS, see Solitude

LONGFELLOW, HENRY WADSWORTH

O gracious Poet and benign,
Beloved presence! now as then
Thou standest by the hearths of men.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Longfellow.

The New World's sweetest singer! Time may lay

Rude touch on some, thy betters; yet for thee
Thy seat is where the throned immortals be.

CRAYEN L. BETTS, Longfellow.

Whose Muse, benignant and serene,
Still keeps his Autumn chaplet green

Because his verse is pure!

AUSTIN DOBSON, Longfellow.

Ah! gentlest soul! how gracious, how benign Breathes through our troubled life that voice of thine,

Filled with a sweetness born of happier spheres,
That wins and warms, that kindles, softens,
cheers,
That calms the wildest woe and stays the bitterest tears!

O. W. HOLMES, To H. W. Longfellow.

You may say that he's smooth and all that till you're hoarse,

But remember that elegance also is force;
After polishing granite as much as you will,
The heart keeps its tough old persistency
still.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1311.

The winds have talked with him confidingly;
The trees have whispered to him; and the
night

Hath held him gently as a mother might,
And taught him all sad tones of melody.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, Longfellow.

A pure sweet spirit, generous and large
Was thine, dear poet. Calm, unturbulent,
Its course along Life's various ways it went,
Like some broad river. . . . Ever to the sea . . .

Thy life flowed on, from all low passions free,
Filled with high thoughts, charmed into Poesy
To all the world a solace and delight.

W. W. STORY, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

The gentleman was a sweet, beautiful soul, but I have entirely forgotten his name.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Remark, as he stood by the coffin of the dead poet.

Threadbare his songs seem now, to lettered
ken:

They were worn threadbare next the hearts of men.

WILLIAM WATSON, Longfellow.

10 A spring there is, whose silver waters show,
Clear as a glass, the shining sands below:
A flowery lotos spreads its arms above,
Shades all the banks, and seems itself a grove.
POPE, Sappho to Phaon. l. 179.

11 The lotos bowed above the tide and dreamed.
MARGARET J. PRESTON, Rhodela's Soudal.

12 Thro' every hollow cave and alley lone,
Round and round the spicy downs the yellow
Lotos-dust is blown.
TENNYSON, The Lotos-Eaters: Choric Song.

13 In that dark land of mystic dream
Where dark Osiris sprung,
It bloomed beside his sacred stream
While yet the world was young;
And every secret Nature told,
Of golden wisdom's power,
Is nestled still in every fold,
Within the Lotos flower.
WILLIAM WINTER, A Lotos Flower.

LOUSE

14 Ha! Wha're ye gaun, ye crowlin' ferlie!
Your impudence protects you sairly;
I canna say but ye strunt rarely
Owre gauze an' lace;
Tho' faith! I fear ye dine but sparely
On sic a place.
BURNS, To a Louse.

Ye ugly, creepin' blastit wonner,
Detested, shunn'd by saunt an' sinner!
How dare ye set your fit upon her,
Sae fine a lady?
Gae somewhere else, and seek your dinner
On some poor body.
BURNS, To a Louse.

15 Better a louse in the pot than no flesh at all.
JOHN CLARKE, Paramitologia. 241. (1639)

16 I care not I, sir, not three skips of a louse.
BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. ii, l. (1633)

Lady Montague told me, and in her own house,
"I do not care for you three skips of a louse."
I forgive her, for women, however well-bred,
Will still talk of that which runs most in their head.

I—Love: Definitions

18 Nuptial love maketh mankind; friendly love perfecteth it; wanton love corrupteth and debaseth it.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love.

If divine Plato's tenets they be true,
Two Venuses, two loves there be;
The one from heaven, unbegotten still
Which knits our souls in unity;
The other famous over all the world,

Blinding the hearts of gods and men,
Dishonest, wanton, and seducing she,
Rules whom she will, both where and when.
BERGALDUS, Epigram. (BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. III, sec. 1, mem. 1, subs. 2.)

1 Ask not of me, love, what is love?
Ask what is good of God above—
Ask of the great sun what is light—
Ask what is darkness of the night—
Ask sin of what may be forgiven—
Ask what is happiness of Heaven—
Ask what is folly of the crowd—
Ask what is fashion of the shroud—
Ask what is sweetness of thy kiss—
Ask of thyself what beauty is.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Large Party and Entertainment. See also BEAUTY AND LOVE.

2 Love is a fiend, a fire, a heaven, a hell,
Where pleasure, pain, and sad repentance dwell.
RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content. St. 38.

3 Love is that orbit of the restless soul
Whose circle grazes the confines of space,
Bounding within the limits of its race
Utmost extremes.

GEORGE HENRY BOXER, Sonnet: Love.

4 Unless you can think, when the song is done,
No other is soft in the rhythm;
Unless you can feel, when left by One,
That all men else go with him;
Unless you can know, when unpraised by his breath,
That your beauty itself wants proving;
Unless you can swear "For life, for death!"—
Oh, fear to call it loving!

E. B. BROWNING, A Woman's Shortcomings.

5 Unless you can muse in a crowd all day
On the absent face that fixed you;
Unless you can love, as the angels may,
With the breadth of heaven betwixt you;
Unless you can dream that his faith is fast,
Through behaving and unbehaving;
Unless you can die when the dream is past—
Oh, never call it loving!

E. B. BROWNING, A Woman's Shortcomings.

6 Love is the business of the idle, but the idleness of the busy.

BULWER-LYTTON, Rienzi. Ch. 4.

Love has no thought of self!
Love buys not with the ruthless usurer's gold
The loathsome prostitution of a hand
Without a heart! Love sacrifices all things
To bless the thing it loves!

BULWER-LYTTON, The Lady of Lyons. Act V, sc. 2, l. 23.

7 All love, at first, like generous wine,
Ferments and frets until 'tis fine;

But, when 'tis settled on the lee,
And from th' impurer matter free,
Becomes the richer still the older,
And proves the pleasanter the colder.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 361.

8 Yes, Love indeed is light from heaven;
A spark of that immortal fire
With angels shared, by Allah given,
To lift from earth our low desire.

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1131.

Love! the surviving gift of Heaven,
The choicest sweet of Paradise,
In life's else bitter cup distilled.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Ode to the Memory of Burns, l. 16.

9 Love is ever the beginning of Knowledge as fire is of light.

CARLYLE, Essays: Death of Goethe.

A loving heart is the beginning of all knowledge.

CARLYLE, Essays: Biography.

Knowledge is the parent of love; wisdom, love itself.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

10 What is love? 'tis nature's treasure,
'Tis the storehouse of her joys;
'Tis the highest heaven of pleasure,
'Tis a bliss which never cloyes.

THOMAS CHATTERTON, The Revenge. Act i, 2.

Ah, what is love? It is a pretty thing,
As sweet unto a shepherd as a king,
And sweeter too,
For kings have cares that wait upon a crown,
And cares can make the sweetest love to frown.
ROBERT GREENE, The Shepherd's Wife's Song.
What thing is love?—for (well I wot) love is a thing.

It is a prick, it is a sting.

It is a pretty, pretty thing;

It is a fire, it is a coal,

Whose flame creeps in at every hole!

GEORGE PEXLE, The Hunting of Cupid.

11 Love's but the frailty of the mind,
When 'tis not with ambition join'd.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 12.

And love's the noblest frailty of the mind.

DRYDEN, The Indian Emperor. Act ii, sc. 2.

That reason of all unreasonable actions.

DRYDEN, The Assignation. Act iii, sc. 1.

12 When too much zeal doth fire devotion,
Love is not love, but superstition.

RICHARD CORBET, R. C.

13 Our love is principle, and has its root
In reason, is judicious, manly, free.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 353.

14 Love is a sickness full of woes,
All remedies refusing;

A plant that with most cutting grows,
Most barren with best using.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Hymen's Triumph.

Many are the names applied to friendship;
but where youth and beauty enter in, there friendship is rightly called love and is held to be the fairest of the gods.

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Third Discourse on Kingship, Sec. 99.

Knightly love is blent with reverence
As heavenly air is blent with heavenly blue.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

In the last analysis, love is only the reflection of a man's own worthiness from other men.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

Love, which is the essence of God, is not for levity, but for the total worth of man.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

Love is the blossom where there blows
Every thing that lives or grows.

GILES FLETCHER, Christ's Victory.

Love is life's end (an end, but never ending);
All joys, all sweets, all happiness, awarding;
Love is life's wealth (ne'er spent, but ever spending);

More rich by giving, taking by discarding;
Love's life's reward, rewarded in rewarding.

GILES FLETCHER, Britannia's Ida. Canto ii,
st. 3.

Love is the tyrant of the heart; it darkens
Reason, confounds discretion; deaf to counsel,
It runs a headlong course to desperate madness.

JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy. Act iii,
sc. 3, l. 105.

Love is God's essence; Power but his attribute: therefore is his love greater than his power.

RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo. Pt. iv.

Thou canst not pray to God without praying to Love, but mayest pray to Love without praying to God.

RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo. Pt.
xiii.

It is the special quality of love not to be able to remain stationary, to be obliged to increase under pain of diminishing.

ANDRÉ GIDE, The Counterfitters. Pt. iii, ch. 5.

Love is a platform upon which all ranks meet.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act ii.

Love and desire are the spirit's wings to great deeds. (Lust und Liebe sind die Fittige zu grossen Thaten.)

GOETHE, Iphigenie auf Tauris. Act ii, sc. 1.

Love is a lock that linketh noble minds,
Faith is the key that shuts the spring of love.

ROBERT GREENE, Alcida.

Love is a circle, that doth restless move
In the same sweet eternity of love.

ROBERT HERRICK, Love, What It Is.

To love is to know the sacrifices which eternity exacts from life.

JOHN OLIVER HOBBS, School for Saints. Ch.
25.

In love inhere these evils—first war, then peace. (In amore hæc sunt mala, bellum, Pax rursum.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 267.

Love 's like the flies, and, drawing-room or garden, goes all over a house.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: Love.

Love is only one of many passions . . . and has no great influence on the sum of life.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ix, p. 244.

Love is the leech of life, next to our Lord,
It is the graft of peace, the nearest road to heaven.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. PASSUS ii, l. 201.

Love keeps the cold out better than a cloak.
It serves for food and raiment.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc.
5, l. 52.

True Love is but a humble, low-born thing,
And hath its food served up in earthen ware;
It is a thing to walk with, hand in hand,
Through the everydayness of this workday world.

J. R. LOWELL, Love, l. 1.

Love is a beautiful dream.

WILLIAM SHARP, Cor Cordium.

Therefore the love which us doth bind,
But Fate so enviously debars,
Is the conjunction of the mind,
And opposition of the stars.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Definition of Love.

Love is a flame to burn out human wills,
Love is a flame to set the will on fire,
Love is a flame to cheat men into mire. . . .

Love puts such bitter poison on Fate's arrow.

JOHN MASEFIELD, *The Widow in the Bye
Street*. Pt. ii.

Love is all in fire, and yet is ever freezing;
Love is much in winning, yet is more in los-
ing;

Love is ever sick, and yet is never dying;
Love is ever true, and yet is ever lying;
Love does doat in liking, and is mad in loathing;

Love indeed is anything, yet indeed is nothing.

THOMAS MOULSTON, Mart. Act ii, sc. 2.

Love is the mind's strong physic, and the pill
That leaves the heart sick and o'erturns the will.
THOMAS MIMOLETON, Burt. Act iii, sc. 1.

¹
This have I known alway: Love is no more
Than the wide blossom which the wind assails,
Than the great tide that treads the shifting
shore,

Strewing fresh wreckage gathered in the gales;
Pity me that the heart is slow to learn
What the swift mind beholds at every turn.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Sonnets. No. vi.
(The Harp-Weaver and Other Poems.)

As God's my judge, I do cry Holy! Holy!
Upon the name of Love, however brief.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Love Sonnet.

Love is nothing else but an insatiate thirst
Of the swift mind beholds at every turn.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

³
One of the glories of society is to have created woman where Nature made a female, to have created a continuity of desire where Nature only thought of perpetuating the species; in fine, to have invented love.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions.

Love is based upon a view of women that is impossible to any man who has had any experience of them.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iv, p. 67.

"Tell me, what's Love?" said Youth, one day,
To drooping Age, who crost his way.—

"It is a sunny hour of play,
For which repentance dear doth pay,
Repentance! Repentance!

And this is Love, as wise men say."

THOMAS MOORE, Youth and Age.

Romantic love is the privilege of emperors, kings, soldiers and artists; it is the butt of democrats, traveling salesmen, magazine poets and the writers of American novels.

Love is a kind of warfare. (Militaristic species amor est.)

OVIN, Art Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 233.

Every lover is a soldier, and Cupid has a camp of his own. The age that is meet for the wars is also suited to Venus. (Militat omnis amans, et habet sua castra Cupido; Quis bello est habilis, Veneri quoque convenit arma.)

OVIN, Amores. Bk. i, ep. 9, l. 1.

Love, an' please your Honour, is exactly like war,
in this, that a soldier, though he has escaped three weeks complete o' Saturday night, may, nevertheless, be shot through his heart on Sunday morning.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. vii, ch. 21.

Who sell their laurel for a myrtle wreath,
And love when they should fight.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 229.

Love is an egotism of two. (L'amour est un egoïsme à deux.)

ANTOINE DE SALLE.

Many people when they fall in love look for a little haven of refuge from the world, where they can be sure of being admired when they are not admirable, and praised when they are not praiseworthy.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 180.

¹⁴
True love's the gift which God has given
To man alone beneath the heaven: . . .

It is the secret sympathy,
The silver link, the silken tie,
Which heart to heart, and mind to mind,
In body and in soul can bind.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Can. v, st. 13.

¹⁵
Good shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis to
love.

It is to be all made of sighs and tears; . . .
It is to be all made of faith and service: . . .

It is to be all made of fantasy.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 2, l. 89.

Love is merely a madness, and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house and a whip as madmen do.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 420.

Love is a familiar; Love is a devil; there is no evil angel but Love.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 2, l. 177.

It adds a precious seeing to the eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 333.

And when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods Make heaven drowsy with the harmony.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 344.

1 Love is a smoke raised with the fume of sighs; Being purged, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes; Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears: What is it else? a madness most discreet, A choking gall and a preserving sweet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 196. (1595)

Love is a sour delight, a sugar'd grief,
A living death, an ever-dying life;
A breach of Reason's law, a secret thief,
A sea of tears, an everlasting strife;
A bait for fools, a scourge of noble wits,
A deadly wound, a shot which ever hits.

THOMAS WATSON, The Passionate Centurie of Love. Sonnet xviii. (1582) Watson's eighteen-line "sonnets" were closely studied by Shakespeare, whose own sonnets appeared in 1600.

2 Love's heralds should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams,

Driving back shadows over louring hills:
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 4.

3 Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove:
O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark
That looks on tempests and is never shaken;
It is a star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.

Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks

Within his bending sickle's compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.

If this be error and upon me proved,
I never writ, nor no man ever loved.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxvi.

Love's not love

When it is mingled with regards that stand Aloof from the entire point.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 241.

4 Love is the salt of life.

JOHN SHEFFIELD, Ode on Love. Canto v.

5 Love is a pleasing but a various clime.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Elegy, v.

Love is an April's doubtful day:

Awhile we see the tempest lour;

Anon the radiant heav'n survey,

And quite forget the fitting show'r.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Song, vii.

6 Love is an appetite of generation by the mediation of beauty.

SOCRATES. (MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.)

7 Love is the emblem of eternity: It confounds all notion of time: effaces all memory of a beginning, all fear of an end.

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. viii, ch. 2.

8 Love in its essence is spiritual fire.

SWEDENBORG, True Christian Religion. Sec. 31.

Love consists in desiring to give what is our own to another and feeling his delight as our own.

SWEDENBORG, Divine Love and Wisdom. Sec. 47.

9 A reality in the domain of the imagination.

TALLEYRAND, defining love. (COOPER, Talleyrand.)

10 Love is swift, sincere, pious, pleasant, gentle, strong, patient, faithful, prudent, long-suffering, manly and never seeking her own; for wheresoever a man seeketh his own, there he falleth from love.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

11 Love is the strange bewilderment which overtakes one person on account of another person.

JAMES THURBER AND E. B. WHITE, Is Sex Necessary?

12 You are as prone to love as the sun is to shine; it being the most delightful and natural employment of the Soul of Man: without which you are dark and miserable. For certainly he that delights not in Love makes vain the universe, and is of necessity to himself the greatest burden.

THOMAS TRAHERNE, Centuries of Meditations.

13 The bodies of lovers are the forms of infatigable Desire,

Male and female serpents of the Holy Spirit Breathing out its essence in individual outline.

W. J. THOMAS, The Mystical of Pythagoras.

14 Love is the child of thought and the child of the senses.

of disillusion; love is consolation in desolation; it is the sole medicine against death, for it is death's brother.

UNAMUNO, The Tragic Sense of Life, p. 132.

For love is but the heart's immortal thirst
To be completely known and all forgiven.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Love.

Love is not getting, but giving; not a wild dream of pleasure, and a madness of desire—oh, no, love is not that—it is goodness, and honor, and peace and pure living.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Little Rivers: A Handful of Heather.

To love is to believe, to hope, to know;
'Tis an essay, a taste of Heaven below!

EDMOND WALLER, Divine Love. Canto iii, l. 17.

Life's one joy is this,
To love, to taste the soul's divine delight
Of loving some most lovely soul or sight—
To worship still, though never an answering sign
Should come from Love asleep within the shrine.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, The Coming of Love. Pt. x, l. 12.

And I know that the hand of God is the promise
of my own,

And I know that the spirit of God is the brother
of my own,

And that all the men ever born are also my brothers, and the women my sisters and lovers,

And that a kelson of the creation is love.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 5.

Say not you love a roasted fowl,
But you may love a screaming owl,
And, if you can, the unwieldy toad.

WORDSWORTH, Loving and Liking.

Love is the god who gives safety to the city.
ZENO. (DENIS, Theories Morales. Vol. i, p. 346.)

Now I know what love is. (Nunc scio quid sit Amor.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. No. viii, l. 43.

Tell me, my heart, if this be love.

GEORGE LYTTLETON, Song: When Delia.

But love is such a mystery

I cannot find it out:

For when I think I'm best resolved,

I then am most in doubt.

MR JOHN SUCKLING, Song: I Prizhee Send Me Back My Heart.

II—Love: Apothegms

III—Love: Its Blindness

If things were seen as they truly are, the beauty of bodies would be much abridged.

SIN THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. ii, sec. 9.

For love is blind all day and may not see.

CHAUCER, The Merchant's Tale, l. 354.

I have heard of reasons manifold

Why Love must needs be blind,

But this the best of all I hold—

His eyes are in his mind.

What outward form and feature are

He guesseth but in part;

But that within is good and fair

He seeth with the heart.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Reason for Love's Blindness.

Never was owl more blind than a lover.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Magnus and Morna.

Love is not a hood, but an eye-water.

Every one is blind when maddened by love. (Scilicet insano nemo in amore videt.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 14, l. 12.

But love is blind, and lovers cannot see

The pretty follies that themselves commit.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 36.

Things base and vile, holding no quality,

Love can transmute to form and dignity:

Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind;

And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind;

Nor hath Love's mind of any judgement taste;

Wings and no eyes figure unheedy haste;

And therefore is Love said to be a child,

Because in choice he is so oft beguil'd.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 232.

The lover . . .
Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt.

Soft pity never leaves the gentle breast
Where love has been received a welcome guest.
SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act ii, sc. 4.

Pity's akin to love; and every thought
Of that soft kind is welcome to my soul.
THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Oroonoko. Act ii, sc. 2.

Pity swells the tide of love.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 106.

V—Love and Wisdom

'Tis impossible to love and to be wise.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love. Quoted.

Away with doubts, all scruples hence remove;
No man at one time can be wise, and love.
ROBERT HERRICK, To Silvia to Wed.

'Tis hard to be in love and to be wise.
NATHANIEL LEE, Princess of Cleve. Act i, sc. 3.

Men loved wholly beyond wisdom
Have the staff without the banner.
LOUISE BOCAN, Men Loved Wholly.

The first sigh of love is the last of wisdom.
(Le premier soupir de l'amour Est le dernier de la sagesse.)

ANTOINETTE BRET, École Amoureuse. Sc. 7.

The wisest man the warl' e'er saw,
He dearly lov'd the lasses, O.
BURNS, Green Grow the Rashes, O.

How wise are they that are but fools in love!
Jo. COOKE, How a Man May Choose a Good Wife. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1610) First name uncertain.

O tyrant love, when held by you,
We may to prudence bid adieu.
(Amour! Amour! quand tu nous tiens
On peut bien dire, Adieu, prudence.)
LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 1.

Prudence and love are not made for each other:
as love increases, prudence diminishes. (La prudence et l'amour ne sont pas faits l'un pour l'autre: a mesure que l'amour croit, la prudence diminue.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 546.

1 It is not reason that governs love. (La raison n'est pas ce qui regie l'amour.)

MOLIERE, Le Misanthrope. Act i, sc. 1, l. 248.

I have heard you say,
Love's reason's without reason.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 21.

To say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 146.

Love draws me one way, reason another. (Aliud-que cupido, mens aliud suadet.)

Ovm, Metamorphoses. Bk. vii, l. 18.

2 A little sane love is all right, but not the insane sort. (Bonum est pauxillum amare sane, insane non bonum est.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 176

Find me a reasonable lover, and I'll give you his weight in gold. (Auro contra cedo modestum amatorem, a me aurem accipe.)

3 Lover, lunatic. (Amans amens.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 82.

Of lunatics rather than of lovers. (Amentium, haud amantium.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 218.

4 To love and to be wise is scarcely given to a god. (Amare et sapere vix deo conceditur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 22.

The proverb holds, that to be wise and love, is hardly granted to the gods above.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 364.

To be wise and love,
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 163.

To be wise and eke to love
Is granted scarce to god above.

SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: March: Willye's Emblem.

5 Only a wise man knows how to love. (Solut sapiens scit amare.)

SENECA, *Epistula ad Luciliu*m. Epis. lxxxii, 12.

6 If thou remember'st not the slightest folly
That ever love did make thee run into,
Thou hast not lov'd.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 34.

We that are true lovers, run into strange capers.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 55.

7 Love is your master, for he masters you:

And he that is so yoked by a fool,
Methinks, should not be chronicled for wise.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act i, sc. 1, l. 39.

8 In all I wish, how happy should I be,
Thou grand Deluder, were it not for thee?
So weak thou art that fools thy power despise;
And yet so strong, thou triumph'st o'er the wise.

SWIFT, TO Love.

Love is master of the wisest. It is only fools who defy him.

THACKERAY, Men's Wives: Dennis Haggarty's Wife.

9 Knowledge and love, altogether cotton not.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, 7. (1666)

VI—Love: Two Souls With But a Single Thought

10 My heart, I fain would ask thee
What then is Love? say on.

"Two souls with one thought only,
Two hearts that beat as one."

(Mein Herz ich will dich fragen,

Was ist denn Liebe, sag?

"Zwei Seelen und ein Gedanke, Zwei Herzen und ein Schlag.")

VON MUNCH BELLINGHAUSEN (FRIEDRICH HALM), Der Sohn der Wildniss. Act ii. (W. H. Charlton, tr.) Charlton's translation was the one preferred by the author.

Two souls with but a single thought,
Two hearts that beat as one.

VON MUNCH BELLINGHAUSEN, Ingomar the Barbarian. Last lines. (Maria Anne Lovell, tr.) This is the popular translation of the play, which was a favorite in the American theater for many years.

Trooly it is with us as it was with Mr. & Mrs. Ingomar in the Play, to wit—

2 soles with but a single thawt

2 harts which beet as 1.

ARTEMUS WARD, Among the Spirits.

11 As for the lover, his soul dwells in the body of another. (Τὸ ὁ δ' ἰπύπυρος ῥρίν > πύπρυ & δXXόρυπ φύζαν φύ.)

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. ix, sec. 5.)

Love is a spiritual coupling of two souls,
So much more excellent, as it least relates Thinto the body.

BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act iii, sc. 2.

12 Two souls in one, two hearts into one heart.
Du BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 6, l. 1057. (Sylvester, tr.)

What is love? Two souls and one flesh. Friendship? Two bodies and one soul.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Love, Friendship, Friends. (Haggood, tr.)

Blanca: Canst tell me what love is?

Guldo: It is consent. The union of two minds, two souls, two hearts

In all they think, and hope, and feel.

OSCAR WILDE, A Florentine Tragedy.

1 Naught can restrain consent of twain. (Non caret effectu, quod voluere duo.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 3, l. 16.

Love keeps his revels where there are but twain.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 123.

2 One turf shall serve as pillow for us both;
One heart, one bed, two bosoms and one troth.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 41.

3 Love, that two hearts makes one, makes eke one will.

SPENSER, Foerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto 4, st. 19.

We were two and had but one heart. (Deux cœurs et n'avions qu'un cœur.)

FRANÇOIS VILLON, Rondeau.

The world has little to bestow
Where two fond hearts in equal love are joined.

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Della.

Two human loves make one divine.

E. B. BROWNING, Isobel's Child. St. 16.

VII—Love: With All Your Faults

4 Affection should not be too sharp-eyed, and love is not to be made by magnifying glasses.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals, p. 70.

Analysis kills love, as well as other things.

JOHN BROWN, Hours Subseciva.

5 Never love unless you can
Bear with all the faults of man!

THOMAS CAMPION, Advice to a Girl.

6 With all thy faults, I love thee still.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 206.

7 But love can every fault forgive,
Or with a tender look reprove;
And now let naught in memory live
But that we meet, and that we love.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales of the Hall: The Elder Brother: Song.

8 Love sees no faults.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3297.

9 For Love can beauties spy
In what seem faults to every common eye.
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 121.

10 When we love, it is the heart that judges.
(Quand on aime, c'est le cœur qui juge.)
JOURNET, Pensées. No. 66.

11 If lovers should mark everything a fault,
Affection would be like an ill-set book,

Whose faults might prove as big as half the volume.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Changeling, ii, l.

12 The woman we love will always be in the right.
(La femme qu'on aime aura toujours raison.)

ALFRED DE MUSSET, Idylle.

13 Could I her faults remember,
Forgetting every charm,

Soon would impartial reason

The tyrant love disarm.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

14 We love the things we love in spite
Of what they are.

LOUIS UNTERMEYER, Love.

VIII—Love and Life

15 One hour of right-down love

Is worth an age of dully living on.

APRHA BEHN, II The Rover. Act v, sc. 1.

Each moment of a happy lover's hour

Is worth an age of dull and common life.

APRHA BEHN, Younger Brother. Act iii, sc. 3.

16 For life, with all it yields of joy and woe, . . .
Is just a chance of the prize of learning love.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Death in the Desert, l.
245.

17 What is life when wanting love?

Night without a morning!

Love's the cloudless summer sun,

Nature gay adorning.

BURNS, Thine Am I.

18 Love's the weightier business of mankind.

COLLEY CIBBER, *She Wou'd and She Wou'd
Not*. Act i, last line.

We are all born for love; it is the principle of existence and its only end.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sibyl. Bk. v, ch. 4.

Th' important business of your life is love.

GEORGE LYTTLETON, Advice to a Lady.

19 Life, without love, is load; and time stands
still;

What we refuse to him, to death we give;

And then, then only, when we love, we live.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act
ii. Concluding lines.

Love, then, hath every bliss in store;
'Tis friendship, and 'tis something more.
Each other every wish they give;

Not to know love is not to live.

JOHN GAY, Plutus, Cupid and Time, l. 135.

She who has never loved has never lived.

JOHN GAY, The Captives. Act ii, sc. 1.

See also LIFE AND LIVING.

20 Canst thou not wait for Love one flying hour
O heart of little faith?

EDMUND GOSSE, Sonnet: Dejection and Delay.

Ye gods! annihilate but space and time,
And make two lovers happy.

For, The Art of Sinking in Poetry. Ch. 9.
Quoted as "Anon."

1 Among the holy bookes wise,
I finde writ in such wise,
Who loveth nought is here as dead.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, Bk. iv.

And he that liveth to himself is dead,
And he that lives for love lives evermore;
Only in love can life's true path be trod;
Love is self-giving; therefore love is God.

MORROW LUCE, Thythis. Sonnet xxxvi.

2 To live without loving is not really to live.
(Vivre sans aimer n'est pas proprement vivre.)

MOLIERE, La Princesse d'Élide. Act II, sc. 1,
l. 40.

Take love away from life and you take away its pleasures. (Ôtez l'amour de la vie, Vous en ôtez les plaisirs.)

MOLIERE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Dialogue between Act I and II.

Life! what art thou without love?

EDWARD MOORE, Fables. Fable xiv.

3 Were it not for love,
Poor life would be a ship not worth the launching.

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON, Tristram.

4 Life's richest cup is Love's to fill—
Who drinks, if deep the draught shall be,
Knows all the rapture of the hill
Blent with the heart-break of the sea.

ROBERT CAMERON ROGERS, Love's Cup.

5 To love it is and love alone
That life or luxury is known.

J. B. TARR, The Test.

6 Love took up the harp of Life, and smote on all the chords with might;
Smote the chord of Self, that, trembling, pass'd in music out of sight.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 33.

IX—Love in Man and Woman

See also Woman and Love

7 Love is so different with us men.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Year.

8 Alas; the love of women! it is known
To be a lovely and a fearful thing.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto II, st. 199.

9 Man's love is of man's life a thing apart,
This woman's whole existence: man may range
The court, camp, church, the vessel, and the mart,

Sword, gown, gain, glory, offer in exchange

Pride, fame, ambition, to fill up his heart,
And few there are whom these cannot estrange;

Men have all these resources, we but one,
To love again, and be again undone.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto I, st. 194.

A woman's whole life is a history of the affections.
WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: The Broken Heart.

To a man the disappointment of love may occasion some bitter pangs: it wounds some feelings of tenderness—it blasts some prospects of felicity;
but he is an active being—he may dissipate his thoughts in the whirl of varied occupation. . . .
But woman's is comparatively a fixed, a secluded, and meditative life. . . . Her lot is to be wooed and won; and if unhappy in her love, her heart is like some fortress that has been captured, and sacked, and abandoned, and left desolate.

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: The Broken Heart.

Love, that of every woman's heart
Will have the whole, and not a part,
That is to her, in Nature's plan,
More than ambition is to man,
Her light, her life, her very breath,
With no alternative but death.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv, sec. 7.

How'er man rules in science and in art,
The sphere of woman's glories is the heart.

THOMAS MOORE, Epilogue to the Tragedy of Iris, l. 53.

Man dreams of fame, while woman wakes to love.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 458.

10 The love of man? Exotic flower,
Broken, crushed, within an hour.
The love of woman? Storm-swept sea
Surging into eternity.

ELLEN M. CARROLL, Man and Woman.

11 Poor love is lost in men's capacious minds,
In ours, it fills up all the room it finds.

JOHN CROWNE, Thyestes.

12 Oh! a man's love is strong
When fain he comes a-mating.

But a woman's love is long
And grows when it is waiting.

LAURENCE HOUSMAN, The Two Loves.

13 I know a woman's portion when she loves,
It's hers to give, my darling, not to take;
It isn't locketts, dear, nor pairs of gloves,
It isn't marriage bells nor wedding cake;
It's up and cook, although the belly aches;
And bear the child, and up and work again,
And count a sick man's grumble worth the pain.

JOHN MARSHFIELD, The Widows in the Bye Street.

14 Women know no perfect love;
Loving the strong, they can forsake the
strong;

Man clings because the being whom he loves
Is weak and needs him.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii.

Love lessens woman's delicacy and increases man's. (Die Liebe vermindert die weibliche Feinheit und verstärkt die männliche.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Tison. Zykel 34.

A loving maiden grows unconsciously more bold.
(Ein liebendes Mädchen wird unbewusst kühner.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Tison. Zykel 71.

Love is the history of a woman's life; it is an episode in man's. (L'amour est l'histoire de la vie des femmes; c'est un épisode dans celle des hommes.)

MADAME DE STAEL, De L'influence des Passions.

Thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women.

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 26.

A man can be happy with any woman as long as he does not love her.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15.

If you would be loved, love and be lovable.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1755.

Show thou love to win love.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Mirror of Good Manners, p. 74. (c. 1510)

But I love you, sir:

And when a woman says she loves a man,
The man must hear her, though he love her not.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ix, l. 613.

Behold me! I am worthy
Of thy loving, for I love thee!

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship.
St. 79.

If thou must love me, let it be for nought
Except for love's sake only.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese.
No. xiv.

And because my heart I proffered,
With true love trembling at the brim,
He suffers me to follow him.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Canto ix.

Love like mine must have return.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act I.

I cannot love where I'm beloved.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 304.

I cannot love thee as I ought,
For love reflects the thing beloved.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lii, st. 1.

Love looks for love again.

And sure love craveth love, like asketh like.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk.
xxviii, st. 80. (1591)

Love prays devoutly when it prays for love.

THOMAS HOOD, Hero and Leander, l. 120.

If there's delight in love, 'tis when I see That heart which others bleed for, bleed for me.

CONGREVE, Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 12.

Johnson: "True. When he whom everybody else batters, flatters me, I then am truly happy."
Mrs. Thrall: "The sentiment is in Congreve, I think." Johnson: "Yes, madam, in The Way of the World."

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

Love, which insists that love shall mutual be.
(Amor che a nullo amato amar perdona.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 103.

The sense of the world is short,—
Long and various the report,—

To love and be beloved;

Men and gods have not outlearned it;

And, how oft soe'er they've turned it,

'Tis not to be improved.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Eros.

Let no man think he is loved by any when he loves none.

EPICETUS, Fragmentis. No. 156.

Let him love no one, and be beloved by none.
(Nec amet quemquam, nec ametur ab ullo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 130.

The devil take me, if I think anything but love to be the object of love.

FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. v, ch. 9. (1751)

Only in love they happy prove
Who love what most deserves their love.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Sicelides. Act iii, sc. 6.

If I love you, what business is that of yours?
(Wenn ich dich lieb habe, was geht's dich an?)

GOTHE, Wilhelm Meister. Bk. iv, ch. 9.

There is no heaven like mutual love.
GEORGE GRANVILLE, Pelias and Thetis.

Love is kindest, and hath most length,

The kisses are most sweet,
When it's enjoyed in heat of strength,
Where like affections meet.
PATRICK HANNAY, Songs and Sonnets. Sonnet iv.

That bliss no wealth can bribe, no pow'r bestow,

That bliss of angels, love by love repaid.
DAVID MALLETT, Amyntas and Theodora
Canto 4, l. 367.

Divine is Love and scorneth worldly pelf,
And can be bought with nothing but with self.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Love the Only Price of Love

Like Dian's kiss, unasked, unsought,
Love gives itself, but is not bought.

Lovers live by love as larks live by leeks.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10.

Love begins with love
LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 4.

The pleasure of love is in loving; and we are much happier in the passion we feel than in that which we inspire. (Le plaisir de l'amour est d'aimer, et l'on est plus heureux par la passion que l'on a que par celle que l'on
donne.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes No. 259.

To love for the sake of being loved is human,
but to love for the sake of loving is angelic.

LAMARTINE, Graziella Pt. iv, ch. 5.

Or rather let me love than be in love.
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Wife.

All love is sweet Given or returned. . . .
They who inspire it most are fortunate,
As I am now; but those who feel it most
Are happier still.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound Act ii, sc. 5,
l. 39.

We love being in love, that's the truth on't.
THACKERAY, Henry Esmond Bk. ii, ch. 15.

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books,
But love from love, toward school with heavy looks

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 156.

Yet leave me not; yet, if thou wilt, be free,
Love me no more, but love my love of thee.
SWINBURNE, Erotion

I that have love and no more
Give you but love of you, sweet;
He that hath more, let him give;
He that hath wings, let him soar;
Mine is the heart at your feet
Here, that must love you to live
SWINBURNE, The Oblation

And he that shuts Love out, in turn shall be Shut out from Love, and on her threshold be Howling in outer darkness.

TENNYSON, The Palace of Art: Introduction.

And you must love him, ere to you
He will seem worthy of your love.

4 I loved her then, but now, another love overhangs my heart. (Ilum amabam olim, nunc jam alia cura impendit pectora.)
PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 135 (Act i, sc. 1.)

Even as one heat another heat expels,
Or as one nail by strength drives out another,
So the remembrance of my former love
Is by a newer object quite forgotten.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 4, l. 192.

For one heat, all know, doth drive out another,
One passion doth expel another still.

CHAPMAN, Monsieur d'Olive. Act v, sc. 1.

5 But he who stems a stream with sand,
And fetters flame with flaxen band,
Has yet a harder task to prove—
By firm resolve to conquer love!

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iii, st. 28.

XIII—Love: Its Power

6 Love is not to be reason'd down, or lost
In high ambition or a thirst of greatness;

'Tis second life, it grows into the soul,
Warms every vein, and beats in every pulse.
ANDERSON, Cato. Act i, sc. 1.

When love's well-tim'd, 'tis not a fault to love,
The strong, the brave, the virtuous, and the wise,
Sink in the soft captivity together.
ANDERSON, Cato. Act iii, sc. 1.

When love once pleads admission to our hearts,
In spite of all the virtue we can boast,
The woman that deliberates is lost.
ANDERSON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 1. Often misquoted,
"She who hesitates is lost."

7 If two stand shoulder to shoulder against the gods,
Happy together, the gods themselves are helpless.

Against them, while they stand so
MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen, ii.

8 Somewhere there waiteth in this world of ours
For one lone soul another lonely soul,
Each choosing each through all the weary
hours.

And meeting strangely at one sudden goal,
Then blend they, like green leaves with golden
flowers.

Into one beautiful perfect whole;
And life's long night is ended, and the way
Lies open onward to eternal day.
EDWIN ARNSOLD, Somewhere There Waiteth.

I know not when the day shall be,
I know not when our eyes may meet;
What welcome you may give to me,
Or will your words be sad or sweet,
It may not be 'till years have passed,
'Till eyes are dim and tresses gray,
The world is wide, but, love, at last,
Our hands, our hearts, must meet some day.
HUGH CONWAY, Some Day.

Two shall be born, the whole wide world apart, . . .

And bend each wandering step to this one end—
That, one day, out of darkness, they shall meet
And read life's meaning in each other's eyes
And two shall walk some narrow way of life, . . .
And yet, with wistful eyes that never meet . . .
They seek each other all their weary days
And die unsatisfied—and this is Fate!
SUSAN MARR SPALDING, Fate.

9 Love can find entrance, not only into an open heart, but also into a heart well fortified, if watch be not well kept.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love.

10 For love is of sac mickle might,
That it all paines makis light.
JOHN BARRHOUR, The Bruce. Bk. ii, l. 520.

11 The night has a thousand eyes,
And the day but one;
Yet the light of the bright world dies
With the dying sun.

The mind has a thousand eyes,
And the heart but one;
Yet the light of a whole life dies
When love is done.

3 God be thanked, the meanest of his creatures
Boasts two soul-sides, one to face the world with.

One to show a woman when he loves her.
ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. St. 17.

Oh, their Rafael of the dear Madonnas,
Oh, their Dante of the dread Inferno,
Wrote one song—and in my brain I sing it,
Drew one angel—borne, see, on my bosom!

IV—Love: Love's Young Dream

⁶ I've paced much this weary, mortal round,
And sage experience bids me this declare:—
"If Heaven a draught of heavenly pleasure spare,

One cordial in this melancholy vale
'Tis when a youthful, loving, modest pair,
In other's arms breathe out the tender tale,
Beneath the milk-white thorn that scents the evening gale."

BUNKE, The Cottler's Saturday Night, St. 9.
Oh Love! young Love! bound in thy rosy band,
Let sage or cynic prattle as he will,
These hours, and only these, redeem Life's years of ill.

to bring her close to his heart.

HAWTHORNE, The Marble Faun, Vol. ii, ch. 15.

⁸ Pillow'd upon my fair love's ripening breast,
To feel for ever its soft fall and swell;
Awake for ever in a sweet unrest;
Still, still to hear her tender-taken breath;
And so live ever—or else swoon to death.

KRATS, Last Sonnet.
Wishing forever in that state to lie,—
Forever to be dying so, yet never die.

CONARRE, On Arabella Hunt, Singing.

⁹ And, happy melodist, unwearied,
For ever piping songs for ever new;

More happy love! more happy, happy love!
For ever warm and still to be enjoy'd,
For ever panting and for ever young.
KRATS, Ode on a Grecian Urn, St. 3.

¹⁰ There's nothing half so sweet in life
As love's young dream.
THOMAS MOORE, Love's Young Dream.

Is there on earth a space so dear
As that within the blessed sphere
Two loving arms entwine?
THOMAS MOORE, To Fanny.

¹¹ One pulse of passion—youth's first fiery glow,—

Is worth the hoarded proverbs of the sage:
Vex not thy soul with dead philosophy;
Have we not lips to kiss with, hearts to love,
and eyes to see?

OSCAR WILDE, Panthea, St. 2.

¹² Love in thy youth, fair maid; be wise,
Old Time will make thee colder,
And though each morning new arise
Yet we each day grow older.

UNKNOWN, Madrigal. (PORTER, Madrigals and Airs, 1632.)

Take it, girl! And fear no after,
Take your fill of all this laughter,
Laugh or not the tears will fall,
Take the laughter first of all.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Song.

XVI—Love: Its Sweetness

¹³ To love and be beloved, this is the good,
Which for most sovereign all the world will prove.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Aurora, Sonnet xlv.

¹⁴ The crowning glory of loving and being loved is that the pair make no real progress; however far they have advanced into the enchanted land during the day they must start again from the frontier next morning.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grizel, p. 189.

¹⁵ O happy race of men, if love, which rules heaven, rule your minds! (O felix hominum genus, Si vestros animos amor Quo cælum regitur regat.)

BOETIUS, Philosophie Consolationis, Bk. ii, meter 8, l. 28.

¹⁶ "Oh! Love," they said, "is King of Kings,
And Triumph is his crown.

Earth fades in flame before his wings,
And Sun and Moon bow down."

RUPERT BROOK, Song.

¹⁷ There is music even in the beauty, and the silent note which Cupid strikes, far sweeter than the sound of an instrument.

SM THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici, Pt. ii,
sec. 10.

1 Shut them in,
With their triumphs and their glories and the rest!

Love is best!

ROBERT BROWNING, Love Among the Ruins.

O lyric Love, half angel and half bird,
And all a wonder and a wild desire!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Pt. i, l. 1391.

What's the earth
With all its art, verse, music, worth—
Compared with love, found, gained, and kept?
ROBERT BROWNING, Dis Alliter Visum.

2 Devotion wafts the mind above,
But Heaven itself descends in love;
A feeling from the Godhead caught,
To wean from self each sordid thought;
A Ray of him who form'd the whole;
A Glory circling round the soul!

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1135.

3 For soft the hours repeat one story,
Sings the sea one strain divine,
My clouds arise all flushed with glory;
I love, and the world is mine!

FLORENCE EARLY COATES, The World Is Mine.

4 Power and gold and fame denied,
Love laughs glad in the paths aside.
LOUISE DRISCOLL, The Highway.

Love has in store for me one happy minute.
DRYDEN, No, No, Poor Suffering Heart.

5 The person love does to us fit,
Like manna, has the taste of all of it.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Love. Quoted.

6 Earth's the right place for love:
I don't know where it's likely to go better.
ROBERT FROST, Birches.

7 If, as Mimnermus holds, without love and jests there is no joy, live amid love and jests.
(Si, Mimnermus uti censeat, sine amore jocis-que Nil est jucundum, vivas in amore jocis-que.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 65.

8 I sing of little loves that glow
Like tapers shining in the rain,
Of little loves that break themselves
Like moths against the window-pane.
ALINE KILMER, Prelude.

9 Love is more than great riches.
JOHN LYDGATE, The Story of Thebes. Pt. III.
Though poor in gear, we're rich in love.

BURNS, The Sodger's Return.

10 Love's own hand the nectar pours,
Which never fails nor ever soures.

DAVID MALLETT, Cupid and Hymen.

12 The world is filled with folly and sin,
And Love must cling, where it can, I say:
For Beauty is easy enough to win;
But one isn't loved every day.
OWEN MEREDITH, Changes.

13 For what is knowledge duly weighed?
Knowledge is strong, but love is sweet;
Yea all the progress he had made
Was but to learn that all is small
Save love, for love is all in all.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, The Convent Threshold.

Love is like a rose, the joy of all the earth, . . .
Love is like a lovely rose, the world's delight.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Hope.

14 Mortals, while through the world you go,
Hope may succor and faith befriend,
Yet happy your hearts if you can but know,
Love awaits at the journey's end!
CLINTON SCOLLARD, The Journey's End: Envoy.

15 But, mistress, know yourself: down on your knees,
And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's
love.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act III, sc. 5,
l. 57.

16 This is the very ecstasy of love.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act II, sc. 1, l. 102.

Nature is fine in love, and where 't is fine,
It sends some precious instance of itself
After the thing it loves.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act IV, sc. 5, l. 161.

Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense,
'gainst shame,
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aches of all forces, shocks, and fears.
SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 271.

17 O spirit of love! how quick and fresh art thou,
That, notwithstanding thy capacity
Receiveth as the sea, nought enters there,
Of what validity and pitch soe'er,
But falls into abatement and low price,
Even in a minute!

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act I, sc. 1, l. 9.

18 Love, as is told by the seers of old,
Comes as a butterfly tipped with gold,
Flutters and flies in sunlit skies,
Weaving round hearts that were one time
cold.

SWINBURNE, Song.

A lover looked. She dropped her eyes
That glowed like pansies wet with dew;
And lo, there came from out the skies
Butterflies all blue.

JOHN DAVIDSON, Butterflies.

¹
O Love, what hours were thine and mine,
In lands of palm and southern pine;
In lands of palm, of orange-blossom,
Of olive, aloe, and maize and vine.

TENNYSON, The Daisy. St. 1.

Sweet is true love tho' given in vain, in vain.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1000.

²
The wine of Love is music,
And the feast of Love is song:
And when Love sits down to the banquet,
Love sits long: . . .
Sits long and rises drunken,
But not with the feast and the wine;
He reeleth with his own heart,
That great, rich Vine.
JAMES THOMSON, The Vine.

³
The worlds in which we live are two—
The world "I am," and the world "I do."
LYMAN W. DENTON, Two Worlds. (Harper's Magazine, May, 1900, p. 946.)

The worlds in which we live at heart are one,
The world "I am," the fruit of "I have done";
And underneath these worlds of flower and fruit,
The world "I love," the only living root.
HENRY VAN DYKE, One World. Dr Van Dyke's lines were a reply to Mr. Denton's, which he quoted.

Self is the only prison that can ever bind the soul;
Love is the only angel who can bid the gates un-roll;

And when he comes to call thee, arise and follow
fast;

His way may lie through darkness, but it leads to light at last.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Prison and the Angel.

Who seeks for heaven alone to save his soul,
May keep the path, but will not reach the goal;
While he who walks in love may wander far,
But God will bring him where the Blessed are.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Way.

⁴
Vain is the glory of the sky,
The beauty vain of field and grove,
Unless, while with admiring eye
We gaze, we also learn to love.

WORDSWORTH, Poems of the Fancy. No. 20.

⁵
He speaks of love, such love as Spirits feel
In worlds whose course is equable and pure;
No fears to beat away—no strife to heal—
The past unsighed for, and the future sure.

WORDSWORTH, Lodovico. St. 16.

⁶
'Tis sense, unbridled will, and not true love,
That kills the soul: love better what is best,
Even here below, but more in heaven above.
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. i,

¹⁰
Was it something said,
Something done,
Vexed him? Was it touch of hand,
Turn of head?
Strange! that very way
Love begun:

I as little understand
Love's decay.
ROBERT BROWNING, In a Year.

¹¹
Ah woe is me, through all my days
Wisdom and wealth I both have got,
And fame and name and great men's praise;
But Love, ah! Love I have it not.
H. C. BUNNEN, The Way to Arcady.

¹²

O Love! thou art the very god of evil,
For, after all, we cannot call thee devil.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 205.

O love! what is it in this world of ours
Which makes it fatal to be loved? Ah, why With cypress branches hast thou wreathed thy bowers,
And made thy best interpreter a sigh!
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 2.

Soon or late Love is his own avenger.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 73.

¹⁴
Just like Love is yonder rose,
Heavenly fragrance round it throws,
Yet tears its dewy leaves disclose,
And in the midst of briars it blows
Just like Love.

IXIII—Love: Pain or Pleasure

17 Mysterious love, uncertain treasure,
Hast thou more of pain or pleasure. . . .
Endless torments dwell about thee:
Yet who would live, and live without thee!

ADDISON, Rosamond. Act iii, sc. 2.

18 Yes, loving is a painful thrill,
And not to love more painful still;
But oh, it is the worst of pain,

To love and not be lov'd again.

ANACREON, Odes, No. 29. (Moore, tr.)

A mighty pain to love it is,
And 'tis a pain that pain to miss;
But of all pains, the greatest pain
It is to love, but love in vain.

That he hath turn'd a heaven unto a hell!

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act I, sc. 1, l. 206.

11
Forgetfulness of grief I yet may gain;
In some wise may come ending to my pain;
It may be yet the Gods will have me glad!
Yet, love, I would that thee and pain I had!
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: The Death of Paris.

12
Love overflows with both honey and gall. It gives you a taste of sweetness, and then heaps bitterness before you to satiety. (Amor et melle et felle est fecundissimus; Gustui dat dulce, amarum ad satietatem usque og-gerit.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 69.

She has more of aloes (bitterness) than of honey.
(Plus aloes quam mellis habet.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 181.

True he it said, whatever man it said,
That love with gall and honey doth abound,
But if the one be with the other weighed,
For every dram of honey therein found,
A pound of gall doth over it redound.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto x, l. 1.

Of honey and of gall in love there is store:

The honey is much, but the gall is more.

⁶ What makes love's dawning glow
Changeless through joy and woe?
Only the constant know!—
Eileen aroon!

GERALD GRIFFIN, Eileen Aroon.

⁷ So let our love As endless prove,
And pure as gold for ever.
ROBERT HERRICK, A Ring Presented to Julia.

⁸ Love me little, love me long.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

You say to me-wards your affection 's strong;
Pray love me little, so you love me long.

ROBERT HERRICK, Love Me Little, Love Me Long.

Love moderately; long love doth so.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 6.
l. 14.

Love me little, love me long,
Is the burden of my song.
UNKNOWN, Old Ballad.

⁹ Of all my loves the last, for hereafter I shall glow with passion for no other woman.
(Meorum Finis amorum, Non enim posthac alio calebo Femina.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode. 11, l. 31.

¹⁰ Bold Lover, never, never canst thou kiss,
Though winning near the goal—yet, do not grieve;
She cannot fade, though thou hast not thy bliss,
For ever wilt thou love, and she be fair!
KEATS, Ode on a Grecian Urn, l. 17.

¹⁶ Age enricheth true love, Like noble wine.
GERALD MASSEY, O, Lay Thy Hand in Mine.

¹⁷ Great loves live on,
You need not die and dare the skies
In forms that poor creeds hinge upon
To pass the gates of Paradise.
JOAQUIN MILLER, With Love to You and Yours. Pt. iv, sec. 12.

¹⁸ The naturalists tell us that the flower called heliotrope turns without ceasing toward that star of day, and just so will my heart hereafter turn toward the resplendent stars of your adorable eyes. (Et comme les naturalistes remarquent que la fleur nommée hélitrope tourne sans cesse vers cet astre du jour, aussi mon cœur d'ores en avant tournera-t-il toujours vers les astres resplendissants de vos yeux adorables.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Malade Imaginaire. Act ii, sc. 5.

No, the heart that has truly lov'd never forgets,
But as truly loves on to the close,
As the sunflower turns on her god, when he sets,
The same look which she turn'd when he rose.
THOMAS MOORE, Believe Me, if All Those En- dearing Young Charms. St. 2.

Of all affliction taught a lover yet,
'Tis sure the hardest science to forget!

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 189.

Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also,
if aught but death part thee and me.

OLD TESTAMENT: Ruth, i, 16, 17.

And on her lover's arm she leant,
And round her waist she felt it fold,
And far across the hills they went
In that new world which is the old. . . .

And o'er the hills and far away
Beyond their utmost purple rim,
Beyond the night, across the day,
Thro' all the world she follow'd him.
TENNYSON, The Day-dream: The Departure.

Through thick and thin she followed him.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 370.

THOMAS PARNELL, Health: An Eclogue.

True love in this differs from gold and clay,
That to divide is not to take away.
SHELLEY, Epipsychidion, l. 160.

They sin who tell us Love can die.
With life all other passions fly,
All others are but vanity. . . .
But Love is indestructible.
Its holy flame for ever burneth,
From Heaven it came, to Heaven returneth; . . .
It soweth here with toil and care,
But the harvest time of Love is there.

SOUTHEY, The Curse of Kehama. Pt. x, st. 10.

To love one maiden only, cleave to her,
And worship her by years of noble deeds,
Until they won her.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 472.

No lapse of moons can canker Love,
Whatever fickle tongues may say.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxvii.

³ I loved thee once, I'll love no more:
Thine be the grief as is the blame:
Thou art not what thou wast before—
What reason I should be the same?

ROBERT AVTON, I Do Confess.

I loved thee beautiful and kind,
And plighted an eternal vow:
So altered are thy face and mind,
'Twere perjury to love thee now!

ROBERT NUGENT, Epigram.

⁴ I cannot love as I have loved,
And yet I know not why;
It is the one great woe of life
To feel all feeling die.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Party.

But they know love grows colder,
Grows false and dull, that was sweet lies at most.
Astonishment is no more in hand or shoulder,
But darkens, and dies out from kiss to kiss.
All this is love; and all love is but this.

RUPERT BROOKE, Love.

Dear, we know only that we sigh, kiss, smile;
Each kiss lasts but the kissing; and grief goes over;

Love has no habitation but the heart.

RUPERT BROOKE, Mutability.

Now, God be thanked Who has matched us with His hour,
And caught our youth, and wakened us from sleeping; . . .

And all the little emptiness of love!

RUPERT BROOKE, 1914, Peace.

⁵ The glory dropped from their youth and
love,
And both perceived they had dreamed a dream.

ROBERT BROWNING, Statue and the Bust, l. 152.

⁶ Love in your heart as idly burns
As fire in antique Roman urns.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 309.

⁷ He that loves a rosy cheek,
Or a coral lip admires,
Or from star-like eyes doth seek
Fuel to maintain his fires,
As Old Time makes these decay,

So his flames must waste away.

THOMAS CAREW, Disdain Returned.

Time can but cloy love, And use destroy love.
BYRON, Stanzas.

⁸ What have I done? What horrid crime committed?

To me the worst of crimes—outliv'd my lik-
ing.

CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act iii, sc. 2.

'Tis an unhappy circumstance that . . . the man
so often should outlive the lover.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act ii, sc. 1.

⁹ The miracle to-day is that we find
A lover true: not that a woman's kind.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act v, sc. 2.

¹⁰ Him, who loves always one, why should they call

More constant, than the man loves always all.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Inconstant.

¹¹ Lukewarmness I account a sin,
As great in love as in religion.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Request.

¹² Men and women call one another inconstant, and accuse one another of having changed their minds, when, God knows, they have but changed the object of their eye, and seen a better white or red.

JOHN DONNE, Sermons, p. 483.

¹³ Love is like linen, often chang'd, the sweeter.
PHINEAS FLETCHER, Scolides. Act iii, sc. 5.

¹⁴ Pretty Polly say, When I was away,
Did your fancy never stray

To some newer lover?

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 2.

¹⁵ Wisely a woman prefers to a lover a man who neglects her.

This one may love her some day, some day
the lover will not.

JOHN HAY, Disticks.

¹⁶ I do love I know not what;
Sometimes this and sometimes that.
ROBERT HERRICK, No Luck in Love.

¹⁷ Love has a tide!

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Tides.

¹⁸ In their first passions women love the lover, and in the others, they love love. (Dans les premières passions, les femmes aiment l'am-ant, et dans les autres, elles aiment l'amour.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 471. (1665)

In her first passion woman loves her lover;
In all the others, all she loves is love.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 3. Undoubtedly a translation of La Rochefoucauld, to whom, however, Byron gave no credit.

The man's desire is for the woman; but the woman's desire is rarely other than for the desire of the man.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, p. 75.

¹ The beginning and the end of love are both marked by embarrassment when the two find themselves alone. (Le commencement et le déclin de l'amour se font sentir par l'embarras où l'on est de se trouver seul.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 4.

There are few people who would not be ashamed of being loved when they love no longer. (Il n'y a guère de gens qui ne soient honteux de s'être aimés, quand ils ne s'aiment plus.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes No. 71.

² Love never dies of starvation, but often of indigestion.

NINON DE L'ENCLOS (L'Esprit des Autres, 3.)

But joy incessant dulls the sense;
And love, unchanged, will cloy,
And she became a hate intense
Unto her love-sick boy!

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury.

³ For as by basil the scorpion is engendered, and by means of the same herb destroyed: so love which by time and fancy is bred in an idle head, is by time and fancy banished from the heart: or, as the salamander, which being a long space nourished in the fire, at the last quencheth it, so affection having taken hold of the fancy, and living, as it were, in the mind of the lover, in tract of time altereth and changeth the heat, and turneth it to chillness.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 298.

⁴ Thanks be to God, the world is wide,
And I am going far from home!
And I forgot in Camelot
The man I loved in Rome.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Fugitive.

And in my heart there stirs a quiet pain
For unremembered iads that not again
Will turn to me at midnight with a cry.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Sonnet.

⁵ I know I am but summer to your heart,
And not the full four seasons of the year;
And you must welcome from another part
Such noble moods as are not mine, my dear.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Sonnet.

⁶ Some love is light and fleets away.
Heigho! the wind and rain;
Some love is deep and scorns decay,
Ah, well-a-day! in vain.

WILLIAM MOTHERWELL, True Love's Derge.

The moods of love are like the wind,
And none knows whence or why they rise.
COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House:
Sarum Plain.

⁷ Fickle is he, and he has two wings, wherewith to fly away. (Et levis est, et habit geminas, quibus avolet, alas.)

OVIO, Ars Amatoria Bk. ii, l. 19.

And lately had he learn'd with truth to deem
Love has no gift so grateful as his wings.

BYRON, Childe Harold Canto i, st. 82.

Love, like a bird, hath perch'd upon a spray
For thee and me to hearken what he sings.
Contented, he forgets to fly away;
But hush! . . . remind not Eros of his wings.

WILLIAM WATSON, Four Epigrams.

⁸ What is the love of men that women seek it?
In its beginning pale with cruelty,
But having sipped of beauty, negligent,
And full of languor and distaste: for they Seeking that perfect face beyond the world
Approach in vision earthly semblances,
And touch, and at the shadows flee away.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Marpessa.

⁹ Our love was like most other loves—
A little glow, a little shiver,
A rosebud, and a pair of gloves,
And "Fly not yet!" upon the river.

W. M. PRALD, The Belle of the Ball.

¹⁰ Even the inconstant flame may burn brightly,
if the soul is naturally combustible.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Life of Reason, Vol. ii, p. 25.

¹¹ Love still has something of the sea,
From whence his Mother rose;
No time his slaves from doubt can free,
Nor give their thoughts repose.

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Song.

¹² Some jay of Italy,
Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him:

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 51.

¹³ This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange
That even our loves should with our fortunes change.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 210.

There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 115.

¹⁴ When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 20.

He was a lover of the good old school,
Who still become more constant as they cool.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 34.

¹⁵ Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,

Men were deceivers ever,
One foot in sea and one on shore,
To one thing constant never.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
II, sc. 3, l. 64.

Sigh no more, lady, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever:
One foot on sea and one on land,
To one thing constant never.
THOMAS PERCY, The Prior of Orders Gray.
(Reliques. Vol. i, bk. ii, No. 18.) Percy says that his poem is a collection of the "fragments of ancient ballads dispersed through Shakespeare's plays," which he connected together by some stanzas of his own, to
"form them into a little tale."

¹ Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty.
SHAKESPEARE [?], The Passionate Pilgrim.
St. 7.

² O, how this spring of love resembleth
Th' uncertain glory of an April day,
Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away!
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act I, sc. 3, l. 84.

³ Plough not the seas, sow not the sands,
Leave off your idle pain;
Seek other mistress for your minds;
Love's service is in vain.
ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Love's Service Lot.

⁴ The last link is broken
That bound me to thee,
And the words thou hast spoken
Have render'd me free.
FANNY STEERS, Song.

⁵ Out upon it! I have lov'd
Three whole days together;
And am like to love three more,
If it prove fair weather.
SIR JOHN SUCKLING, The Constant Lover.

And Love, grown faint and fretful
With life but half regretful
Sighs, and with eyes forgetful
Weeps that no loves endure.
SWINBURNE, The Garden of Proserpine.

⁶ I have lived long enough, having seen one thing, that love hath an end.
SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine, l. 1.

⁷ To say that you can love one person all your life is just like saying that one candle will continue burning as long as you live.
LEO TOLSTOY, The Kreutzer Sonata, Ch. 2.

⁸ Love, like fortune, turns upon a wheel, and is very much given to rising and falling.
SAM JOHN VANNUCH, The False Friend. Act I,
sc. 1.

⁹ For surely it is something to have been
The best beloved for a little while,
To have walked hand in hand with Love, and seen
His scarlet wings flit once across thy smile.
OSCAR WILDE, Apologie.

¹⁰ Those who are faithful know only the trivial side of love: it is the faithless who know love's tragedies.
OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1.

¹¹ Give me, I ask it, nay I know no pride—
The love that's left when you
Have spent the greater part.
I have a beggar heart.
ANNE ELIZABETH WILSON, The Beggar Heart.

¹² I loved a lass, a fair one,
As fair as e'er was seen;
She was indeed a rare one,
Another Sheba queen:
But, fool as then I was,
I thought she loved me too:
But now, alas! she's left me,
Falero, lero, loo!
GEORGE WITHER, I Loved a Lass.
Shall I, wasting in despair,
Die because a woman's fair?
GEORGE WITHER, The Lover's Resolution.

¹³ Oh, waly, waly, gin love be bonny,
A little while, when it is new;
But when it's auld it waxeth cauld,
And fades awa' like morning dew.
UNKNOWN, Gin Love be Bonny.

¹⁴ My love he loves another love:
Alas, sweetheart, why does he so?
UNKNOWN, The Mourning Maiden. (c. 1550)

XXII—Love: Its Caprice

¹⁵ Then crown my joys, or cure my pain:
Give me more love, or more disdain.
THOMAS CAREW, Mediocrity in Love Rejected

Give hopes of bliss or dig my grave:
More love or more disdain I crave.
CHARLES WESSE, Against Indifference.

Or love me less, or love me more;
And play not with my liberty:
Either take all, or all restore;
Bind me at least, or set me free!
SIDNEY GODOLPHIN, Song.

I'll be this abject thing no more;
Love, give me back my heart again.
GEORGE GRANVILLE, Adieu l'Amour.

¹⁶ Would I were free from this restraint,
Or else had hopes to win her:
Would she could make of me a saint,
Or I of her a sinner.
WILLIAM CONGREVE, Pious Selinda.

¹ Saith he, "Yet are you too unkind,
If in your heart you cannot find
To love us now and then."

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Eclogue.

² Thou art to me a delicious torment,
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

³ One common fate we both must prove;
You die with envy, I with love.
JOHN GAY, Fables: The Poet and Rose, l. 29.

⁴ Time was when Love and I were well acquainted.

W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer, Act i.

⁵ And love is still an emptier sound,
The modern fair one's jest;
On earth unseen, or only found
To warm the turtle's nest.
GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield
Ch. 8.)

⁶ As if to show that love had made him smart
All over—and not merely round his heart.
THOMAS HOOD, Bianca's Dream.

His love was great though his wit was small.
THOMAS HOOD, Equestrian Courtship.

⁷ Roses red and roses white
Plucked I for my love's delight.
She would none of all my posies,—
Bade me gather her blue roses.
RUDYARD KIPPLING, Blue Roses.

⁸ None without hope e'er loved the brightest fair,
But love can hope where reason would despair.

GEORGE LYTTTELTON, Epigram.

⁹ And how should I know your true love
From many another one?
Oh, by his cockle hat and staff,
And by his sandal shoon.
THOMAS PERCY, The Friar of Orders Gray.

¹⁰ Tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied her raven ringlets in;
But not alone in the silken snare
Did she catch her lovely floating hair,
For, tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied a young man's heart within.
NORA PERRY, The Love-Knot.

¹¹ Ah! what avails it me the flocks to keep,
Who lost my heart while I preserv'd my sheep!

POPE, Pastorals: Autumn, l. 79.

¹² For, as our different ages move,
'Tis so ordained (would Fate but mend
it!),

That I shall be past making love
When she begins to comprehend it.
MATTHEW PRIOR, To a Child of Quality.

¹³ And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, Act II, sc. 7, l.
147.

By heaven, I do love; and it hath taught me to rhyme, and to be melancholy.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, Act IV,
sc. 3, l. 14.

And frame love-ditties passing rare,
And sing them to a lady fair.
SCOTT, Marmion, Canto I, st. 7.

All that a man has to say or do that can possibly concern mankind, is in some shape or other to tell the story of his love,—to sing, and, if he is fortunate and keeps alive, he will be forever in love.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 6 May, 1854.

¹⁴ He is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love;
very near this.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act II, sc. 2, l. 190.

He was more than over shoes in love.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
Act I, sc. 1, l. 24.

Gone already!
Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a fork'd one!
SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, Act I, sc. 2,
l. 185.

¹⁵ I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
Act V, sc. 4, l. 133.

And though she saw all heaven in flower above,
She would not love.
SWINBURNE, A Leave-taking.

¹⁶ How wayward is this foolish love,
That, like a testy babe, will scratch the nurse
And presently, all humble, kiss the rod!
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
Act I, sc. 2, l. 57.

¹⁷ I think there is not half a kiss to choose
Who loves another best.
SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, Act IV, sc. 4,
l. 175.

¹⁸ Love still a boy and oft a wanton is,
School'd only by his mother's tender eye.
SM PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella, Sonnet lxxiii.

But a bevy of Eroas apple-cheek'd
In a shallop of crystal ivory-beak'd.
TENNISON, The Isles.

Love is a boy by poets styl'd;

Then spare the rod and spoil the child.

2 You lovers are such clumsy summer-flies,
Forever buzzing at your lady's face.

TENNYSON, The Foresters. Act iv, sc. 1.

3 Werther had a love for Charlotte
Such as words could never utter;
Would you know how first he met her?
She was cutting bread and butter.

THACKERAY, The Sorrows of Werther.

Charlotte, having seen his body
Borne before her on a shutter,
Like a well-conducted person,
Went on cutting bread and butter.

THACKERAY, The Sorrows of Werther.

4 The only difference between a caprice and a life-long passion is that the caprice lasts a little longer.

5 When Madelon comes out to serve us drinks,
We always know she's coming by her song.
And every man he tells his little tale,
And Madelon, she listens all day long.

Our Madelon is never too severe—
A kiss or two is nothing much to her—
She laughs us up to love and life and God—
Madelon, Madelon, Madelon.

UNKNOWN, Madelon. Popular song during the World War.

XXIII—Love: Its Perjuries

6 Vows! dost think the gods regard the vows of lovers? They are things made in necessity and ought not to be kept, nor punished when broken.

APHERA BEEN, The Dutch Lover. Act v, sc. 1.

7 Lovers' oaths enter not the ears of the gods.
("Ἐπεὶ θεοὶ οὐκ ἀκούουσιν ὅρκων ἀνθρώπων.")

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. 27.

8 Let no woman believe a man's oath, let none believe that a man's speeches can be trustworthy. They, while their mind desires something and longs eagerly to gain it, nothing fear to swear, nothing spare to promise; but as soon as the lust of their greedy mind is satisfied, they fear not then their words, they heed not their perjuries.

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxxv, l. 143.

What a woman says to her lover should be written in wind and running water. (Mulier cupido quod dicit amanti in vento et rapida scribere oportet aqua.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxx, l. 3.

9 Lovers' oaths, the sport of every lightest breeze. (Lascivola volant levibus perjuria ventis.)

CLAUDIAN, *Epithalamium De Nuptiis Honorii
Augusti*, l. 83.

10 The old, yet still successful, cheat of love.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiv, l. 188. (Pope, tr.)

11 No longer could I doubt him true—
All other men may use deceit;

He always said my eyes were blue,
And often swore my lips were sweet.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Mother, I cannot Mind My Wheel.

12 For the queen of love,
As they hold constantly, does never punish,
But smile at, lovers' perjuries.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act ii, sc. 3.

13 When a man talks of love, with caution trust
him;

But if he swears, he'll certainly deceive thee.

THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act ii, sc. 1.

14 Venus lends deaf ears to love's deceits.
(Commodat in lusus numina surda Venus.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 86.

15 Jupiter from on high laughs at the perjuries of lovers. (Juppiter ex alto perjuria ridet amantium.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 633.

For Jove himself sits in the azure skies

And laughs below at lovers' perjuries.

OVID, Ars Amatoria, l. 633. (Marlowe, tr.)

Jove laughs at lovers' perjuries, and bids the winds carry them away without fulfillment. (Per-juria ridet amantium Juppiter et ventos inrita ferre jubet.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. vi, l. 49.

Fool, not to know that love endures no tie,

And Jove but laughs at lovers' perjury.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 148.

At lovers' perjuries, They say, Jove laughs.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 92.

16 Hell's afloat in lovers' tears.

DOROTHY PARKER.

17 Love is faithless. (Perfidiosus est amor.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 72. (Act i, sc. 1.)

18 Credit me, friend, it hath been ever thus,
Since the ark rested on Mount Ararat:
False man hath sworn, and woman hath believed—

Repented and reproached, and then believed once more.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel: Ch. 20, Motto.
Quoted as from The New World.

She deceiving, I believing,
What can lovers wish for more?

SIR CHARLES SCUDLEY, Song.

Men's vows are women's traitors! . . . A bait for ladies.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 56.

You would for paradise break faith and troth;
And Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc.
3, l. 143.

And swearing till my very roof was dry
With oaths of love.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 206.

When my love swears that she is made of
truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxviii. Also The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 1.

All lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
2, l. 91.

We men may say more, swear more; but, indeed,
Our shows are more than will; for still we prove
Much in our vows, but little in our love.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l.
119.

No oath too binding for a lover.

SOPHOCLES, Phædra. Frag. 848.

For kings and lovers are alike in this,
That their chief art in reign dissembling is.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Loving and Beloved.

Fear not to swear; void are the perjuries of love, which, thanks to Jove, the winds carry away over land and sea. (Nec jurare time:
veneris perjurâ venti Inrita per terras et freta summa ferunt, Gratia magna Jovi.)

TRIVILLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 4, l. 21.

When one is in love one begins to deceive oneself. And one ends by deceiving others.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act iii.

XXIV—Love: Love at First Sight

None ever loved, but at first sight they loved.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Blind Beggar of Alexandria. (1596)

Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Hero and Leander.
First Sestiad, l. 176. (1598)

Dead shepherd, now I find thy saw of might,
"Who ever loved that loved not at first sight?"

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5, l.
82. (1599)

Love, that all gentle hearts so quickly know.
(Amor, ch'al cor gentil ratto s'apprende.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 100.

Amid the gloom and travail of existence suddenly to behold a beautiful being, and as instantaneously to feel an overwhelming conviction that with that fair form for ever our destiny must be entwined . . . this is love!

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Henrietta Temple.

If thou hast loved, re-ope the magic book;
Say, do its annals date not from a look?
In which two hearts, unguess'd perchance before,
Rush'd each to each, and were as two no more;
While all thy being—by some Power above
Its will constrain'd—sigh'd, trembling, "This is Love."

BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. III, l.
57.

That old miracle—Love-at-first-sight—
Needs no explanations.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto vi, sec.
15.

Your brother and my sister no sooner met but they looked, no sooner looked but they loved, no sooner loved but they sighed, no sooner sighed but they asked one another the reason, no sooner knew the reason but they sought the remedy; and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage: they are in the very wrath of love, and they will together; clubs cannot part them.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 2, l.
36.

Not at first sight, nor with a dribbled shot,
Love gave the wound, which, while I breathe,
will bleed.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet ii.

The only true love is love at first sight; second sight dispels it.

ISRAEL ZANOWILL.

XXV—Love: First Love

As in the bosom o' the stream,
The moonbeam dwells at dewy e'en,
So trembling, pure, was tender love
Within the breast o' bonnie Jean.
BURNS, Bonnie Jean.

¹ Nature's oracle—first love,—that all
Which Eve has left her daughters since her fall.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto II, st. 189.

Love is so very timid when 'tis new.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto I, st. 112.

² The spot where love's first links were wound,
That ne'er are riven,
Is hallowed down to earth's profound,
And up to Heaven!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hallowed Ground.

³ The magic of first love is our ignorance that it can ever end.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Henrietta Temple, iv, 1.

⁴ Lovers should guard their strangeness.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

The accepted and betrothed lover has lost the wildest charm of his maiden in her acceptance of him.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

⁵ But one always returns to one's first loves.
(Mais on revient toujours A ses premières amours.)

ETIENNE, La Joconde. Act III, sc. 1.

⁶ The bashful virgin's side-long looks of love.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 29.

⁷ Yet with low words she greeted me,
With smiles divinely tender;
Upon her cheek the red rose dawned,—
The white rose meant surrender.

JOHN HAY, The White Flag.

⁸ It is an ancient story Yet is it ever new.
(Es ist eine alte Geschichte, Doch bleibt sie immer neu.)

HEINE, Lyrisches Intermezzo.

⁹ Soft is the breath of a maiden's Yes:
Not the light gossamer stirs with less;
But never a cable that holds so fast
Through all the battles of wave and blast.

O. W. HOLMES, Dorothy Q. St. 1.

¹⁰ A warrior so bold, and a virgin so bright,
Conversed as they sat on the green.
They gazed on each other with tender de-
light,

Alonso the Brave was the name of the knight—

The maiden's the Fair Imogene.

M. G. LEWIS, *Alonso the Brave and the Fair
Imogene*. From his novel, Ambrosio.

¹¹ O, there is nothing holier, in this life of ours, than the first consciousness of love,—the first fluttering of its silken wings.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. III, ch. 6.

¹² That was the first sound in the song of love!
Scarce more than silence is, and yet a sound.
LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act I, sc.
3, l. 109.

How can I tell the signals and the signs
By which one heart another heart divines?

How can I tell the many thousand ways

By which it keeps the secret it betrays?

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. III, Student's Tale: Emma and Eginkard, l. 75.

¹³ I've wandered east, I've wandered west,

I've bourned a weary lot;

But in my wanderings far or near

Ye never were forgot.

The fount that first burst frae this heart

Still travels on its way

And channels deeper as it rins

The hve o' life's young day.

WILLIAM MOYERNEWELL, Jeannie Morrison.

¹⁴ It was many and many a year ago,

In a kingdom by the sea,

That a maiden there lived whom you may know

By the name of Annabel Lee;

And this maiden she lived with no other thought

Than to love and be loved by me.

She was a child and I was a child,

In this kingdom by the sea,

But we loved with a love that was more than
love,—

I and my Annabel Lee;

With a love that the winged seraphs of heaven

Coveted her and me.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, Annabel Lee.

And neither the angels in heaven above,

Nor the demons down under the sea,

Can ever discover my soul from the soul

Of the beautiful Annabel Lee.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, Annabel Lee.

¹⁵ I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love.

New Testament: Revelation, II, 4.

¹⁶ All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act III, sc. 2, l. 96.

For sometimes she would laugh, and sometimes cry,

Then sudden waxed wroth, and all she knew not
why.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.
Canto I, st. 76.

¹⁷ First love is only a little foolishness and a lot of curiosity.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island, iv.

¹⁸ For indeed I knew

Of no more subtle master under heaven

Than is the maiden passion for a maid,

Not only to keep down the base in man,

But teach high thought, and amiable words

And courtliness, and the desire of fame,
And love of truth, and all that makes a man.
TENNYSON, Galahadee, l. 475.

Men always want to be a woman's first love.
That is their clumsy vanity. We women have a more subtle instinct about things. What we like is to be a man's last romance.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance,
Act II.

XXVI—Love: Old and New

Dawn love is silver,
Wait for the west:
Old love is gold love—
Old love is best.

KATHARINE LEE BATES, For a Golden Wedding.

'Tis well to be merry and wise,
'Tis well to be honest and true;
'Tis well to be off with the old love,
Before you are on with the new.

C. R. MATURIN, Bertram: Motto. A play produced at Drury Lane theatre in 1816.

It is best to be off wⁱ the old love,
Before you be on wⁱ the new.

SCOTT, The Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 29.
(1819) Quoted as "the end of an old song."

It is good to be merry and wise,
It is good to be honest and true,
It is best to be off with the old love
Before you go on with the new.

Version of the old song published in Songs of England and Scotland, London, 1835. Vol. II,
p. 73.

And afore you're off wⁱ the auld love
It's best to be on wⁱ the new.

UNKNOWN, It's Gude to be Merry and Wise.

The Scotch version, showing characteristic Scotch caution.

There is an old song which gives us some very good advice about courting:—

"It's gude to be off with the auld hve
Before ye be on wⁱ the new."

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch.
27. (1857)

It is better to love two too many than one too few.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams.

My merry, merry, merry roundelay
Concludes with Cupid's curse:
They that do change old love for new,
Pray gods, they change for worse!
GEORGE FEELE, Fair and Fair.

As one who coos at evening o'er an album
all alone,
And muses on the faces of the friends that he has known,
So I turn the leaves of Fancy till, in shadowy design,
I find the smiling features of an old sweetheart of mine.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, An Old Sweetheart of Mine.

Old love is little worth when new is more preferred.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto ix, st. 40.

I who all the Winter through,
Cherished other loves than you
And kept hands with hoary policy in marriage-bed and pew;
Now I know the false and true,
For the earnest sun looks through,
And my old love comes to meet me in the dawning and the dew.

R. L. STEVENSON, My Old Love. (1876)

The woods are hush'd, their music is no
more;
The leaf is dead, the yearning past away;
New leaf, new life—the days of frost are o'er;

New life, new love, to suit the newer day:
New loves are sweet as those that went before:

Free love—free field—we love but while we may.

TENNYSON, The Last Tournament, l. 276.

At last she sought out Memory, and they trod
The same old paths where Love had walk'd with Hope,

And Memory fed the soul of Love with tears.

TENNYSON, The Lover's Tale. Pt. I, l. 808.

Other loves may come to us and will,
And may hold us in their spell until
With a half regretful sigh,
We discover by and by,

There's a charm about the old love still.

F. W. VANDERBLOOT, There's a Charm About the Old Love Still. (1901)

XXVII—Love: Unreturning

Love, like Reputation, once fled, never returns more.

APHRA BEHN, History of the Nun.

The moon returns, and the spring; birds warble,
trees burst into leaf,
But Love once gone, goes for ever, and all that endures is the grief.

MATHILDE BLIND, Love Trilogy. No. 3.

And sigh to bethink me how vain is my sighing,
For love, once extinguished, is kindled no more.
REGINALD HEBER, Song to a Welsh Air.

Love, like Ulysses, is a wanderer,
For new fields always and new faces yearn-
ing.

Put by, O waiting ones, put by your weaving,
Unlike Ulysses, love is unreturning.

ROSELLA MEXICER MONTGOMERY, Counsel.

For the man's love once gone never returns.
TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 333.

⁷ Nothing grows again more easily than love.
(Nihil enim facilius quam amor recrudescit.)
SENeca, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxi. 3.

XXVIII—Love in a Cottage

² Love lasteth as long as the money endureth.
WILLIAM CAXTON, The Game of Chesse, iii. 3.
(1474) Cited as "a common proverb in England."

³ Love comes in at the window and goes out at the door.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 327. (1605)

When poverty comes in at the door, love creeps out at the window.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5565.

⁴ When the glowing of passion's over, and pinching winter comes, will amorous sighs supply the want of fire, or kind looks and kisses keep off hunger?

SUSANNAH CENTIVRE, Artifice. (1724)

Nobody wants to kiss when they are hungry.
DOROTHY DIX.

⁵ Love is maintained by wealth; when all is spent Adversity then breeds the discontent.

ROBERT HERICK, Hesperides. No. 144.

⁶ Love in a hut, with water and a crust,
Is—Love, forgive us!—cinders, ashes, dust;
Love in a palace is perhaps at last
More grievous torment than a hermit's fast.
KEATS, Lamia. Pt. ii. l. 1.

⁷ Love lurks as soon about a sheepcote as a palace.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde, l. 95. (1590)

Love lives in cottages as well as in courts.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

⁸ In the very smallest cot
There is room enough for a loving pair.
(Raum ist in der kleinsten Hütte Für ein glücklich liebend Paar.)

SCHILLER, Der Jüngling am Bache. St. 4.

'Tis better far to love and be poor, than be rich with an empty heart.

ST. LEWIS MORRIS, Songs of Two Worlds: Love in Death.

Ah, better to love in the lowliest cot
Than pice in a palace alone.

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Chastelar.

⁹ Love in a cottage, with a broken window to let in the rain, is not my idea of comfort.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On the Writing of Essays.

¹⁰ Without Ceres (bread) and Liber (wine) Venus will starve. (Sine Cerere et Libero friget Venus.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 732.

Then the little maid she said, "Your fire may warm the bed,
But what shall we do for to eat?"

Will the flames you're only rich in make a fire in the kitchen,

And the little God of Love turn the spit?"

UNKNOWN, Old Nursery Rhyme, from an 18th century broadside.

¹¹ They may talk of love in a cottage,
And bowers of trellised vine—

Of nature bewitchingly simple,
And milkmaids half divine, . . .

But give me a sly flirtation,

By the light of a chandeller—

With music to play in the pauses,
And nobody very near.

N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage.

Your love in a cottage is hungry,

Your vine is a nest for flies—

Your milkmaid shocks the Graces,

And simplicity talks of pies!

You lie down to your shady slumber

And wake with a bug in your ear,

And your damsel that walks in the morning is shad like a mountaineer.

N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage.

True love is at home on a carpet,

And mightily likes his ease—

And true love has an eye for a dinner,

And starves beneath shady trees.

His wing is the fan of a lady,

His foot's an invisible thing,

And his arrow is tipp'd with a jewel,
And shot from a silver string.

N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage.

XXIX—Love: Spoken and Silent

¹² Love ceases to be a pleasure when it ceases to be a secret.

MRS. APHERA BEHN, The Lover's Watch.

¹³ Say thou dost love me, love me, love me—toll
The silver iterance!—only minding, Dear,
To love me also in silence, with thy soul.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese.
No. xxi.

¹⁴ In many ways doth the full heart reveal
The presence of the love it would conceal.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Motto.

Love most concealed, does most itself discover.

WALTER DAVISON, Sonnets. No. xiv.

A murderous guilt shows not itself more soon
Than love that would seem hid: love's night is noon.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 159.

¹⁵ Words are the weak support of cold indifference; love has no language to be heard.

CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act iv, sc. 17.

¹⁶ For God sake hold your tongue, and let me
love.

JOHN DONNE, The Canonisation.

¹ Sweet are the words of Love, sweeter his thoughts;
Sweetest of all what Love nor says nor thinks.

RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo, clxv.

When Silence speaks for Love she has much to say.

RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo, lxxiii.

² All the heart was full of feeling: love had ripened into speech,
Like the sap that turns to nectar, in the velvet of the peach.

WILLIAM WALLACE HARNY, Adonais.

³ Love understands love; it needs no talk.

FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL, Loving Allegiance.

⁴ They do not love that do not show their love.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. II, ch. 9.

⁵ Love is sparingly soluble in the words of men, therefore they speak much of it; but one syllable of woman's speech can dissolve more of it than a man's heart can hold.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table, Ch. 11.

No love so true as love that dies untold.

O. W. HOLMES, The Mysterious Illness.

⁶ Listlessness and silence denote the lover. (Amantem languor et silentium arguit.)

HORACE, Epodes, No. xi, l. 9.

⁷ But oft the words come forth awry of him that loveth well.

HENRY HOWARD, Pangs and Sleights of Love.

⁸ 'Tis no sin love's fruits to steal;

But the sweet thefts to reveal;

To be taken, to be seen,

These have crimes accounted been.

BEN JONSON, Volpone, Act III, sc. 6. See also under KISS.

⁹ Love contending with friendship, and self with each generous impulse,

To and fro in his breast his thoughts were heaving and dashing.

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish, Pt. III, l. 7.

Archly the maiden smiled, and, with eyes over-running with laughter,

Said, in a tremulous voice, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish, Pt. III, concluding lines.

In the way of love and glory,

Each tongue best tells his own story.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Of the Choice of a Wife.

Therefore all hearts in love use their own tongues;

Let every eye negotiate for itself

And trust no agent.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, Act II, sc. 1, l. 184.

A day in April never came so sweet,

To show how costly summer was at hand,

As this fore-spurrer comes before his lord.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, Act II, sc. 9, l. 93.

¹⁰ [The passion wherewith] we lash ourselves into the persuasive speech distinguishing us from the animals.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways, Ch. 1.

¹¹ All love gives words, and finds sustenance in delay. (Verba dat omnino amor, reperitque alimenta morando.)

OVIN, Remediorum Amoris, l. 95.

¹² To be able to say how much you love is to love but little. (Chi può dir com' egli arde, è in picciol fusco.)

PETRARCE, Sonnets, No. CXXVII.

O, they love least that let men know their love.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act I, sc. 2, l. 32.

¹³ But I, in love, was mute and still.

PUSKIN, Eugene Onegin, Canto I, st. 52.

¹⁴ Silence in love bewrays more woe

Than words, though ne'er so witty:

A beggar that is dumb, you know,

May challenge double pity.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Silent Lover, St. 9.

¹⁵ There's beggary in the love that can be reckoned.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, Act I, sc. 1, l. 15.

¹⁶ Speak low, if you speak love.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, Act II, sc. 1, l. 102.

O, love's best habit is a soothing tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 11.

How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,

Like softest music to attending ears!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, Act II, sc. 2, l. 166.

¹⁷ She never told her love,

But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud, Feed on her damask cheek.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, Act II, sc. 4, l. 113.

¹⁸ What, gone without a word?

Ay, so true love should do; it cannot speak; For truth hath better deeds than words to grace it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act II, sc. 2, l. 16.

Didst thou but know the holy touch of love,
Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow,

As seek to quench the fire of love with words.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 7, l. 18.

1 They love indeed who quake to say they love.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet liv.

2 The wretched man gan them advise too late,
That love is not where most it is profest.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto 10, st. 31.

3 Silence, uttering love that all things understand.
SWINBURNE, The Cliffside Path. St. 2.

4 Who are wise in love, Love most, say least.
Tennyson, Merlin and Vivien, l. 245.

5 Love is a talkative passion.
THOMAS WILSON, Sacra Privata, p. 194.

XXX—Love: Protestations

6 Mary kept the belt o' love, and O but she was gay!

She danced a jig, she sung a song that took my heart away.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Lovely Mary Donnelly.

7 One sweet, sad secret holds my heart in thrall;

A mighty love within my breast has grown,
Unseen, unspoken, and of no one known;
And of my sweet, who gave it, least of all.
(Ma vie a son secret, mon âme a son mystère:

Un amour éternel en un moment coneu.
La mal est sans remède, aussi j'ai dû le taire,
Et elle qui l'a fait n'en a jamais rien su.)
FELIX ARVERS, Sonnet. (Knight, tr.) In Mes Heures Perdues, Arvers states that it was taken from the Italian.

8 Heaven would not be Heaven were thy soul not with mine, nor would Hell be Hell were our souls together.

(Sive ad felices vadam post funera campos,
Seu ferar ardentem rapidi Phlegethontis ad undam,

Nec sine te felix ero, nec tecum miser unquam.)

BAPTISTA MANTUANUS, Eclogues. No. iii, l. 108.

O mother, mother, what is bliss?

O mother, what is bale?

Without my Wilhem what were heaven,

Or with him what were hell?

GOTTFRIED AUGUSTUS BÜCHER, Lenore. (Walter Scott, tr., William and Helen. This was Scott's first publication.)

Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven or in hell!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 6.

9 And what am I but love of you made flesh,

Quickened by every longing love may bring
A pilgrim fire, homeless and wandering.

KATHERINE BOWDITCH, Reincarnation.

10 "Honeypot" he called her,
Hurling words like javelins—
Stern John Knox with the flame in his eyes.
Steeled against shocks
Was great John Knox!
Target for surprise
From those side-glancing eyes?
Nay, I trow not—"Honeypot."

LOUISE MOREY BOWMAN, John Knox and Mary Queen.

11 In your arms was still delight,
Quiet as a street at night;
And thoughts of you, I do remember,
Were green leaves in a darkened chamber,
Were dark clouds in a moonless sky.

RUPERT BROOKE, Retrospect.

12 Beloved, let us love so well,
Our work shall still be better for our love,
And still our love be sweeter for our work,
And both commended, for the sake of each,
By all true workers and true lovers born.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ix, l. 924.

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways.
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height
My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight
For the ends of Being and ideal Grace.

I love thee to the level of everyday's
Most quiet need, by sun and candle-light,
I love thee freely, as men strive for Right;
I love thee purely, as they turn from Fraise.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese. No. xliii.

13 For the lake, its swan;
For the dell, its dove;
And for thee—(oh, haste!)

Me, to bend above,
Me, to hold embraced.

ROBERT BROWNING, James Lee's Wife. Pt. i.

14 Flower o' the broom,
Take away love, and our earth is a tomb! . . .

Flower o' the clove,
All the Latin I construe is "amo," I love!
RONZAT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi.

Be a god and hold me With a charm!

Be a man and fold me With thine arm!

ROBERT BROWNING, A Woman's Last Word

15 I canna tell, I mauna tell,
I darena for your anger;
But secret love will break my heart,
If I conceal it langer.

BYRNS, Craigie-burn Wood.

The golden hours on angel wings
Flew o'er me and my dearie,
For dear to me as light and life

- Was my sweet Highland Mary.
BURNS, Highland Mary.
To see her is to love her,
And love but her for ever;
For nature made her what she is,
And ne'er made sic anither!
BURNS, O, Saw Ye Bonnie Lesley. (1792)
Oh! she was good as she was fair,
None—none on earth above her!
As pure in thought as angels are,
To know her was to love her.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. i, l. 69. (1814)
- 1
Tho' father an' mither an' a' should gae mad,
O whistle, an' I'll come to ye, my lad.
BURNS, O Whistle, an' I'll Come to Ye.
Whistle, and she'll come to you.
JOHN FLETCHER, Wu Without Money. Act iv,
sc. 4.

O, my luve is like a red, red rose
That's newly sprung in June.
O, my luve is like the melody
That's sweetly play'd in tune.
BURNS, A Red, Red Rose.
- 3
The cold in clime are cold in blood,
Their love can scarce deserve the name;
But mine was like the lava flood
That boils in Ætna's breast of flame.
BYRON, The Glour, l. 1099.
- 4
She was his life,
The ocean to the river of his thoughts,
Which terminated all.
BYRON, The Dream. Sec. 2.
She floats upon the river of his thoughts!
LONGFELLOW, Spanish Student. Act ii, sc. 3.

Let Time and Chance combine, combine!
Let Time and Chance combine!
The fairest love from heaven above,
That love of yours was mine, My Dear!
That love of yours was mine.
THOMAS CARLYLE, Adieu.

Blest as the immortal gods is he,
The youth who fondly sits by thee,
And hears and sees thee all the while Softly speak and sweetly smile.
(Ille mi par esse deo videtur,
Ille, si fas est, superare divos,
Qui sedens adversus identidem te Spectat et audit Dulce ridentem.)

Daisy, Daisy, give me your answer, do!
I'm half crazy all for the love of you!
It won't be a stylish marriage,
I can't afford a carriage,
But you'll look sweet upon the seat
Of a bicycle built for two.
HARRY DACIE, Daisy Bell. (1892)
- 10
Never will you hold me
With puddings and cake
Or even the threat
Of a heart to break. . . .
A song within a song
And eyes upon the door—
And you will always hold me
One day more.
CHARLES DIVINE, Never Will You Hold Me.

Not from the whole wide world I chose
thee,
Sweetheart, light of the land and the sea!
The wide, wide world could not enclose thee,
For thou art the whole wide world to me.
R. W. GILDER, Song.
- 13
Thus let me hold thee to my heart,
And every care resign.
And we shall never, never part,
My life—my all that's mine!

There is a lady sweet and kind,
Was never face so pleased my mind;
I did but see her passing by,
And yet I love her till I die.
BARNABE GOOGE, There is a Lady. An English version of a Latin stanza by Thomas Naogeorgus. (Popish Kingdom or Reign of Antichrist, 1570. Stanza written on back of leaf 53.) Wrongfully ascribed to Robert Herrick in Scottish Student's Song-Book.

When the swallows homeward fly,
When the roses scattered lie,
When from neither hill or dale,
Chants the silvery nightingale:
In these words my bleeding heart
Would to thee its grief impart;
When I thus thy image lose,

Can I, ah! can I, e'er know repose?
KARL HERRIGSSON, When the Swallows
Homeward Fly.

2
I love thee—I love thee!
'Tis all that I can say;
It is my vision in the night,
My dreaming in the day.
THOMAS HOOD, I Love Thee.

I love thee, I love but thee.
With a love that shall not die
Till the sun grows cold,
And the stars are old,
And the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold!
BAYARD TAYLOR, Bedouin Song.

Coffe live with me and be my Love,
And we will all the pleasures prove
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
Or woods, or steepy mountain yields.
CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Passionate Shep- herd to His Love. Included by Walton in The Compleat Angler, ch. 2, as "that smooth song which was made by Kit Ma lowe, now at least fifty years ago." Sometimes wrongly attributed to Shakespeare, because fragments of the second and third stanzas are quoted in The Merry Wives of Windsor (Act iv, sc. 1, l.
16), and the entire poem included in The Passionate Pilgrim (Pt. xi). The versions vary slightly.

If all the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move
To live with thee and be thy love.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Nymph's Reply to the Passionate Shepherd. Walton included this poem in The Compleat Angler, ch. 2, calling it The Milkmaid's Mother's Answer, saying that "it was made by Sir Walter Raleigh in his younger days." The first stanza was also included in The Pastoral Pilgrim, immediately following Marlowe's poem.

Come live with me, and be my love,
And we will some new pleasures prove
Of golden sands, and crystal brooks,
With silken lines, and silver hooks.

JUNY DONNE, The Bird. Included by Walton in The Compleat Angler, ch. 9, as "made by Dr. Donne, and made to shew the world that he could make soft and smooth verses, when he thought them fit and worth his labour."

1
My love is of a birth as rare
As 'his for object strange and high;
It was begotten by despair
Upon impossibility.

ANDREW MARVELL, My Love.

2
She whom I love is hard to catch and conquer,
Hard, but O the glory of the winning were she won!

GEORGE MEREDITH, Love in the Valley, St. 2 Give me power to be worthy the good in her, and grant her patience to reach the good in me.

A Book of Verses underneath the bough,
A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread—and Thou
Beside me singing in the Wilderness—
Oh, Wilderness were Paradise now!

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 12. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

Or were I in the wildest waste,
Sae black and bare, sae black and bare,
The desert were a Paradise,
If thou wert there, if thou wert there.
BURNS, Oh! Wert Thou in the Cold Blast.

Oh that the desert were my dwelling-place,
With one fair spirit for my minister,
That I might all forget the human race,
And, hating no one, love but only her!
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 177.

O Love! in such a wilderness as this,
Where transport and security entwine,
Here is the empire of thy perfect bliss,
And here thou art a god indeed divine.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. III, st. 1.

"A jug and a book and a dame,
And a nice shady nook for the same,"
SAUL THOMAS KHAYYAM,
"And I don't give a darn
What you say, it's a great little game!"

Quick as a humming bird is my love,
Dipping into the hearts of flowers—
She darts so eagerly, swiftly, sweetly
Dipping into the flowers of my heart.
JAMES OPPENHEIM, Quick as a Humming Bird.

11
Dear as the vital warmth that feeds my life,
Dear as these eyes, that weep in fondness o'er thee

THOMAS OTWAY, Venue Preserved. Act v, sc. 1.

12
I love thee then
Not only for thy body packed with sweet
Of all this world, that cup of brimming June. . . .

Not for this only do I love thee, but Because Infinity upon thee broods;
And thou art full of whispers and of shadows.
STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Marpessa.

13
Thou wast all that to me, love,
For which my soul did pine:
A green isle in the sea, love,
A fountain and a shrine.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, To One in Paradise.

We are prepared, my love and I,
For winter on a hill:

I stored a theme of song, and she
A root of daffodil.

EDWIN QUARLES, Stronghold.

Love me and the world is mine.

DAVID REED, Jr., Title of popular song, 1906.

The hours I spent with thee, dear heart,
Are as a string of pearls to me;
I count them over, every one apart,
My rosary, my rosary.

ROBERT CAMERON ROGERS, My Rosary.

Her voice, whate'er she said, enchanted;
Like music to the heart it went.
And her dark eyes—how eloquent!
Ask what they would, 'twas granted.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. I, l. 80.

Still so gently o'er me stealing,
Mem'ry will bring back the feeling,
Spite of all my grief revealing
That I love thee, love thee still.
(Ah! perchè non posso odiarti
Infedel, com' io vorrei!
Cancellata dal mio cor.)

FELICE ROMANI, La Sonnambula. Act II.

For one man is my world of all the men
This wide world holds; O love, my world is you.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Come Back to Me.

And in his heart my heart is locked,
And in his life my life.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Noble Sisters.

Love, all the hours are long
That once so fleetly flew;
I am bereft of song
Being bereft of you.

But when you come again
How nimbly Time will run
To such a jocund strain,

For you and song are one.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, Love and Song Are One.

O coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded; my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 209.

The fair, the chaste and unexpressive she.

Forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act V, sc. 1, l. 292.

From my heart-string I love the lovely bully.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 47.

Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still, drum!
for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth.
Assist me, some extemporal god of rhyme, for I am sure I shall turn sonnet. Devise, wit; write, pen; for I am for whole volumes in folio!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act I, sc. 2, l. 187.

Perdition catch my soul,
But I do love thee! and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act III, sc. 3, l. 90.

If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act V, sc. 2, l. 144.

Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied;
Cry but "Ay me!" pronounce but "love"
and "dove."

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 1, l. 9.

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 98.

This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,

May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 121.

You'll love me yet!—and I can tarry

Your love's protracted growing:

June reared that bunch of flowers you carry,
From seeds of April's sowing.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. III.

My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee
The more I have, for both are infinite.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 133.

Give me my Romeo; and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night
And pay no worship to the garish sun.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act III, sc. 2, l. 21.

Romeo, if dead, should be cut up into little stars to make the heavens fin.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Love.

1 Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xviii.

Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
Of more delight than hawks or horses be.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xci.

2 If ever thou shalt love,
In the sweet pangs of it remember me;
For such as I am all true lovers are,
Unstaid and skittish in all motions else,
Save in the constant image of the creature
That is beloved.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, Act ii, sc. 4, l. 15.

3 O, but I love his lady too too much!

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act ii, sc. 4, l. 205.

And notwithstanding all her sudden quips,
The least whereof would quell a lover's hope,
Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurts my love,
The more it grows and fawneth on her still.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act iv, sc. 2, l. 12.

4 Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love?

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 201.

5 When you loved me I gave you the whole sun and stars to play with. I gave you eternity in a single moment . . . a moment only; but was it not enough? Were you not paid then for all the rest of your struggle oo earth? . . . We spent eternity together; and you ask me for a little lifetime more. . . .
I gave you your own soul: you ask me for my body as a plaything. Was it not enough? Was it not enough?

BERNARD SHAW, Getting Married.

6 The fountains mingle with the river,
And the rivers with the ocean;
The winds of heaven mix for ever
With a sweet emotion;

Nothing in the world is single;

All things, by a law divine,

In one another's being mingle—

Why not I with thine?

SHELLEY, Love's Philosophy.

7 I loved him for himself alone.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

But thou, through good and evil, praise and blame,

Wilt not thou love me for myself alone?

MACAULAY, Lines Written 30 July, 1847.

I love you because you're a sweet little fool.

J. H. BOKER, The Sweet Little Fool.

8 As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, ii, 2.

9 Our way lies where God knows
And Love knows where:

We are in Love's hand to-day.

SWINBURNE, Love at Sea.

Land me, she says, where love
Shows but one shaft, one dove,
One heart, one hand.—

A shore like that, my dear,

Lies where no man will steer,

No maiden land.

SWINBURNE, Love at Sea. Imitated from Thé-ophile Gautier.

10 If love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf,

Our lives would grow together

In sad or singing weather.

SWINBURNE, A Match.

Were you the earth, dear love, and I the skies,
My love would shine on you like to the sun

And look upon you with ten thousand eyes

Till heaven waxed blind and till the world were done.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, Love's Omnipotence.

11 There has fallen a splendid tear

From the passion-flower at the gate.

She is coming, my dove, my dear;

She is coming, my life, my fate;

The red rose cries, "She is near, she is near;"

And the white rose weeps, "She is late;"

The larkspur listens, "I hear, I hear;"

And the lily whispers, "I wait."

TENNYSOON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 22, st. 10.

She is coming, my own, my sweet;

Were it ever so airy a tread,

My heart would hear her and beat,

Were it earth in an earthy bed;

My dust would hear her and beat,

Had I lain for a century dead;

Would start and tremble under her feet,

And blossom in purple and red.

TENNYSOON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 22, st. 11.

12 I confess that I love this woman; if that is a sin, I confess that also. (Ego me amare hanc fateor; si id peccare est, fateor id quoque.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 896.

13 How could I, blest with thee, long nights employ,

And how with thee the longest day enjoy!

(Quam vellem tecum longas requiescere noctes

Et tecum longos pervigilare dies!)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 6, l. 33.

14 The seamen on the wave, love,

When storm and tempest rave, love,

Look to one star to save, love,

Thou art that star to me!

JOHN TYLER, To Julia Gardiner Tyler, Boston

1 Jan., 1835, at the age of 65.

¹ Will you love me in December as you do in May,
Will you love me in the good old fashioned way?

When my hair has all turned gray,
Will you kiss me then and say,
That you love me in December as you do in May?

JAMES J. WALKER, Will You Love Me in December as You Do in May? Set to music by Ernest R. Ball in 1905.

² A narrow compass, and yet there
Dwelt all that's good, and all that's fair:
Give me but what this riband bound,
Take all the rest the sun goes round.
EDMUND WALLER, On a Girdle.

³ No lance have I, in joust or fight,
To splinter in my lady's sight;
But, at her feet, how blest were I
For any need of hers to die!
WHITTIER, The Henchman.

The love that no return doth crave
To knightly levels lifts the slave.
WHITTIER, The Henchman.

⁴ Serene will be our days and bright,
And happy will our nature be,
When love is an unerring light,
And joy its own security.
WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty. St. 3.

She who dwells with me, whom I have loved
With such communion, that no place on earth
Can ever be a solitude to me.
WORDSWORTH, There Is an Eminence.

⁵ O dearer far than light and life are dear.
WORDSWORTH, To —. (To Mrs. W.)

Ah, dearer than my soul . . .
Dearer than light, or life, or fame.
JOHN OLDHAM, Lament for Saul and Jonathan.
Art thou not dearer to my eyes than light?
Dost thou not circulate through all my veins?
Mingle with life, and form my very soul?
EDWARD YOUNG, Busiris. Act v, sc. 1.

⁶ Tho' near the gates of Paradise,
Gladly I'd turn away,
Just to hear you say, "I love you!"
Sometime, somewhere, some day.
RIDA JOHNSON YOUNG, Sometime. (1919)

⁷ I seek for one as fair and gay,
But find none to remind me,
How blest the hours pass'd away
With the girl I left behind me.
UNKNOWN, The Girl I Left Behind Me. (1759)
(Chorus of Melody, Dublin, 1810.)

⁸ Greensleeves was all my joy,
Greensleeves was my delight,
Greensleeves was my heart of gold,

And who but Lady Greensleeves?
UNKNOWN, A New Courtly Sonnet of the Lady Greensleeves. (A Handful of Pleasant Ditties, 1584.) The tune of Greensleeves is referred to by Shakespeare, Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, i, and v, 5.

⁹ And when with envy time transported,
Shall think to rob us of our joys,
You'll in your girls again be courted,
And I'll go wooing in my boys.
UNKNOWN, Winifreda. First printed in a volume of Miscellaneous Poems by Several Hands, 1726, where it was said to be a translation "from the ancient British language." Included in Percy's Reliques. Sometimes attributed to John Gilbert Cooper, who, however, was only three years old in 1726.

XXXI—Love and Fear

¹⁰ Love is a thing aye full of busy dread.

(c. 1374)

This proverb that I the lere . . .
Love goeth never without fear.
ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Castle of Labour. Sig. D 2. (1506)

¹¹ There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear.
New Testament: I John, iv, 18.

Love cannot be mixed with fear. (Non potest amor cum timore misceri.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epis. xlvii, 19.

¹² For there is only sorrow in my heart;
There is no room for fear.
But how I wish I were afraid again,
My dear, my dear!
ALINE KILMER, I Shall Not Be Afraid.

¹³ Love is a thing full of anxious fears. (Res est solliciti plena timoris amor.)
OVID, Heroides. Epis. i, l. 12.

¹⁴ I do not wish to be feared; I prefer to be loved. (Nolo ego metui: amari mavolo.)
PLAUTUS, Astynaria, l. 835.

¹⁵ To fear love is to fear life, and those who fear life are already three parts dead.
BERTRAND RUSSELL, Marriage and Morals, p. 287.

Of all forms of caution, caution in love is perhaps most fatal to true happiness.
BERTRAND RUSSELL, Conquest of Happiness, p. 186.

¹⁶ Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;
When little fears grow great, great love grows there.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 181.

XXXII—Love and Hate

For those who love, the world is wide,
But not for those who hate.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Rencontre.

For 'tis impossible hate to return with love.
(Che amar chi t'odia, ell'è impossibil cosa.)
ALFIERI, Polinice. Act ii, sc. 4.

I love you:
I'll cut your throat for your own sake.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act iv, sc. 1.

When I love most, Love is disguised
In Hate; and when Hate is surprised
In Love, then I hate most.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. ii, l. 227.
Once, when I loved, I would enlase
Breast, eyelids, hands, feet, form and face
Of her I loved in one embrace—
As if by mere love I could love immensely!
Once, when I hated, I would plunge
My sword and wipe with the first lunge
My foe's whole life out like a sponge—
As if by mere hate I could hate intensely!
But now I am wiser, know better the fashion
How passion seeks aid from its opposite passion.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. ii, l. 207.
Our hatreds are beautiful when they mark the loftiness of our loves.

ABEL BONNARD, The Art of Friendship: Pt. ii, Reflections.

The self-same thing they will abhor
One way, and long another for.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 219.

Now hatred is by far the longest pleasure;
Men love in haste, but they detest at leisure.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 6.

I hate and I love. Perhaps you ask why I do so. I do not know, but I feel it, and I am in torment. (Odi et amo. Quare id faciam, fortasse requiris. Nescio, sed fieri sentio et excrucior.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxxv.
One loves without reason, and without reason one hates. (On aime sans raison, et sans raison l'on hait.)

REONARD, Les Folies Amoureuses.

Love as though some day you would have to hate; hate as though some day you would have to love.

CHILON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon.)

Few (especially young) people know how to love, or how to hate; their love is an unbounded weakness, fatal to the person they love; their hate is a hot, rash, and imprudent violence, always fatal to themselves.

LOWD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 29 Sept., 1752.

Dissembled hate or varnished love.
DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis. St. 4.

The doctrine of hatred must be preached,
as the counteraction of the doctrine of love,
when that pules and whines.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

I hate all that don't love me, and slight all that do.

FARQUHAR, The Constant Couple. Act i, sc. 1.

If you hate a man, eat his bread; if you love him, do the same.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2756.

Violent antipathies are always suspicious, and betray a secret affinity.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Vol. i, p. 377.

He loos me for little that hates me for nought.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 379.

We've practiced loving long enough,
Let's come at last to hate.

(Wir haben lang genug geliebt, Und wollen endlich hassen.)

GEORG HERWEGH, Lied vom Hasse.

Who love too much, hate in the like extreme.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 79. (Pope, tr.)

If one judges love by its effects, it resembles hate more than affection. (Si on juge de l'amour par la plupart de ses effets, il resemble plus à la haine qu'à l'amitié.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 72.

The more one loves a mistress, the more one is ready to hate her. (Plus on aime une maîtresse, et plus on est prêt de la haïr.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 111.

There's nothing in this world so sweet as love,
And next to love the sweetest thing is hate.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act ii, sc. 5.

Nothing is more hateful than love.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 325.

The noblest hateful love that e'er I heard of.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iv, l. 33.

Where I love, I profess it; where I hate,
In every circumstance I dare proclaim it.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act i, sc. 1.

To love you was pleasant enough,
And, oh! 'tis delicious to hate you!

THOMAS MOORE, To —.

Any kiddie in school can love like a fool,
But hating, my boy, is an art.

OWEN NASH, Plea for Less Malice Toward Nones.

Thy sweet obligingness could supple hate,

And out of it, its contrary create.

JOHN OLIVIAM, To Charles Morwens, St. 17.

¹ I will hate, if I can: if not, I will unwillingly love. (Odero, si potero: si non, invitatus amabo.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 35.

What will you do in your hatred, when you are so cruel in your love? (Quid facies odio sic ubi amore nocet?)

OVID, Heroides. Epist. xxi, l. 56.

² Years of love have been forgot
In the hatred of a minute.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To —.

³ A woman either loves or hates; there is no third course. (Aut amat aut odit mulier; nihil est tertium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 6.

⁴ Hatreds are the cinders of affection.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Letter to Sir Robert Cecil, 10 May, 1593.

⁵ Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!
Yield up, O love, thy crown and hearted throne

To tyrannous hate! Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,

For 'tis of aspics' tongues.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 447.

⁶ Sweet love, I see, changing his property,
Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 135.

Here's much to do with hate, but more with love.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 1, 181.

My only love sprung from my only hate!
Too early seen unknown, and known too late!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 5, 140.

It is a greater grief

To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xi.

⁷ What medicine then can such disease remove,
Where love draws hate, and hate engendereth love?

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia, Bk. iii.

⁸ Let me arise and open the gate,
To breathe the wild warm air of the heath,
And to let in Love, and to let out Hate,
And anger at living, and scorn of Fate,
To let in Life, and to let out Death.

MARY M. SINGLETON, A Reverie.

⁹ Who cannot hate, can love not.

SWINBURNE, In the Bay. St. 31.

¹⁰ Dower'd with the hate of hate, the scorn of scorn,

The love of love.

TENNISON, The Poet.

In a wink the false love turns to hate.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 850.

¹¹ Here love returns with love to the lover,
And beauty unto the heart thereof,
And hatred unto the heart of the hater.

JOHN HALL WHELOCK, The Triumph of Love.

¹² She may strike the pouncing eagle, but she dares not harm the dove;

And every gate she bars to Hate shall open wide to Love!

J. G. WHITTIER, Brown of Osawatimie.

¹³ Love lights more fire than hate extinguishes,
And men grow better as the world grows old.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Optimism.

¹⁴ I've played the traitor Over and over;

I'm a good hater But a bad lover.

ELINOR WYLIE, Peregrine.

XXXIII—Love and Loss

¹⁵ Say what you will, 'tis better to be left than never to have been loved.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act ii, sc. 1.

Better be cheated to the last
Than lose the blessed hope of truth.

FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE, Faith.

¹⁶ Better to love amiss than nothing to have loved.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: The Struggles of Conscience, l. 46.

¹⁷ Far worse it is
To lose than never to have tasted bliss.
(Che mai
Non v'averè ò provate, ò possedute.)

GUARINI, Pastor Fido.

¹⁸ Methinks it is better that I should have pined away seven of my goldenest years, when I was thrall to the fair hair, and fairer eyes, of Alice W——n, than that so passionate a love adventure should be lost.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: New Year's Eve.

¹⁹ He who for love hath undergone
The worst that can befall,

Is happier thousandfold than one

Who never loved at all.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, To Myrsha: On Returning.

²⁰ I hold it true, whate'er befall;
I feel it, when I sorrow most;

'Tis better to have loved and lost

Than never to have loved at all.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxvii, st. 4.

'Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have lost at all.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, The Way of

All Flesh, Ch. 77. Usually misprinted "loved at all."

¹ It is best to love wisely, no doubt; but to love foolishly is better than not to be able to love at all.

THACKERAY, Pendennis, Ch. 6.

To love and win is the best thing; to love and lose the next best.

THACKERAY, Pendennis, Ch. 6.

² I fear to love thee, Sweet, because Love's the ambassador of loss.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, To Olivia.

XXXIV—Love and Death

³ Scarcely a tear to shed;
Hardly a word to say;

The end of a summer day;

Sweet Love dead.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, An Evening.

⁴ Oh, listen! Love lasts! Love will never die.
I am only your Angel, who was your Bride;
And I know, that though dead, I have never died.

EDWIN ARNOLD, She and He.

Though I am dead my soul shall love thee still.

JAMES HAMMOND, Elegies, No. xiii.

⁵ And a voice said in mastery, while I strove,—
"Guess now who holds thee?"—"Death," I said. But, there,

The silver answer rang,—"Not Death, but Love."

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese, No. i.

⁶ Can we love but on condition that the thing we love must die?

ROBERT BROWNING, La Saitias.

⁷ Cold in the dust this perished heart may lie,
But that which warmed it once shall never die!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope, Pt. ii, l. 429.

⁸ So blind is life, so long at last is sleep,
And none but Love to bid us laugh or weep.

WILLA CATHER, Evening Song.

⁹ A death for love's no death, but martyrdom.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Revenge for Honour, Act iv, sc. 2.

¹⁰ My love is dead, Gone to his death-bed,
All under the willow-tree!

CHATTERTON, Alba: The Minstrel's Song.

¹¹ Love, like death, a universal leveller of mankind.

CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer, Act ii, sc. 8.

Love either finds equality or makes it;
Like death, he knows no difference in degrees,

But planes and levels all.

DAYDEN, Marriage à la Mode, Act iii, sc. 1.

¹² Given thee back
To earth, to light and life, to love and me.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride, Act ii, sc. 2.

¹³ Life bears Love's cross, death brings Love's crown.

DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, Letties.

¹⁴ As I lay my heart on your dead heart, Douglas,

Douglas, Douglas, tender and true!

DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, Too Late.

O Douglas, O Douglas, Tender and trewe.
SIR RICHARD HOLLAND, Buke of the Howlat,
St. 31, (c. 1450) (PINKERTON, Collection of Scottish Poems, Vol. iii, p. 146.)

¹⁵ Love is anterior to life,
Posterior to death.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems, Pt. iii, No. 37.

¹⁶ He who dares love, and for that love must die,

And, knowing this, dares yet love on, am I.

DRYDEN, II Conquest of Granada, Act iv, sc. 3.

He that dares drink, and for that drink dares die,
And, knowing this, dares yet drink on, am I.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, Rehearsal, Act iv, sc. 1. Drawcansir, the burlesque tyrant in Buckingham's play, was a burlesque of Dryden's Almanzor in the Conquest of Granada.

¹⁷ I know not if it rains, my love,
In the land where you do lie;
And oh, so sound you sleep, my love,
You know no more than I.

A. E. HOUSMAN, The Half-Moon Waters Low.

¹⁸ I had rather live and love where death is king,
Than have eternal life where love is not.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Oration at a Child's Grave.

¹⁹ But great loves, to the last, have pulses red;
All great loves that have ever died dropped dead.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Dropped Dead.

²⁰ The grey-haired saint may fail at last,
The surest guide a wanderer prove;
Death only binds us fast
To the bright shore of love.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: 8th Sunday after Trinity.

²¹ If Love were jester at the court of Death,
And Death the king of all, still would I pray,

"For me the motley and the bauble, yes,
Though all be vanity, as the Preacher saith,

The mirth of love be mine for one brief breath!"

FREDRICK LAWRENCE KNOWLES, If Love Were Jester at the Court of Death.

AMELIA OTTE, The Pilgrim of Love, l. 6.

² They that love beyond the world cannot be separated by it. Death cannot kill what never dies.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

³ O Death, all-eloquent! you only prove What dust we dote on, when 'tis man we love.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 335.

⁴ Love is Life, and Death at last Crowns it eternal and divine.

ABELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Life in Death.

⁵ Methought I saw the grave where LAURA lay. SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Verses to Edmund Spenser.

⁶ If there be any one can take my place And make you happy whom I grieve to grieve, Think not that I can grudge it, but believe I do command you to that nobler grace, That readier wit than mine, that sweeter face.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Monna Innominata. Sonnet xii.

⁷ Tell me if the lovers are losers . . . tell me if any get more than the lovers . . . in the dust . . . in the cool tombs. CARL SANDBURG, Cool Tombs.

⁸ Men have died from time to time and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 107.

What mad lover ever dy'd,
To gain a soft and gentle bride?
Or for a lady tender-hearted,
In purling streams or hemp departed?

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. III, canto 1, l. 23.

I thought when love for you died, I should die. It's dead. Alone, most strangely, I live on.

RUPERT BROOKE, The Life Beyond.

For, heaven be thank'd, we live in such an age,
When no man dies for love, but on the stage.

DYDDEN, Epilogue: Mithridates.

⁹ Eyes, look your last!
Arms, take your last embrace! and lips, O you
The doorn of breath, seal with a righteous kiss

A dateless bargain to engrossing death.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 3, l. 113.

¹⁰ Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away, breath:
I am slain by a fair cruel maid.
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O, prepare it!
My part of death, no one so true
Did share it.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act li, sc. 4, l. 52.

¹¹ Love is strong as death.

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, viii, 6.

Love is greater than illusion, and as strong as death.

ALBERTO CASELLA, Death Takes a Holiday. Act iii.

Love, strong as death, the poet led.

POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day. St. 4.

She is more strong than death,
Being strong as love.

SWINBURNE, Madonna Mis.

Love can vanquish Death.

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women, l. 269.

¹² I loved you, and my love had no return,
And therefore my true love has been my death.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1268.

¹³ O that 'twere possible
After long grief and pain
To find the arms of my true love
Round me once again! . . .
Ah, Christ, that it were possible
For one short hour to see
The souls we loved, that they might tell us
What and where they be!

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. ii, sec. 4, l. 1.

¹⁴ I believe if I should die,
And you should kiss my eyelids where I lie
Cold, dead, and dumb to all the world contains,

The folded orbs would open at thy breath,
And from its exile in the Isles of Death
Life would come gladly back along my veins.

MARY ASHLEY TOWNSEND, Love's Belief.

¹⁵ My love lies in the gates of foam,
The last dear wreck of shore;
The naked sea-marsh binds her home,
The sand her chamber-door.

JOHN BYRNE LEICESTER WARREN (LORD OF TABLEY), The Churchyard on the Sands.

¹⁶ Love still is Nature's truth, and Death her lie.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, The Coming of Love: The Spirit of the Swains.

¹ Where indeed the greatest and most honorable love exists, it is much better to be joined by death than separated by life. (Ubi idem et maximus et honestissimus amor est, aliquanto præstat morte jungi, quam vita distrabi.)

VALERIUS MAXIMUS, De Factis Dictisque. Bk. iv, ch. 6, sec. 3.

² Life is ever lord of Death
And Love can never lose its own.

J. G. WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 211.

And yet, dear heart, remembering thee,
Am I not richer than of old?

Safe in thy immortality,

What change can reach the wealth I hold?

What chance can mar the pearl and gold

Thy love hath left in trust with me?

J. G. WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 422.

See also DEATH: THEY ARE ALL GONE.

³ I wish I were where Helen lies,
Nicht and day on me she cries;
Oh, that I were where Helen lies,
On fair Kirkconnel lee!

UNKNOWN, Helen of Kirkconnel Lee.

XXXV—Love: Its Fruition

⁴ Let us live, my Lesbia, and love, and value at a penny all the talk of crabbed old men. (Vivamus, mea Lesbia, atque amemus, Rumoresque senum severiorum Omnes unius estimemus assis.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode v, l. 1.

Live we, Lesbia, and love!
What though the greybeards disapprove!
Let them wag their toothless jaws!
Who cares a copper for their saws?

RICHARD HOVEY, To Lesbia.

⁵ When love is satisfied, all its charm is gone.
(À l'amour satisfait, tout son charme est ôté.)

CORNEILLE, Don Juan. Act i, sc. 2.

As soon as women belong to us, we no longer belong to them. (Soudain qu'elles sont à nous, nous ne sommes plus à elles.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Women enjoy'd (what'er before they've been)
Are like romances read, or sights once seen.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Against Fruition.

Plays and romances read and seen, do fall
In our opinions; yet not seen at all,
Whom would they please? To an heroic tale
Would you not listen, lest it should grow stale?

EDMUND WALLER, In Answer of Sir John Suckling's Verses.

⁶ Perfect love implies Love in all capacities.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Platonic Love.

⁷ Love's mysteries in souls do grow,

But yet the body is his book.

JOHN DONNE, The Ecstasy.

⁸ But she ne'er loved who durst not venture all.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act v, sc. 1.

Give all to love;
Obey thy heart;
Friends, kindred, days,
Estate, good-fame,
Plans, credit, and the Muse,—
Nothing refuse.

R. W. EMERSON, Give All to Love.

⁹ Love, while you are able to love. (O lieb, so lang du lieben kannst.)

FREILIGRATH, Der Liebe Dauer.

¹⁰ O'er her warm cheek and rising bosom move
The bloom of young Desire, and purple light of Love.

THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poesy. Pt. i, sec. 3. (Ἀδύρκει δ' ἐστὶν ἀποφύκτηται Παρρηγοῖαι φῶς ἔρωτος.—PHRYNICUS, Apud Athenæum.)

How beautiful she look'd! her conscious heart
Glow'd in her cheek, and yet she felt no wrong:
Oh love! how perfect is thy mystic art,
Strengthening the weak and trampling on the strong.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 106.

The light of love, the purity of grace,
The mind, the Music breathing from her face,
The heart whose softness harmonized the whole:
And, oh! that eye was in itself a Soul!

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, l. 178.

¹¹ There is no sorrow like a love denied
Nor any joy like love that has its will.

RICHARD HOVEY, The Marriage of Guinevere. Act i, sc. 3.

¹² When thou hast heard his name upon
The bugles of the cherubim,

Begin thou softly to unzone
Thy girlish bosom unto him,

And softly to undo the snood
That is the sign of maidenhood.

JAMES JOYCE, Bid Adieu to Girlish Days.

Did the harebell loose her girdle

To the lover bee,

Would the bee the harebell hallow

Much as formerly?

Did the paradise, persuaded,

Yield her moat of pearl,

Would the Eden be an Eden,

Or the earl an earl?

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. III, No. 28.

¹³ The reproduction of mankind is a great marvel and mystery. Had God consulted me in the matter, I should have advised him to continue the generation of the species by fashioning them of clay.

4 Let Wealth, let Honour, wait the wedded dame,
August her deed, and sacred be her fame;
Before true passion all those views remove;
Fame, Wealth, and Honour! what are you to Love?

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 77.

O happy state! when souls each other draw,

When Love is liberty, and Nature law.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 91.

One thought of thee puts all the pomp to flight,
Priests, tapers, temples, swim before my sight.

XXXVI—Love: Not Wisely But Too Well

See also Chastity; Woman: Her Virtue

7 Love shut our eyes, and all seemed right.

True, the world's eyes are open now:

—Less need for me to disallow

Some few that keep Love's zone unbuckled,

Peevish as ever to be suckled,

Lulled by the same old baby-prattle,

With intermixture of the rattle.

12 Now, no doubt, my friend and I

Will proceed to lie and lie

To ourselves, till we begin

To act the truth and call it sin.

But I wish that life were made

So that lovers, unafraid

Of heaven, hell, and gossip, could

Go their way and call it good.

Of one that loved not wisely but too well.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 343.

And I, what is my crime I cannot tell,

Unless it be a crime t' have lov'd too well.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Alexias. Eleg. iii, l. 19.

Sorry her lot who loves too well,

Heavy the heart that hopes but vainly.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

Is it, in Heav'n, a crime to love too well?

POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 6.

OVIN, Heroides. Epis. ii, l. 63.

For love deceives the best of womankind.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 463. (Pope, tr.)

For when success a lover's toil attends,

Few ask if fraud or force attain'd his ends.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 33.

But the thing that fills me with wonder, the thing
that's most strange to me,

Is, why do the moths and the butterflies always fall for the son of a bee?

GEORGE L. NORTH, A Tale of Two Bugs.

²
Love, to her ear, was but a name

Combined with vanity and shame.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto ii, st. 3.

³
The moonlight filled them both with sundry glamors,

Filtered silver in between white birches,

Blood whispered, like the stream, with urgent clamors,

And bells were struck that never rang in

⁶
A dear-lov'd lad, convenience snug,

A treach'rous inclination—

But, let me whisper if your lug,

Ye're aiblins nae temptation.

BURNS, Address to the Unco Guid. St. 6.

The caird prevail'd—th' unblushing fair

In his embraces sunk,

Partly wi' love o'ercome sae sair,

An' partly she was drunk.

BURNS, The Jolly Beggars: Recitative.

⁷
Love indeed (I may not deny) first united provinces, built cities, and by a perpetual generation makes and preserves mankind;

but if it rage it is no more love, but burning lust, a disease, frenzy, madness, hell. . .
It subverts kingdoms, overthrows cities, towns, families; mars, corrupts, and makes a massacre of men; thunder and lightning, wars, fires, plagues, have not done that mischief to mankind, as this burning lust, this brutish passion.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. 2, mem. 1, subs. 2.

⁸
For glances beget ogles, ogles sighs,

Sighs wishes, wishes words, and words a letter, . . .

And then, God knows what mischief may arise,

When love links two young people in one fetter,

Vile assignments, and adulterous beds,

Elopements, broken vows and hearts and heads.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 16.

For gentlemen must sometimes risk their skin

For that sad tempter, a forbidden woman:

Sultans too much abhor this sort of sin,

And don't agree at all with the wise Roman,

Heroic, stoic Cato, the sententious,

Who lent his lady to his friend Hortensius.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 7.

The stoic husband was the glorious thing.

The man had courage, was a sage, 'tis true,

And lov'd his country.

POPE, Jane Shore: Epilogue, l. 38.

⁹
For men have ever a likerous appetite

On lower thing to perform their delight

Than on their wives, be they never so fair,

Nor never so true, nor so debonair.

Flesh is so newfangel, with mischance,

That we can in no thing have plesaunce

That tendeth unto virtue any while.

CHAUCER, The Manciples Tale, l. 85.

¹⁰
He was, I trow, a twenty winter old,

And I was forty, if I shall say sooth;

But yet I had alway a coltes tooth.

Gat-toothed I was, and that became me well.

CHAUCER, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 600.

Your colt's-tooth is not cast yet.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 3, l. 48.

Her merry dancing-days are done;

She has a colt's tooth still, I warrant.

WILLIAM KING, Orpheus and Eurydice.

It is as safe to play with fire, as it is to dally with gallantry. Love is a passion that hath friends in the garrison.

Lord HALIFAX, Works, p. 31.

If anyone complains of not succeeding in affairs of gallantry, we will venture to say, it is because he is not gallant. He has mistaken his talent.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Round Table, Vol. i, p. 116.

To set your neighbor's bed a-shaking is now an ancient and long-established custom. It was the silver age that saw the first adulterers.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 21.

I've taken my fun where I've found it;
I've rogued an' I've ranged in my time;

I've 'ad my pickin' o' sweethearts,
An' four o' the lot was prime.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Ladies.

There's times when you'll think that you mightn't,
There's times when you'll know that you might;
But the things you will learn from the Yellow
an' Brown,

They'll 'elp you a lot with the White!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Ladies.

The new lust gives the lecher the new thrill.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Widow in the Bye Street.

The actors are, it seems, the usual three:
Husband, and wife, and lover.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 25.

Now, when I see an extra light,
Flaming, flickering on the night
From my neighbor's casement opposite,
I know as well as I know to pray,
I know as well as a tongue can say,
That the innocent Sultan Shah-Zaman
Has gone to the city Ispahan.

T. B. ALDRICH, When the Sultan Goes to Ispahan.

When Lust
By unchaste looks, loose gestures, and foul talk,

But most by lewd and lavish act of sin,
Lets in defilement to the inward parts,
The soul grows clotted by contagion,
Imbodies and imbrutes.

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 463.

Blemishes are hid by night and every fault forgiven; darkness makes any woman fair.
(Nocte latent mendæ, vitioque ignoscitur omni, Horaque formosam quamlibet illa

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 249.

Under the blanket the black one is as good as the white.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5396.

Joan is as good as my lady in the dark.

DUCHESS OF NEWCASTLE, Sociable Companions, ii, 4; CHARLES SHADWELL, Irish Hospitality,
i, 1.

Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue and groan
Some men must love my lady and some Joan.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii
sc. 1, l. 206.

Were it not for imagination, Sir, a man woul be as happy in the arms of a chambermaid as o a Duchess.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 341.)

Mr. Pickle himself . . . was a mere drago among the chambermaids.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 82.

Neither let the love of a servant-maid be re garded as a disgrace. (Ne sit ancillæ amor pu dori.)

THACKERAY, Fitz-Boodle's Confessions. Quotec as from "a notorious poet": i.e., Ovid, *Ars
Amatoria*, ii, 251.

As stolen love is pleasant to a man, so is it also to a woman; the man dissembles badly:
she conceals desire more cleverly. (Utque viro furtiva venus, sic grata puellæ: Vir male dissimulat: tectius illa cupit.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 274.

Let every lover be pale; that is the color which

Lust, thro' some certain strainers well refin'd,
Is gentle love, and charms all womankind.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 189.

There goes a saying, and 'twas shrewdly said,
Old fish at table, but young flesh in bed.
My soul abhors the tasteless dry embrace
Of a stale virgin with a winter face.

POPE, January and May, l. 101.

Give me a willing nymph! 'tis all I care,
Extremely clean, and tolerably fair,
Her shape her own, whatever shape she have,
And just that white and red which nature gave.

POPE, A Sermon Against Adultery, l. 161.

To be carnally minded is death.

NEW TESTAMENT: Romans, viii, 6.

¹ Take back your gold, for gold can never buy me,
Take back your bribe, and promise you'll be true;
Give me the love, the love that you'd deny me;

⁷ Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun;
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain,

Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done:
Love surfeits not. Lust like a glutton dies;
Love is all truth, Lust full of forged lies.

18 It is the superfluous things for which men sweat. (Ad supervacua sudatur.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epist. iv, 11.

Superfluous things like these: doubtless the man who first called them "hindrances" had a prophetic foresight. (Quæ sine dubio talia divinavit futura, quæ nunc sunt, qui primus appellavit "impedimenta.")

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epist. lxxvii, 11.

19 The want of necessities is always . . . accompanied by the envious longing for superfluities.

SOLOON. (Orwell, Opuscula Græcorum Veterum, i, 168.)

20 Falsely luxurious! will not man awake?

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 67.

21 Most of the luxuries, and many of the so-called comforts of life, are not only not indispensable, but positive hindrances to the elevation of mankind.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

M

MACAULAY, THOMAS BABINGTON

1 As soon as I had time to look at my neighbour, . . . I settled that he was some obscure man of letters or of medicine, perhaps a cholera doctor. . . . Having thus settled my opinion, I went on eating my dinner, when Auckland, who was sitting opposite to me, addressed my neighbour, "Mr. Macaulay, will you drink a glass of wine?" I thought I should have dropped off my chair. It was MACAULAY, the man I had been so long most curious to see and to hear, whose genius, eloquence, astonishing knowledge, and diversified talents have excited my wonder and admiration, . . . and here I had been sitting next to him, hearing him talk, and setting him down for a dull fellow.

CHARLES C. F. GREVILLE, Memoirs, Pt. i, 6 Feb., 1832.

I never was more struck than upon this occasion by the inexhaustible variety and extent of his [Macaulay] information. . . . It is impossible to mention any book in any language with which he is not familiar; to touch upon any subject, whether relating to persons or things, on which he does not know everything that is to be known.

GREVILLE, Memoirs, Pt. ii, 21 Jan., 1841.

2 Macaulay is like a book in breeches. . . . He has occasional flashes of silence, that make his conversation perfectly delightful.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, Vol. i, p. 363.)

To take Macaulay out of literature and society and put him in the House of Commons, is like taking the chief physician out of London during a pestilence.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, Vol. i, p. 265.)

3 I wish I was as sure of anything as Macaulay is of everything.

WILLIAM WINDHAM.

MACHINERY

4 It is the Age of Machinery, in every outward and inward sense of that word.

CARLYLE, Signs of the Times.

5 The mystery of mysteries is to view machines making machines.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby Bk. iv, ch. 2.

6 Things are in the saddle and ride mankind.

EMERSON, Ode.

7 The machine unmakes the man. Now that the machine is so perfect, the engineer is nobody.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

What I ha' seen since ocean steam began Leaves me no doot for the machine: but what about the man?

RUDYARD KIPLING, McAndrew's Hymn.

8 Armed with his machinery man can dive, can fly, can see atoms like a gnat; he can peer into Uranus with his telescope, or knock down cities with his fists of gunpowder.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Resources.

9 One machine can do the work of fifty ordinary men. No machine can do the work of one extraordinary man.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, Vol. xviii, p. 26.

10 Don't throw a monkey-wrench into the machinery.

PRILANDER JOHNSON, (Everybody's Magazine, May, 1920, p. 36.)

11 It is never the machines that are dead. It is only the mechanically-minded men that are dead.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds, Pt. ii, ch. 5.

Machinery is the sub-conscious mind of the world.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds, Pt. ii, ch. 8.

12 It is questionable if all the mechanical inventions yet made have lightened the day's toil of any human being.

J. S. MILL, Principles of Political Economy.

Without doubt machinery has greatly increased the number of well-to-do idlers.

KARL MARX, Capital.

13 Machines are worshipped because they are beautiful, and valued because they confer power; they are hated because they are hideous, and loathed because they impose slavery.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 83.

14 You're not a man, you're a machine.

BERNARD SHAW, Arms and the Man, Act III.

15 There will be little drudgery in this better ordered world. Natural power harnessed in machines will be the general drudge.

H. G. WELLS, Outline of History, Ch. xii, par. 4.

All their devices for cheapening labour simply resulted in increasing the burden of labour.

WILLIAM MORRIS, News from Nowhere, p. 131.

McKINLEY, WILLIAM

16 The bullet that pierced Goebel's breast
Cannot be found in all the West;

Good reason; it is speeding here [to Washington]

To stretch McKinley on his bier.

AMERSON BIRNEY, New York Journal, February 4, 1901. Basis of Roosevelt's denunciation of William Randolph Hearst as instigator of McKinley's assassination. (See SULLIVAN, "Our Times," II, 280.)

If had institutions and bad men can be got rid of only by killing, then the killing must be done. Editorial in N. Y. Evening Journal, April 10, 1901, attacking President McKinley.

Where is McKinley, Mark Hanna's McKinley,

His slave, his echo, his suit of clothes?

VACHEL LINDSAY, Bryan, Bryan, Bryan.

In his [McKinley's] photographs he is always the same. He would never consent to be photographed in a negligent pose, and always took the most meticulous care about every detail of his appearance and his posture. He embalmed himself, so far as posterity is concerned.

C. W. THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p. 16.

EURIPIDES, Fragment. (Boswell, Life of Johnson, 1783. Note.)

Whom God would destroy, he first makes mad.
(Quem deus vult perdere, prius dementat.)
The Latin version of the Greek maxim, based probably on Euripides, though Plutarch (De Audiend. Poet., 106) has preserved the adage as a fragment of Æschylus.

Though rashness can hope for but one result,
We are heedless, when fate draws nigh us;
And the maxim holds good, Quem perdere vult Deus, dementat prius.

ADAM LINDSAY GORDON, Ye Wearie Wayfarer.

IV—Madness: Its Terrors

Babylon in ruins is not so melancholy a spectacle.

ANDERSON, The Spectator. No. 421.

Babylon in all its desolation is a sight not so awful as that of the human mind in ruins.

S. B. DAVIES, Letter to Thomas Reikes, 25 May, 1835.

Today I had a strange warning. I felt the wing of insanity brush my mind.

CHARLES BAUDELAIRE, Journal, 23 Jan., 1862.

No skill in swordsmanship, however just,
Can be secure against a madman's thrust.
COWPER, Charity, l. 309.

I stept into Bedlam, where I saw several poor miserable creatures in chains; one of them was mad with making verses.

JOHN EVELYN, Diary, 21 April, 1657.

The present state of insane persons, confined within this commonwealth, in cages, closets, cellars, stalls, pens! Chained, naked, beaten with rods, and lashed into obedience.

DOROTHEA LYNDY DIX, Memorial to the Legislature of Massachusetts, 1843, p. 4.

I have myself seen more than nine thousand idiots, epileptics and insane in the United States . . . bound with galling chains, bowed beneath fetters, lacerated with ropes, scourged with rods.

DOROTHEA LYNDY DIX, First petition to Congress. (Senate Misc. Doc., No. 150, 30 Cong. 1st Sess.)

O hark! what mean these yells and cries?

His chain some furious madman breaks;

He comes—I see his glaring eyes;

Now, now, my dungeon grate he shakes.

Help! help!—He's gone! O fearful woe!

Such screams to hear, such sights to see!

My brain, my brain!—I know, I know

I am not mad, but soon shall be.

MATTHEW GREGORY LEWIS, The Maniac.

Mad in the judgment of the mob, sane, perhaps, in yours. (Demens Judicio vulgi, sanus fortasse tuo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 6, l. 97.

Much madness is divinest sense

To a discerning eye;

Much sense the starkest madness.

'Tis the majority

In this, as all, prevails

Assent, and you are sane;

Demur,—you're straightway dangerous,

And handled with a chain.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 11.

Not so much of thee is left among us

As the hum outliving the hushed bell.

J. R. LOWELL, The Darkened Mind. Referring to his mother, who had become insane.

Demoniac frenzy, moping melancholy,

And moon-struck madness.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xl, l. 435.

Of all mad creatures, if the learn'd are rigid,

It is the slaver kills, and not the bite.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 105.

That he is mad, 't is true: 't is true 't is pity;

And pity 't is 't is true.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 97.

O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven!

Keep me in temper: I would not be mad!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 5, l. 50.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Brennoralt. Act ii, sc.
1.
- 11
A simple maiden in her flower
Is worth a hundred coats-of-arms.
TENNYSON, Lady Clara Vere de Vere.
- Mother, a maiden is a tender thing.
And best by her that bore her understood.
TENNYSON, The Marriage of Geraint, l. 510.
- 12
The sweetest gariand to the sweetest maid.
THOMAS TICKELL, To a Lady with a Present of Flowers.
- 13
Glass and a maid are ever in danger.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, 304.
- Glasses and lasses are brittle ware.
A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, 4.
- 14
And never maiden stoops to him
Who lifts himself to her.
WHITTIER, Amy Wentworth.
- 15
A maid should be seen but not heard.
UNKNOWN, Mirk's Festival, 230. (c. 1400)
- Little gells must be seen and not heard.
GEORGE ELIOT, Janet's Repentance. Ch. 8.
- Maidens must be mild and meek,
Swift to hear and slow to speak.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6410.
- Maidens should be mhm till they're married.
BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 93.
- A maiden hath no tongue but thought.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 8.
- 16
My son, I've travelled round the world
And many maids I've met:
There are two kinds you should avoid—
The blonde and the brunette.
UNKNOWN, A Warning.

MAIDENHOOD

- 17
A damsel with a dulcimer
In a vision once I saw:

It was an Abyssinian maid,
And on her dulcimer she played,
Singing of Mount Abora.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Kubla Khan, l. 37.

She's neither proud nor saucy yet,
She's neither plump nor gaucy yet;
But just a jinking,

Bonny blinking,
Hilly-skilly lassie yet.

JAMES HOGG, My Love She's but a Lassie Yet.

She stood breast-high amid the corn,
Clasp'd by the golden light of morn,
Like the sweetheart of the sun,
Who many a glowing kiss had won.
HOOD, Ruth.

Maiden! with the meek, brown eyes,
In whose orbs a shadow lies
Like the dusk in evening skies!

Thou whose locks outshine the sun,
Golden tresses, wreathed in one,
As the braided streamlets run!

Standing, with reluctant feet,
Where the brook and river meet,
Womanhood and childhood meet!
LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood.

Bear a lily in thy hand;
Gates of brass cannot withstand
One touch of that magic wand.
LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood.

She walks—the lady of my delight—
A shepherdess of sheep.
Her flocks are thoughts. She keeps them
white;

She guards them from the steep.
She feeds them on the fragrant height,
And folds them in for sleep.
ALICE MEYNELL, The Shepherdess.

The rare and radiant maiden, whom the angels name Lenore—
Nameless here for evermore.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven.

She dwelt among the untrodden ways
Beside the springs of Dove,
A maid whom there were none to praise
And very few to love.
WORDSWORTH, Lucy. Pt. II.

MAJORITY AND MINORITY

When bad men combine, the good must associate; else they will fall one by one, an un-pitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle.
EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents.

To be in the weakest camp is to be in the strongest school.

C. K. CHRISTERTON, Heretics.

A majority is always the best repartee.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. II, ch. 14.

Shall we judge a country by the majority, or by the minority? By the minority, surely.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

All history is a record of the power of minorities, and of minorities of one.

EMERSON, *Letters and Social Aims: Progress
of Culture*.

That cause is strong which has not a multitude,
but one strong man behind it.

J. R. LOWELL, Address, Chelsea, Mass., 22 Dec., 1885.

Decision by majorities is as much an expedient as lighting by gas.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, House of Commons,
21 Jan., 1858.

The oppression of a majority is detestable and odious: the oppression of a minority is only by one degree less detestable and odious.
GLADSTONE, Speech, House of Commons, 1870,
on Irish Land Bill.

The most dangerous foe to truth and freedom in our midst is the compact majority. Yes, the damned, compact, liberal majority.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act IV.

The only tyrannies from which men, women and children are suffering in real life are the tyrannies of minorities.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, New York City,
20 March, 1912.

The great mass of the people are in more danger of having their rights invaded and their liberties destroyed by the overbearing influence of organized minorities, who have fanatical or selfish interests to serve, than by the force of an unthinking or cruel majority.

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, *Drifting Sands of Party
Politics*, p. 6.

Minority is no disproof:
Wisdom is not so strong and fleet
As never to have known defeat.

LAURENCE HOUBMAN, Advocatus Diaboli.

The minority is always in the right.
HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act IV.

The majority never has right on its side.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act IV.

The opinion of the majority is not the final proof of what is right. (Nicht Schlimmenmehrheit ist des Rechtes Probe.)

SCHILLER. (Quoted by H. D. SZCZOWICZ, in Praise of Gentlemen. Title page.)

When great changes occur in history, when great principles are involved, as a rule the majority are wrong.

EUGENE V. DEBS, Speech, at trial, Cleveland,
O., 12 Sept., 1918.

The fact disclosed by a survey of the past that majorities have been wrong, must not blind us to the complementary fact that majorities have usually not been entirely wrong.

HERBERT SPENCER, First Principles, Ch. 1, sec. 1.

1 If by the mere force of numbers a majority should deprive a minority of any clearly written constitutional right, it might, in a moral point of view, justify revolution—certainly would if such a right were a vital one.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1861.

2 Safer with multitudes to stray,
Than tread alone a fairer way:
To mingle with the erring throng,
Than boldly speak ten millions wrong.

ROBERT NUGENT, Epistle to a Lady. See also PEOPLE: APOTHEGMS.

3 One, of God's side, is a majority.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech on John Brown, Harper's Ferry, 1 Nov., 1859.

One, with God, is always a majority, but many a martyr has been burned at the stake while the votes were being counted.

THOMAS B. REED, (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

4 Governments exist to protect the rights of minorities. The loved and the rich need no protection,—they have many friends and few enemies.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Address, Boston, 21 Dec., 1860.

5 How a minority,
Reaching majority,
Seizing authority,
Hates a minority!

LEONARD H. ROBBINS, Minorities.

6 A majority, with a good cause, are negligent and supine.

SWIFT, Letter to a Member of Parliament in Ireland, 1708.

THE SILENT MAJORITY, see under DEATH.

MALICE

Malice bears down truth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 214.

¹ Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 342.

No levell'd malice
Infects one comma in the course I hold.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 1,
l. 47.

² Wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 63.

Much malice mingl'd with a little wit.

DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. III, l. 1.

³ The malice of a good thing is the barb that makes it stick.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act i, sc. 1.

⁴ Yet malice never was his aim;
He lashed the vice, but spared the name.
No individual could resent,
Where thousands equally were meant.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 523.

To spare the persons, but to publish the crimes.
(Parcere personis, dicere de villis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. xxxiii, l. 10.

⁵ There is such malice in men as to rejoice in misfortunes, and from another's woes to draw delight.

TERENCE, Andria. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 1.

Ah yet, we cannot be kind to each other here
for an hour;

We whisper and hint, and chuckle, and grin at a brother's shame.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. I, sec. 4, st. 5.

⁶ Malice . . . the basest of all instincts, passions, vices—the most hateful.

MAN

I—Man: Definitions

¹⁴ Good Lord, what is man? for as simple he looks,

Do but try to develop his hooks and his crooks!

With his depths and his shallows, his good and his evil;

All in all he's a problem must puzzle the devil.

BURNS, Inscribed to the Hon. C. J. Fox.

Are we a piece of machinery that, like the Æolian harp, passive, takes the impression of the passing accident? Or do these workings argue something within us above the trodden clod?

BURNS, Letter to Mrs. Dunlop, 1 Jan., 1789.

¹⁵ Admire, exult—despise—laugh, weep,—for here

There is such matter for all feeling:—Man!
Thou pendulum betwixt a smile and tear.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 109.

For ours is a most fictile world, and man is the most fingeat plastic of creatures.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. 1, bk. i, ch. 2.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. No. 408.

² Man is the genuine offspring of revolt.
Cowper, Hope, l. 183.

³ A Being, erect upon two legs, and bearing all the outward semblance of a man, and not of a monster.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

A wonderful fact to reflect upon that every human creature is constituted to be that profound secret and mystery to every other.

DICKENS, A Tale of Two Cities. Ch. 3.

The subtle man is immeasurably easier to understand than the natural man.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Robert Browning. Ch. 1.

⁴ Man is not order of nature, sack and sack, belly and members, link in a chain, nor any ignominious baggage, but a stupendous antagonism, a dragging together of the poles of the Universe.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

A man is the whole encyclopedia of facts. The creation of a thousand forests is in one acorn, and Egypt, Greece, Rome, Gaul, Britain, America, lie folded already in the first man.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

A man is a bundle of relations, a knot of roots, whose flower and fruitage is the world.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

Every man of us has all the centuries in him.

JOHN MORLEY, Life of Gladstone. Vol. i, p. 201.

⁵ Every man is an impossibility until he is born.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

A man is a golden impossibility. The line he must walk is a hair's breadth.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

A man is like a bit of Labrador spar, which has no lustre as you turn it in your hand until you come to a particular angle; then it shows deep and beautiful colors.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

⁶ A man is a god in ruins.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Nature. Ch. 8, Prospects. Quoted.

One definition of man is "an intelligence served by organs."

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

Men are all inventors sailing forth on a voyage of discovery.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Resources.

⁷ Man is a little soul carrying around a corpse.
(Ψυχήδιον εἰ βαστάζον νεκρόν.)

¹² Man is a machine into which we put what we call food and produce what we call thought.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Gods.

¹³ Limited in his nature, infinite in his desires, man is a fallen god who remembers the heavens.

LAMARTINE, Méditations. Ser. ii.

¹⁴ Man is a torch, then ashes soon,
May and June, then dead December,
Dead December, then again June.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Chinese Nightingale.

¹⁵ This Being of mine, whatever it be, consists of a little flesh, a little breath, and the part which governs. ("Ὁ τίς μοι τούτῳ εἶμι, σαρκὶς καὶ πνεύματος καὶ τὸ ἡγεμονικόν.")

¹⁶ This many-headed, divers-armed, and furiously-raging monster is man; wretched, weak and miserable man: whom, if you consider well, what is he, but a crawling, and ever-moving ants'-nest?

MONTAGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

What a chimera, then, is man! What a novelty! What a monster, what a chaos, what a contradiction, what a prodigy! Judge of all things, feeble worm of the earth, depository of truth, a sink of uncertainty and error, the glory and the shame of the universe.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. vii, No. 434.

¹⁷ A pilgrim panting for the rest to come;
An exile, anxious for his native home;
A drop dis severed from the boundless sea;
A moment parted from eternity.

HANNAH MORE, Reflections of King Hezekiah, l. 129.

O man, strange composite of heaven and earth!
Majesty dwarf'd to baseness! fragrant flower
Running to poisonous seed! and seeming worth
Cloaking corruption! weakness mastering power!

Who never art so near to crime and shame,
As when thou hast achieved some deed of name!
JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, The Dream of Gerontius, l. 291.

1 Man is a rope connecting animal and superman,—a rope over a precipice. . . . What is great in man is that he is a bridge and not a goal.

NIETZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra. Sec. 4.

2 Man's the bad child of the universe.
JAMES OFFENHEIM, Laughter.

3 Placed on this isthmus of a middle state,
A being darkly wise and rudely great:
With too much knowledge for the Sceptic side,
With too much weakness for the Stoic's pride, . . .

Alike in ignorance, his reason such,
Whether he thinks too little or too much;
Chaos of thought and passion, all confused;
Still by himself abused or disabused;
Created half to rise, and half to fall;
Great lord of all things, yet a prey to all;
Sole judge of truth, in endless error hurl'd;
The glory, jest, and riddle of the world!

SWIFT, A Meditation upon a Broomstick.

11 Before the beginning of years,
There came to the making of man
Time, with a gift of tears;
Grief, with a glass that ran;

Pleasure, with pain for heaven;
Summer, with flowers that fell;
Remembrance fallen from heaven,
And madness risen from hell;
Strength without hands to smite;
Love that endures for a breath;

iii, sc. 3, l. 23.

III—Man: An Animal

1 Man is a noble animal, splendid in ashes, and pompous in the grave, solemnizing natiivities and deaths with equal lustre, not omitting ceremonies of bravery, in the infamy of his nature

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5.

In brief, we all are monsters, that is, a composition of man and beast.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 55.

2 Man is a tool-using animal.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 5.

Man is a tool-making animal

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN. (BOSWELL, Life of John- son.)

3 But what a thoughtless animal is man!

WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated
Verse, l. 252.

4 Man is the most intelligent of animals—and the most silly

DIÖGENES (DIÖGENES LAËRTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 24.)

5 How dull, and how insensible a beast

Is man, who yet would loid it o'er the rest!

DRYDEN, Essay upon Satire, l. 1.

Man is a brute, without the brute's rough tongue
And woodland death that kills without a sound
None can be sure from what the race is sprung:
Its virtue is, it must go underground.

ARTHUR FIELD, War.

6 Every man has a wild beast within him.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Letter to Voltaire, 1759

7 Man is a make-believe animal—he is never so truly himself as when he is acting a part.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Notes of a Journey through
France and Italy, p. 246.

8 Man is a toad-eating animal

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Political Essays: On the Connection between Toad-Eaters and Ty-
rants.

9 Man,—the aristocrat amongst the animals.

HEINE, Wit, Wisdom, and Pathos: Italy.

10 Man is an imitative animal. This quality is the germ of all education in him. From his cradle to his grave he is learning to do what he sees others do.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. ii, p. 225.

11 Man is the only animal which spits.

DONALD A. LAIRD, There Is a Lot to Just Sit- ting or Standing (Scientific American, Nov., 1928.)

12 Man is a gaming animal.

CHARLES LOMB, Essays of Elia: Mrs. Battle's
Opinions on Whist.

13 Man is the plumeless genus of bipeds, birds are the plumed.

PLATO, Politicus. Sec. 266.

Plato had defined man as an animal, biped and featherless, and was applauded. Diogenes plucked a fowl, and brought it into the lecture room with the words, "Here is Plato's man." In consequence of which there was added to the definition, "having broad nads."

DIÖGENES LAËRTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 40.

That unfeather'd two-legged thing, a son.

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 170.

14 What is a man

If his chief good, and market of his time,
Be but to sleep and feed? A beast, no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 33.

15 Man is the only animal that esteems itself rich in proportion to the number and voracity of its parasites

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

16 Man, an animal which makes bargains.

ADAM SMITH, The Wealth of Nations.

17 Man is a beast when shame stands off from him.

SWINBURNE, Phædra: Hippolytus.

18 Man is the only animal that blushes. Or needs to

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Cal-
cendar.

19 The only laughing animal is man.

WILLIAM WHITEHEAD, On Ridicule, l. 2.

For smiles from reason flow, To brute denied.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 239.

Man is the only animal that laughs and weeps; for he is the only animal that is struck with the difference between what things are, and what they ought to be.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English
Comic Writers. Lect. 1.

Aye, think! since time and life began,
Your mind has only feared and slept;

Of all the beasts they called you man
Only because you toiled and wept.

ASTURO GIOVANNETTI, The Thinker: The Statue
by Rodin.

¹ Man is the only animal that eats when he is not hungry, drinks when he is not thirsty, and makes love at all seasons.

UNKNOWN. (Bookman, April, 1932, p. 137.)

IV—Man: A Bubble

See also Life: A Bubble; World: A Bubble

² What's he, born to be sick, so always dying,
That's guided by inevitable fate;
That comes in weeping, and that goes out crying;

Whose calendar of woes is still in date;
Whose life's a bubble, and in length a span;
A concert still in discords? 'Tis a man.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Britannia's Pastorals. Bk. i, song 2, l. 192.

³ The not-incurious in God's handiwork
(This man's-flesh he hath admirably made,
Blown like a bubble, kneaded like a paste,
To coop up and keep down on earth a space
That puff of vapour from his mouth, man's soul).

ROBERT BROWNING, An Epistle: Karshish, l. 2.

A drop in Ocean's boundless tide, unfathom'd waste of agony;

Where millions live their horrid lives by making other millions die.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. iii, st. 20.

⁴ The bubble winked at me, and said,
"You'll miss me, brother, when you're dead."
OLIVER HAZARD, Toast: The Bubble Winked.

⁵ Like to the falling of a Star;
Or as the flights of Eagles are;
Or like the fresh Spring's gaudy hue;
Or silver drops of morning Dew;
Or like a Wind that chafes the flood;
Or Bubbles which on water stood;
Even such is Man, whose borrow'd light
Is straight call'd in, and paid to night.

The Wing blows out; the Bubble dies;
The Spring entomb'd in Autumn lies;
The Dew dries up; the Star is shot;
The Flight is past; and Man forgot.

HENRY KING (?), Sic Vita (Poems, 1657). These lines were included in Francis Beaumont's Poems, published in 1640; nevertheless the evidence as to their authorship favors Bishop King, whose verses were circulated in manuscript form long before they were collected and printed. For further discussion of authorship, and examples of imitations, see APPENDIX.

Like the dew on the mountain,
Like the foam on the river,
Like the bubble on the fountain,
Thou art gone, and for ever!

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto III, st. 16.

⁶ A man is a bubble, said the Greek proverb (ἄνθρωπος ὡς ἀφρός) . . . descending from

God and the dew of heaven, from a tear and a drop of rain.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying. Ch. i, sec. 1.

How we bladders of wind strut about. We are meaner than flies; flies have their virtues, but we are nothing but bubbles. (Uires inflati ambulamus. Minoris quam musce sumus, muscæ tamen aliquam virtutem habent, nos non plura sumus quam bulle.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 42. The last phrase is a proverb used by many writers, among them: VARRO, De Re Rustica: Preface; SENECA, Apocryntosis; LUCAN, Charron; and ERASMUS, Adagia.

Like bubbles on the sea of matter borne,
They rise, they break, and to that sea return.

POPE, Essay on Man. Ep. iii, l. 19.

⁷ For what are men who grasp at praise sublime,
But bubbles on the rapid stream of time,
That rise, and fall, that swell, and are no more,
Born, and forgot, ten thousand in an hour?

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 285.

V—Man: A Child

⁸ What is man? A foolish baby;
Vainly strives, and fights, and frets:
Demanding all, deserving nothing,
One small grave is all he gets.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Cui Bono.

⁹ Men are but children of a larger growth;
Our appetites are apt to change as theirs,
And full as craving too, and full as vain.

DRYDEN, All for Love. Act iv, sc. 1.

¹⁰ Man to the last is but a froward child;
So eager for the future, come what may,
And to the present so insensible!

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Reflections.

¹¹ They are but children, too; though they have gray hairs, they are, indeed, children of a larger size.

SENECA, De Ira. Sec. 8.

¹² Man is a restless thing: still vain and wild,
Lives beyond sixty, nor outgrows the child.

ISAAC WATTS, To the Memory of T. Gunston, Esq., l. 189.

VI—Man: A Shadow

¹³ Dark fluxion, all unfixable by thought,
A phantom dim of past and future wrought,
Vain sister of the worm—life, death, soul, clod—
Ignore thyself, and strive to know thy God!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Self-Knowledge.

¹⁴ We are spirits clad in veils;
Man by man was never seen;
All our deep communing fails
To remove the shadowy screen.

CATHERINE PEARSE CRANCH, Ghosts.

¹ We are dust and shadow. (Pulvis et umbra sumus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 16.

² Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils.

Old Testament: Isaiah, ii, 22.

³ We are none other than a moving row
Of Magic Shadow-shapes that come and go Round with the Sun-illuminated Lantern held
In Midnight by the Master of the Show.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 68. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

⁴ Man is but breath and shadow, nothing more.
(Ἀνθρώπος ἐστὶν πνεῦμα καὶ σκία μόνον.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragment: Ajax Locutus. No. 13.

⁵ Man is a substance clad in shadows.

JOHN STEELING, Essays and Tales: Thoughts.

⁶ Fond man! the vision of a moment made!
Dream of a dream! and shadow of a shade!
YOUNG, Paraphrase of Job xxxviii, l. 187.

VII—Man: The Image of God

⁷ God in making man intended by him to reduce all His Works back again to Himself.

MATTHEW BARKER, Natural Theology, p. 85.

God made man merely to bear some praise
Of what He'd done on those Five Days.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Fons et Origo.

⁸ It is not fit that men should be compared with gods. (Nec divis homines componier equumst.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxviii, l. 141.

Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels.

Old Testament: Psalms, viii, 5.

Men are not angels, neither are they brutes.

BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Every man is as God made him, ay, and often worse.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 4.

God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 2, l. 60.

⁹ 'Twas much, that man was made like God before,
But, that God should be made like man, much more.

JOHN DONNE, Holy Sonnets. No. xv.

¹⁰ So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him.

Old Testament: Genesis, i, 27.

Man is God's image; but a poor man is Christ's stamp to boot.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 64.

¹¹ And first the golden race of speaking men
Were by the dwellers in Olympus made;
They under Cronos lived, when he was king
In heaven. Like gods were they, with careless mind,
From toil and sorrow free, and nought they knew

Of dread old age.

HERIOD, Works and Days, l. 109.

¹² There wanted yet the master work, the end
Of all yet done; a creature who, not prone
And brute as other creatures, but endued
With sanctity of reason, might erect
His stature, and upright with front serene Govern the rest, self-knowing, and from thence

Magnanimous to correspond with Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 505.

Thus while the mute creation downward bend
Their sight, and to their earthy mother tend,
Man looks aloft, and with erected eyes
Beholds his own hereditary skies.
(Pronaque quum spectent animalia cætera terram,

Os homini sublime dedit, cælumque tueri
Jussit, et erectos ad sidera tollere vultus.)

OVIN, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 24. (Dryden, tr., l. 106.)

¹³ What a wonderful privilege to have the weakness of a man and the serenity of a god!
(Ecce res magna, habere inbecillitatem hominis, securitatem dei.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliū. Epist. iii, sec. 12.

Let each man think himself an act of God,
His mind a thought, his life a breath of God.

P. J. BAXLEY, Festus: Proems, l. 163.

¹⁴ For a man is not as God,
But then most Godlike being most a man.

¹⁷ Mankind are earthen jugs with spirits in them.

HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 1842.

¹⁸ A vase is begun; why, as the wheel goes round, does it turn out a pitcher? (Amphora cepit Institut: currente rota cur urceus exit?)

HORACE, Art Poetica, l. 21.

1 Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it,
What makest thou?

Old Testament: Isaiah, xlv, 9.

2 Upon the potter's flying wheel the clay
Knows not the purpose of its plastic day;
So we upon the blindly-whirling sphere
Are shaped to ends which do not yet appear.

JAMES B. KENYON, The Potter's Clay.

3 For I remember stopping by the way
To watch a Potter thumbing his wet Clay:
And with its all-obiterated Tongue
It murmured—"Gently, Brother, gently, pray!"

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubāiyāt. St. 37. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

Said one among them—"Surely not in vain
My substance of the common Earth was ta'en
And to this Figure moulded, to be broke,
Or trampled back to shapeless Earth again."

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubāiyāt. St. 84. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

The shatter'd bowl shall know repair; the riven lute shall sound once more;
But who shall mend the clay of man, the stolen breath to man restore?

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix, st. 40.

4 Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour?

New Testament: Romans, ix, 21.

After a momentary silence spake
Some Vessel of a more ungainly make:
"They sneer at me for leaning all awry:
What! did the Hand then of the Potter shake?"

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubāiyāt. St. 86. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

All this of Pot and Potter—Tell me then,
Who is the Potter, pray, and who the Pot?

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubāiyāt. St. 87. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

5 I have thought some of Nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 38.

6 Not for this
Was common clay ta'en from the common earth,
Moulded by God, and temper'd with the tears
Of angels to the perfect shape of man.

IX—Man: His Growth

7 What? Was man made a wheel-work to wind up,

And be discharged, and straight wound u anew?

No! grown, his growth lasts; taught, he ne'e forgets;

May learn a thousand things, not twice th same.

sec. 4.

10
O how contemptible a thing is man unless he can raise himself above humanity. (O quam contempta res est homo nisi supra humana se erexerit.)

SENECA, Naturales Quaestiones. Bk. I, Preface.

"Oh, what a vile and abject thing is man, unless he can erect himself above humanity." Here is a bon mot and a useful desire, but equally absurd.
For to make the handful bigger than the hand, the armful bigger than the arm, and to hope to stride further than the stretch of our legs, is impossible and monstrous.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. II, ch. 12.

Unless above himself he can
Erect himself, how poor a thing is man.

XII—Men: Most Men Are Bad

³ Most men are bad. (Οι πολλοὶ κακοί.)

BIAS OF PRIENE, one of the seven wise men of Greece, who lived about 566 a. c. The phrase is said to have been inscribed on the wall of the temple at Delphi. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bias, Sec. 88. AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 189.) Ausonius Latinizes it: Plures mali.

By "bad" I meant uncultured men and savages, who disregard right and equity and hallowed customs.

AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 192.

⁴ Bad's the best of us.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rolla. Act iv, sc. 2.

Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

SHAKESPEARE (?), The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 102.

⁵ I'm no better than the best,

And whether worse than the rest

Of my fellow-men, who knows?

LONGFELLOW, The Divine Tragedy: The Third Passover. Pt. vii, l. 4.

I am as bad as the worst, but thank God I am as good as the best.

WALT WHITMAN.

⁶ Some are good, some are middling, the most are bad. (Sunt bona, sunt quædam mediocria, sunt mala plura.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 17, l. 1.

⁷ All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxi.

⁸ A hold bad man.

SPENSER, Fæerie Queene. Bk. i, canto 1, st. 37.

⁹ Men might be better if we better deemed

Of them. The worst way to improve the world is to condemn it.

P. J. BAXTER, Festus: A Mountain Sunrise.

¹⁰

Bad as you please,
You've felt they were God's men and women still.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Blot in the 'Scotchman. Act II.

¹¹

There is a cropping-time in the generations of men, as in the fruits of the field; and sometimes, if the stock be good, there springs up for a time a succession of splendid men; and then comes a period of barrenness.

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. II, ch. 15, sec. 3.

¹²

Why each is striving, from of old,
To love more deeply than he can?
Still would be true, yet still grows cold?
—Ask of the Powers that sport with man!

They yok'd in him, for endless strife,

A heart of ice, a soul of fire;

And hurl'd him on the Field of Life,

An aimless unallay'd Desire.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Destiny.

¹³

A man's nature runs either to herbs or weeds;
therefore let him seasonably water the one,
and destroy the other.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Nature in Men.

¹⁴

Where soil is, men grow,
Whether to weeds or flowers.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. II, l. 159.

¹⁵

Tallest of boys, or shortest of men,

He stood in his stockings just four foot ten.

R. H. BARHAM, Mr. Suckledumbkin's Story.

¹⁶

But we, who name ourselves its sovereigns,
we,
Half dust, half deity, alike unfit
To sink or soar.

BYRON, Manfred. Act I, sc. 2.

With knowledge so vast, and with judgment so strong,

No man with the half of 'em e'er went far wrong;

With passions so potent, and fancies so bright,
No man with the half of 'em e'er went quite right.

BURNS, Inscribed to the Hon. C. J. Fox.

¹⁷

Oh we are querulous creatures! Little less
Than all things can suffice to make us happy;
And little more than nothing is enough
To discontent us.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Il Zepolpa. Act I, sc. 1.

what the small man seeks is in others.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xv, ch. 20.

² A man so various that he seem'd to be
Not one, but all mankind's epitome.

DAYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 545.

Man is but man; unconstant still, and various;
There's no to-morrow in him, like to-day.

DAYDEN, Cleomenes. Act iii, sc. 1.

³ Too good for banning, and too bad for blessing.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Monners.

⁴ We are the creatures of imagination, passion and self-will, more than of reason or even of self-interest. . . . The falling of a teacup puts us out of temper for the day; and a quarrel that commenced about the pattern of a gown may end only with our lives.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Winterslow. Essay No. 7.

⁵ I've studied men from my topsy-turvy
Close, and, I reckon, rather true.

Some are fine fellows: some, right scurvy:
Most, a dash between the two.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Juggling Jerry. St. 7.

⁶ Then say not man's imperfect, Heav'n in fault;

Say rather man's as perfect as he ought;
His knowledge measured to his state and place.

His time a moment, and a point his space.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. i, l. 69.

Virtuous and vicious ev'ry man must be,
Few in th' extreme, but all in the degree.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. ii, l. 231.

⁷ But men are men; the best sometimes forget.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 241.

⁸ Every man is odd.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc.
5, l. 42.

⁹ O God, that I had loved a smaller man!

I should have found in him a greater heart.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 860.

¹⁰ We are children of splendour and fame,
Of shuddering, also, and tears;
Magnificent out of the dust we came,
And abject from the Spheres.

WILLIAM WATSON, Ode in May.

Man and his littleness perish, erased like an error and cancelled;

Man and his greatness survive, lost in the greatness of God.

WILLIAM WATSON, Hymn to the Sea, Pt. iv,
l. 17.

¹¹ Part mortal clay, and part ethereal fire,
Too proud to creep, too humble to aspire.

RICHARD WERT, Ad Amicos.

A spirit all compact of fire
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 149.

¹² How poor, how rich, how abject, how august.
How complicate, how wonderful, is man!
How passing wonder fie, who made him such!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 68.

So great, so mean, is man!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 441.

¹³ He hath made the small and the great, and careth for all alike.

XIV—Man: His Inhumanity

¹⁴ What is man's greatest bane? His brother man alone. (Pernicies homini quæ maxima?
Solut homo alter)

BIAS. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententia, l. 2.)

In the evening, when we drink together, we are men, but when daybreak comes, we arise wild beasts, preying upon each other.

AUTOMEDON (Greek Anthology Bk. xi, epig.
46.)

¹⁵ Can spirit from the tomb, or fiend from Hell,
More hateful, more malignant be than man?

JOANNA BAILLIE, Orrin. Act iii, sc. 2.

¹⁶ Of all beasts the man-beast is the worst:
To others and himself, the cruellest foe.

RICHARD BAXTER, Hypocruy.

¹⁷ And Man, whose heav'n-erected face

The smiles of love adorn—

Man's inhumanity to man

Makes countless thousands mourn.

BURNS, Man Was Made to Mourn. St. 7.

But why should se man better fare,
And a' men brithers?

BURNS, Epistle to Dr. Blacklock.

¹⁸ Blow, blow, ye winds, with heavier gust!
And freeze, thou bitter-biting frost!

Descend, ye chilly, smothering snows!

Not all your rage, as now united, shows
More hard unkindness, unrelenting,

Vengeful malice, unrepenting,

Than heaven-illumin'd Man on brother Man bestows.

BURNS, A Winter Night. St. 7.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
Thou dost not bite so nigh

As benefits forgot.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 186.

¹⁹ The greatest enemy to man is man.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
I, sec. i, mem. 1, sub. 1.

¹ Man's that savage beast, whose mind,
From reason to self-love declin'd,
Delights to prey upon his kind.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Friendship and Single Life.

² Man, biologically considered, . . . is the most formidable of all the beasts of prey, and, indeed, the only one that preys systematically on its own species.

WILLIAM JAMES, Memories and Studies, p. 301.

We are the wisest, strongest race:
Long may our praise be sung—
The only animal alive

That lives upon its young!
CHARLOTTE P. S. GILMAN, Child Labor.

³ Tiger with tiger, bear with bear, you'll find
In leagues offensive and defensive joined;
But lawless man the anvil dares profane,
And forge that steel by which a man is slain.

JUVENAL, Satires, xv, 163. (Tate, tr.)

The hunting tribes of air and earth,
Respect the brethren of their birth; . . .
Even tiger fell, and sullen bear,
Their likeness and their lineage spare,
Man, only, mars kind Nature's plan,
And turns the fierce pursuit on man.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iii, st. 1.

Each animal,
By nat'ral instinct taught, spares his own kind;
But man, the tyrant man! revels at large.
Free-booter unrestrain'd, destroys at will
The whole creation, men and beasts his prey,
These for his pleasure, for his glory those.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, Field Sports, l. 94.

⁴ O shame to men! devil with devil damn'd
Firm concord holds, men only disagree
Of creatures rational.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 496.

⁵ Man is no man, but a wolf. (Lupus est homo, non homo.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 495. (Act ii, sc. 4.) Usually quoted, "Lupus est homo homini": Man is a wolf to man. So used by Erasmus (Adagia), Burton (Anatomy of Melancholy, i, 1), and many others.

A man is a wolf to a man, that is, a devourer one of another.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, Dicing, 57. (c. 1577)

We are (by our own censures) judged wolves one to another.

SIR EDWARD DYER, Writings, p. 90. (1585)

⁶ With man, most of his misfortunes are occasioned by man.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii, sec. 5.

⁷ But just disease to luxury succeeds,
And ev'ry death its own avenger breeds;
The fury-passions from that blood began,

And turn'd on man a fiercer savage, man.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iii, l. 165.

⁸ I wonder men dare trust themselves with men.
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l. 44.

⁹ It is from his fellow-man that man's everyday danger comes. . . . Man delights to ruin man. (Ab homine homini cotidianum periculum. . . . Homini perdere hominem libet.)
SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epist. cii, sec. 2.

¹⁰ Humanity must perforce prey on itself
Like monsters of the deep.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 49.

¹¹ No greater shame to man than inhumanity.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto i, st. 26.

¹² And much it grieved my heart to think
What Man has made of Man.
WORDSWORTH, Lines Written in Early Spring.

¹³ Ah, how unjust to Nature and himself
Is thoughtless, thankless, inconsistent man!
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 112.

Man is to man, the sorest, surest ill.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 217.

Inhumanity is caught from man,
From smiling man.

XV—Man: His Life & Span

See also Life: Its Shortness

¹⁵ Ye children of man! whose life is a span
Protracted with sorrow from day to day,
Naked and featherless, feeble and querulous,
Sickly, calamitous creatures of clay.
ARISTOPHANES, The Birds. (Frere, tr.)

The world is old, and thou art young; the world is large, and thou art small;
Cease, atom of a moment's span, to hold thyself an All-in-All!

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. ii, st. 21.

¹⁶ As of the green leaves on a thick tree, some fall, and some grow.

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xiv, 18.

¹⁷ The short span of life forbids us to spin out hope to any length. (Vita summa brevis spem nos vetat inchoare longam.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 4, l. 15.

Our days begin with trouble here,
Our life is but a span,

And cruel death is always near,
So frail a thing is man.

Her waist is ampler than her life,
For life is but a span.

O. W. HOLMES, My Aunt.

1 Man passes away; his name perishes from record and recollection; his history is as a tale that is told, and his very monument becomes a ruin.

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: Westminster Abbey. Conclusion.

2 Man being in honour abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish.

Old Testament: Psalms, xlix, 12, 20.

Mark how fleeting and paltry is the estate of man, —yesterday in embryo, to-morrow a mummy or ashes. So for the hair's-breadth of time assigned to thee live rationally, and part with life cheerfully, as drops the ripe olive, extolling the season that bore it and the tree that matured it.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 48.

3 He weaves, and is clothed with derision;

Sows, and he shall not reap;

His life is a watch or a vision

Between a sleep and a sleep.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

4 Man is born in vanity and sin; he comes into the world like morning mushrooms, soon thrusting up their heads into the air, . . . and as soon they turn into dust and forgetfulness.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying. Ch. I, sec. 1.

All the windy ways of men

Are but dust that rises up,

And is lightly laid again.

TENNYSON, The Vision of Sin. Pt. iv, st. 18.

7 Lord of himself;—that heritage of woe.

BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 2.

8 Oh, wearisome condition of humanity!
Born under one law, to another bound,
Vainly begot and yet forbidden vanity.
Created sick, commanded to be sound.
What meaneth Nature by these diverse laws?

Passion and reason, self-division's cause.

FULKE GREVILLE, Mystapha. Act v, sc. 4.

O suffering, sad humanity!

And struck his finger on the place,
And said, "Thou aildest here and here!"
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Memorial Verses, l. 19. Referring to Goethe.

For he pursued a lonely road,
His eyes on Nature's plan;
Neither made man too much a God,
Nor God too much a man.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, In Memory of the Author of "Obermann." Referring to Goethe.

4 There is a book into which some of us are happily led to look, and to look again, and never tire of looking. It is the Book of Man.

Shall be spread before our ken,
We are through with politicians;
Give us Men! Give us Men!

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, Challenge of the Young Men.

God give us men. A time like this demands Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands!

Men whom the lust of office does not kill,

Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy,
Men who possess opinions and a will,
Men who love honor, men who cannot lie.
J. G. HOLLAND, Wanted.

Give us a man of God's own mould,
Born to marshal his fellow-men:
One whose fame is not bought and sold
At the stroke of a politician's pen.
Give us the man of thousands ten,
Fit to do as well as to plan,
Give us a rallying-cry, and then,
Abraham Lincoln, give us a MAN!

If men are always more or less deceived on the subject of women, it is because they forget that they and women do not speak altogether the same language
AMIEL, Journal, 26 Dec., 1868.

There is nothing enduring in life for a woman except what she builds in a man's heart.
JUDITH ANDERSON, Newspaper Interview, 8 March, 1931.

The vast mass of men have to depend on themselves alone; the vast mass of women hope or expect to get their life given to them.
WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Isadora Duncan, p. 310.

The whole world was made for man, but the twelfth part of man for woman; man is the whole world and the breath of God, woman the rib and crooked piece of man.

Thou large-brain'd woman and large-hearted man,
E. B. BROWNING, To George Sand: A Desire.

Preach as we will, in this wrong world of ours, Man's fate and woman's are contending powers;
Each strives to dupe the other in the game,—
Guilt to the victor—to the vanquish'd shame!
BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. ii, sec. 2.

What a strange thing is man! and what a stranger
Is woman! What a whirlwind is her head,

And what a whirlpool full of depth and danger
Is all the rest about her.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ix, st. 64.

There can no man in humbless him acquit
As woman can, nor can be half so true,
As woman been.
CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 880.

I love men, not because they are men, but because they are not women.
QUEEN CHRISTINA of Sweden.

I am glad that I am not a man, as I should be obliged to marry a woman.

I—Manners: Definitions

¹⁰ Manners must adorn knowledge, and smooth its way through the world. Like a great rough diamond, it may do very well in a closet by way of curiosity, and also for its intrinsic value; but it will never be worn, nor shine, if it is not polished.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 1 July, 1748.

Virtue and learning, like gold, have their intrinsic value; but if they are not polished, they certainly lose a great deal of their lustre; and even polished brass will pass upon more people than rough gold.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 March, 1747.

It is not sufficient to deserve well, one must please well too. Awkward, disagreeable merit will never carry anybody far.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Sept., 1749.

What's a fine person, or a beautiful face, Unless deportment gives them decent grace? Bless'd with all other requisites to please, Some want the staking elegance of ease; The curious eye their awkward movement tires: They seem like puppets led about by wires.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 741.

¹¹ Different manners belong to different pursuits. (Disparis mores disparia studia sequuntur.)

CICERO, De Amicitia, Ch. xx, sec. 74.

¹² Contact with manners is education.

DIONYSIUS OF HALICARNASSUS, Art Rhetorica. Ch. xi, sec. 2.

¹³ Manners are the happy ways of doing things. . . . If they are superficial, so are the dew-drops which give such a depth to the morning meadows.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

Manners have been somewhat cynically defined to be a contrivance of wise men to keep fools at a distance.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

There is nothing settled in manners, but the laws of behavior yield to the energy of the individual.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

Manners are greater than laws; by their delicate nature they fortify themselves with an impassable wall of defence.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education.

¹⁴ Perhaps, if we could examine the manners of different nations with impartiality, we should find no people so rude, as to be without any rules of politeness; nor any so polite, as not to have some remains of rudeness.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Remarks Concerning the Savages of North America.

The mainners o' a' nations are equally bad.

⁹ You may observe that I am well-bred to a degree of needless scrupulosity.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies, Vol. i, p. 169.

No dancing bear was so genteel
Or half so déçagé.

COWPER, Of Himself.

¹⁰ Such high-bred manners, such good-natured
wit.

J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis.

¹¹ Teach me, like thee, in various nature wise,
To fall with dignity, with temper rise:
Form'd by thy converse, happily to steer
From grave to gay, from lively to severe;
Correct with spirit, eloquent with ease,
Intent to reason, or polite to please.

POPE, Essay on Man, Epist. iv, l. 377.

¹² Don't shake hands too eagerly. (Μὴ ῥαβδὸν βέβαιον ἐμβάλλειν.)

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras, Bk. viii, sec. 17.)

¹³ Good manners be your speed!

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, Act iii, sc. 1, l. 190.

¹⁴ Gentle blood will gentle manners breed.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene, Bk. vi, canto iii, st. 2.

True is, that whilom that good poet said,
The gentle mind by gentle deeds is known;
For a man by nothing is so well bewray'd
As by his manners.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene, Bk. vi, canto iii, st. 1.
The reference is to Chaucer. See also under GENTLEMAN.

IV—Manners: Bad Manners

¹⁵ You have the gift of impudence; be thankful;
Every man has not the like talent.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Wild Goose Chase, Act i, sc. 2.

I am privileged to be very impertinent, being an Oxonian.

FARQUHAR, Sir Harry Wildair, Act ii, sc. 1.

With that dull, rooted, callous impudence
Which, dead to shame and every nicer sense,
Ne'er blush'd, unless, in spreading vice's snares,
She blunder'd on some virtue unawares.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 135.

¹⁶ No manners at all—no more breeding than a bum-bailey.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World, Act i, sc. 6.

¹⁷ Though I be rude in speech.

New Testament: 11 Corinthians, xi, 6.

¹⁸ God may forgive sins, he said, but awkward-ness has no forgiveness in heaven or earth.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

¹⁹ I suppose this is a spice of your foreign breeding, to let your uncle kick his heels in your hall.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Minor, Act ii.

¹ Mr. Burchell . . . at the conclusion of every sentence would cry out "Fudge!"—an expression which displeased us all.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 11.

² Unruly murmurs, or ill-timed applause
Wrong the best speaker or the justest cause.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xix, l. 86. (Pope, tr.)

³ A rustic roughness, awkward and loutish. (Asperitas agrestis, et inconcinna gravisque.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. I, epis. 18, l. 6.

⁴ Folly often goes beyond her bounds; but Impudence knows none.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Scitum Hispanicum.
Of all the plagues that heaven has sent,
A Wasp is most impertinent.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. I, No. 3.

⁵ Incivility is not a Vice of the Soul, but the effect of several Vices; of Vanity, Ignorance of Duty, Laziness, Stupidity, Distraction, Contempt of others, and Jealousy.

LA BAUVÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 11.

⁶ The movers and masters of our souls have surely a right to throw out their limbs as carelessly as they please, on the world that belongs to them, and before the creatures they have animated.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Pericles and Aspasia.

⁷ Degenerate manners grow apace. (Mores deterioriores increbescunt.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 838. (Act v, sc. 1.)

Evil manners will, like watered grass, grow up very quickly. (Mores mali, Quasi herba irrigua succreverunt uberrime.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 8.

⁸ Rude, and scant of courtesy.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Can. v, st. 28.

But by and rade the Black Douglas,
And wow but he was rough!

UNKNOWN, The Douglas Tragedy.

⁹ I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 110.

¹⁰ This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 304.

He answered me in the roundest manner.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 59.

This is some fellow,
Who, having been praise'd for bluntness, doth affect

A saucy roughness.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 101.

Fit for the mountains and the bar'rous caves,
Where manners ne'er were preach'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 52.

¹¹ One ugly trick has often spoiled
The sweetest and the best.

ANN TAYLOR, Meddlesome Matty.

¹² Her manners had not that repose
Which stamps the caste of Vere de Vere.

TENNYSON, Lady Clara Vere de Vere. St. 5.

¹³ His trick of doing nothing with an air,
His salon manners and society smile
Were but skin deep.

WILLIAM WATSON, Study in Contrasts. Pt. I, l. 117.

^{13a} For rudeness none shall rightly blame thee
If soon thy bed thou seekest.

UNKNOWN, The Elder Edda: Hovamol. Sec. 19. (HENRY ADAMS BELLOWS, tr., Poetic Edda.)

MARCH

¹⁴ The stormy March has come at last,
With winds and clouds and changing skies;
I hear the rushing of the blast

That through the snowy valley flies.

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT, March.

¹⁵ March winds and April showers
Bring forth May flowers.

ELWORTHY, West Somersetshire Word-Book, 461.

March wind and May sun
Makes clothes white and maids dun.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 41.

¹⁶ Men.: I would choose March, for I would come in like a lion.

Tony: But you'd go out like a lamb.

JOHN FLETCHER, Wife for a Month. Act ii, sc. 1. (1624)

Like the month of March, in like a lion and out like a lamb.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 259.

Like March, having come in like a lion, he purposed to go out like a lamb.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 15.

March comes in with an adder's head, and goes out with a peacock's tail.

R. L. GALE, Old-World Essays, p. 250.

¹⁷ Blossom on the plum,
Wild wind and merry;

Leaves upon the cherry,

And one swallow come.

NORA HOPKIN, March.

¹⁸ Ah, March! we know thou art
Kind-hearted, 'spite of ugly looks and threats,
And, out of sight, art nursing April's violets!

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, March.

¹⁹ Slayer of the winter, art thou here again?

O welcome, thou that bring'st the summer
'nigh!

The bitter wind makes not thy victory vain,
Nor will we mock thee for thy faint blue sky.
WILLIAM MORRIS, Earthly Paradise: March. St. 1.

1
Now are the winds about us in their glee,
Tossing the slender tree;
Whirling the sands about his furious car,
March cometh from afar.

WILLIAM GILMORE SIMMES, Song in March.

2
With rushing winds and gloomy skies,
The dark and stubborn Winter dies:
Far-off, unseen, Spring faintly cries,
Bidding her earliest child arise: March!
BAYARD TAYLOR, March.

3
Up from the sea the wild north wind is blowing
Under the sky's gray arch;
Smiling, I watch the shaken elm boughs, knowing
It is the wind of March.
J. G. WHITTIER, March.

4
The braggart March stood in the season's door
With his broad shoulders blocking up the way.
ROBERT BURNS WILSON, The Passing of March.

5
Like an army defeated
The snow hath retreated. . . .
The Ploughboy is whooping—anon—anon!
There's joy in the mountains:
There's life in the fountains; . . .
The rain is over and gone.
WORDSWORTH, Written in March.

6
Its tree, Juniper; its stone, Bloodstone; its motto,
"Courage and strength in time of danger."
UNKNOWN, Old Saying. Referring to March.

MARIGOLD

7
The marigold, whose courtier's face
Echoes the sun.
JOHN CLEVELAND, Upon Phillis Walking in a Morning before Breakfast.

8
The marigold abroad her leaves doth spread,
Because the sun's and her power is the same.
HENRY CONSTABLE, Diana.

9
Fair is the marygold, for pottage meet.
JOHN GAY, The Shepherd's Week: Monday.

10
Open afresh your round of starry folds,
Ye ardent marigolds!
KEATS, I Stood Tiptoe upon a Little Hill, l. 47.

11
The sun-observing marigold.
FRANCIS QUARLES, School of the Heart, Ode 30.

12
Nor shall the marigold unmentioned die,
Which Aëcis once found out in Sicily;
She Phœbus loves, and from him draws his hue,
And ever keeps his golden beams in view.
RICHARD RASHD, On Gardens. (Gardiner, tr.)

13
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, Act ii, sc. 3, l. 25.

The marigold that goes to bed wth the sun,
And with him rises weeping.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act iv, sc. 4, l. 105.

14
The graceful and obsequious marigold,
How duly every morning she displays
Her open breast when Titan spreads his rays.
GEORGE WITTEK, The Marigold.

MARLOWE, CHRISTOPHER

15 Neat Marlowe, bathed in the Thespian
springs,
Had in him those brave transunary things
That the first poets had; his raptures were
All air and fire, which made his verses clear,
For that fine madness still he did retain
Which rightly should possess a poet's brain.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, Of Poets and Poesie.

[Marlowe] had in him those brave transunary things that the first poets had.
JOHN DRINKWATER, To Harry Reynolds: Of Poets and Poetry.

16
Marlowe's mighty line.
BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare.

17
For thou, if ever godlike foot there trod
These fields of ours, wert surely like a god.
Who knows what splendour of strange dreams
was shed
With sacred shadow and glimmer of gold and red
From hallowed windows, over stone and sod
On thine unbowed, bright, insubmissive head?
The shadow stayed not, but the splendour stays,
Our brother, till the last of English days.
SWINBURNE, In the Bay. St. 18.

18
Marlowe was happy in his buskin Muse—
Alas, unhappy in his life and end:
Pity it is that wit so ill should dwell,
Wit lent from heaven, but vices sent from hell.
Our theatre hath lost, Pluto hath got,
A tragic penman for a dreary plot.
UNKNOWN, The Return from Parnassus. (1606)

MARRIAGE

I—Marriage: Definitions

19 Marriage always demands the greatest understanding of the art of insincerity possible between two human beings.

VICKI BAUM, And Life Goes On, p. 141.

The one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties.
OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1.

¹ Marriage: The state or condition of a community consisting of a master, a mistress, and two slaves, making in all, two.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary, p. 213.

² The mere idea of marriage, existing to weaken the will by distracting its straight aim in the life of practically every young girl, is the simple secret of their confessed inferiority in men's pursuits and professions today.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Isadora Duncan, p. 310.

³ In the married state, the world must own, Divided happiness was never known, To make it mutual, nature points the way: Let husbands govern: gentle wives obey.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Provok'd Husband Act v, sc. 2. See also WIRZ: THE CROWING HEN.

⁴ The first bond of society is marriage. (Prima societas in ipso conjugio est.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 17, sec. 54.

⁵ Wedlock's a lane where there is no turning.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Magnus and Morna. Sc. 3.

⁶ Marriage must be a relation either of sympathy or of conquest.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Bk. III, ch. 48.

⁷ Bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh.

Old Testament: Genesis, II, 23.

Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh.

Old Testament: Genesis, II, 24.

And they two shall be one flesh.

New Testament: Ephesians, v, 31.

And they twain shall be one flesh.

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 5; Mark, x, 8.

Our state cannot be sever'd; we are one, One flesh; to lose thee were to lose myself.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 958.

⁸ The torment of one, the felicity of two, the strife and enmity of three.

WASHINGTON IRVING.

⁹ Matrimony is something that the bachelor misses and the widower escapes.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

¹⁰ Death itself to the reflecting mind is less serious than marriage. . . . Death is not a blow, it is not even a pulsation; it is a pause. But marriage unrolls the awful lot of numberless generations. Health, genius, honour are the words inscribed on some; on others are disease, fatuity, and infamy.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR. (Quoted by SARAH GRAND, The Heavenly Twins. Motto to Bk. II.)

¹⁰ Marrying cannot be without women, nor can the world subsist without them. To marry is physic against incontinence.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 726.

On what pretense can man have interdicted marriage, which is a law of nature? It is as though we were forbidden to eat, to drink, to sleep.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 728.

¹¹ Marriage, if one will face the truth, is an evil, but a necessary evil. (Τὸ γάμιον, τέτυκται τῇ ἀνάγκῃ, καὶ οὐ μὴ ἐστιν, ἀλλ' ἀναγκαῖον κακόν.)

MENANDER, Fragment. No. 651.

¹² Wedlock is a padlock.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 56. (1678)

¹³ Marriage is the Keeley cure for love's intoxication.

HELEN ROWLAND, Love Letters of a Cynic.

¹⁴ Marriage is nothing but a civil contract.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Marriage.

¹⁵ A world-without-end bargain.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 799.

¹⁶ Is it not the most horrible of all the means which the world has had recourse to, to bind the noble to itself?

SHELLEY, Letter to T. J. Hogg, 21 June, 1811.

¹⁷ Marriage is a lottery.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 252.

Marriage is a lottery in which men stake their liberty and women their happiness.

MADAME DE RIEUX, Epigram.

Marriage is a lottery, but you can't tear up your ticket if you lose.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

¹⁸ Marriage is one long conversation, chequered by disputes.

R. L. STEVENSON, Memories and Portraits, p. 189.

¹⁹ Marriage is a step so grave and decisive that it attracts light-headed variable men by its very awfulness.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I. But marriage, if comfortable, is not at all heroic. It certainly narrows and dampens the spirits of generous men. In marriage, a man becomes slack and selfish, and undergoes a fatty degeneration of his moral being. . . . The air of the fireside withers out all the fine wildings of the husband's heart.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I. Marriage is like life in this—that it is a field of battle, and not a bed of roses.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I.

²⁰ Two lives bound fast in one with golden ease; Two graves grass-green beside a grey church tower.

TENNISON, Circumstance.

VOLTAIRE, Pensées d'un Philosophe.

² Marriage is a status of antagonistic coöperation. In such a status, necessarily, centripetal and centrifugal forces are continuously at work, and the measure of its success obviously depends on the extent to which the centripetal forces are predominant.

JOHN M. WOOLSEY, Federal Judge, Decision, rendered 6 April, 1931, holding that Marie Stopes's Married Love is not obscene.

³ But marriage is a fetter, is a snare,
A hell, no lady so polite can bear.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 65.

⁴ Marriage with peace is this world's Paradise;
With strife, this life's Purgatory.

UNKNOWN, Politeuphuia, p. 227. (1669)

Where there is strife betwixt a man and wife,
'Tis hell,
And mutual love may be compar'd to heaven.

JOSHUA COOKE, How a Man May Choose a Good Wife. Act i, sc. 1.

The marriage state, with and without the affection suitable to it, is the completest image of Heaven and Hell we are capable of receiving in this life.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 480.

Well-married, a man is winged: ill-matched, he is shackled.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit.

II—Marriage: Apothegms

⁵ Alfred and I intended to be married in this way almost from the first; we never meant to be spliced in the humdrum way of other people.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Villette. Ch. 42. (1853)

If you mean gettin' hitched, I'm in!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 34.

⁸ The road to success is filled with women pushing their husbands along.

LORD THOMAS ROBERT D'WAR, Epigram.

⁹ I am to be married within these three days; married past redemption.

DEYDEM, Marriage à la Mode. Act i, sc. 1.

¹⁰ One fool at least in every married couple.

FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. ix, ch. 4.

¹¹ You are of the society of wits and railleurs; . . . the surest sign is you are an enemy to marriage, the common butt of every railleur.

DAVID GARRICK, The Country Girl. Act ii, sc. 1.
An adaptation of Wycherley's Country Wife.

¹² Ah me! when shall I marry me?

GOLDSMITH, Song. Intended for She Stoops to Conquer.

Beauty, youth, and fortune meeting in you,
I will vouchsafe to marry you.

that we shall never undo with our teeth.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 468.

To get married is to tie a knot with the tongue that you cannot undo with your teeth.

E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, p. 272.

¹⁵ It is not marriage that fails; it is people that fail. All that marriage does is to show people up.

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK, Marriage.

¹⁶ Women marry because they don't want to work.

MARY GARDEN, Newspaper Interview.

¹⁷ It is not good that the man should be alone.

Old Testament: Genesis, ii, 18.

He that said it was not good for man to be alone, placed the celibate amongst the inferior states of perfection.

ROBERT BOYLE, Letter from Mr. Evelyn. (Works, vi, 292.)

¹⁸ Marriage is honourable in all.

New Testament: Hebrews, xii, 4.

Marriage is honourable, but housekeeping's a shrew.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. v, p. 91.

²⁰ Marriages would in general be as happy, and often more so, if they were all made by the Lord Chancellor.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

Notwithstanding all that wit, or malice, or pride, or prudence will be able to suggest, men and women must at last pass their lives together.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 119.

¹ I have met with women whom I really think would like to be married to a Poem, and to be given away by a Novel.

KEATS, Letters to Fanny Brawns. Letter 2.

² Here you may see Benedick the married man.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act i, sc. 1, l. 269. (1598) It was from this use of the word that "Benedick" or "Benedict," as a synonym for a married man, originated, especially for a supposedly confirmed bachelor who falls victim to Cupid's arrow.

How dost thou, Benedick, the married man?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 4, l. 100.

Wish the veteran joy of his entrance into the band of Benedicts.

WALTER SCOTT. In LOCKHART, Life (1839), Vol. vi, p. 313. (1821) In frequent use thereafter, usually in a jocular sense.

³ He married off his daughter, giving her, as he said himself, for a trial marriage of thirty days. (Ἐνὶ νύμφῃ βότρ' ὑπάρχοντ' ἡμέρας.)

The wedlock of minds will be greater than that of bodies. (Magis erit animorum quam corporum conjugium.)

ERASMUS, Proci et Puella.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds Admit impediments.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxvi.

More things belong [to marriage] than four bare legs in a bed.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8.

⁶ She who is born handsome is born married.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Such as marry but to a fair face, tie themselves off to a foul bargain.

ROBERT GREENE, Works. Vol. viii, p. 36.

Some ladies are too beautiful to be wed; For where's the man that's worthy of their bed?

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 83.

⁷ It takes patience to appreciate domestic bliss; volatile spirits prefer unhappiness.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, The Life of Reason. Vol. ii, p. 4.

⁸ "Whenever I marry," says masculine Ann,

"I must really insist upon wedding a man!" But what if the man (for men are but human) Should be equally nice about wedding a woman?

J. G. SAXE, Dilemma.

⁹ Of all actions of a man's life, his marriage does least concern other people; yet of all actions of our life, 'tis most meddled with by other people.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Marriage.

¹⁰ I say, we will have no more marriages. Those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 155.

¹¹ Makes marriage vows

As false as dicers' oaths.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 44. See also LOVE: LOVE'S PERJURIES.

¹² The whole world is strewn with snares, traps, gins and pitfalls for the capture of men by women.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

Marriage is unpopular because it combines the minimum of temptation with the maximum of opportunity.

UNKNOWN, Shaw Revised.

¹⁴ Married women are kept women and they are beginning to find it out.

LOGAN PEARSALE SMITH, Afterthoughts.

¹⁵ What they do in heaven we are ignorant of; but what they do not we are told expressly, that they neither marry nor are given in marriage.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world; . . . neither marry, nor are given in marriage.

New Testament: Luke, xx, 35.

¹⁶ Wedded persons may thus pass over their lives quietly . . . if the husband becomes deaf and the wife blind.

RICHARD TAYLOR, Garden of Wisdom, ii, 4. (1539)

A good marriage would be between a blind wife and a deaf husband. (Un bon mariage se dressoit d'une femme aveugle, avecques un mary sourd.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. Quoted as a saying.

A husband must be deaf, and his wife blind, to have quietness.

ARTEMUS WARD, A Mormon Romance.

³ In married life three is company and two none.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act i.

⁴ There's nothing in the world like the devotion of a married woman. It's a thing no married man knows anything about.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii.

⁵ Twenty years of romance make a woman look like a ruin; but twenty years of marriage make her something like a public building.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act i.

⁶ Men marry because they are tired; women because they are curious. Both are disappointed.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

⁷ Hanging and wiving go by destiny.

UNKNOWN, School-House for Women. (1541)

Wedding is destiny, And hanging likewise.

JOHN HEYWOOD, English Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

The ancient saying is no heresy,

Hanging and wiving go by destiny.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 9, l. 82. The proverb is used by many writers, among them: BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, li, 5, 5; CHAPMAN, All Fools, v, 1; FARQUHAR, Recruiting Officer, iii, 2; SWIFT, Polite Conversation, i.

⁸ Truly some men there be

That live always in great horror,

And say it goeth by destiny

To hang or wed: both hath one hour;

And whether it be, I am well sure,

Hanging is better of the twain;

Sooner done, and shorter pain.

UNKNOWN, The School-house. (c. 1542)

If matrimony and hanging go

By destiny, why not whipping too?

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 839.

I spake to him of Garlic, he answered Asparagus: consulted him of marriage, he tells me of hanging, as if they went by one and the same destiny.

¹¹ Therefore it is fitting for the women to be married at about the age of eighteen, and the men at thirty-seven, or a little before.

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 14, sec. 6.

Let still the woman take
An elder than herself; so wears she to him,
So sways she level in her husband's heart:

For, boy, however we do praise ourselves,
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn,
Than women's are.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 30.

Then let thy love be younger than thyself,
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent:

For women are as roses, whose fair flower

Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 37.

¹² We should marry to please ourselves, not other people.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Maid of the Mill. Act iii, sc. 4.

¹³ If you marry an ugly wife, she will be your bane; if a beautiful one, you will not keep her to yourself.

BION. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, 48.)

¹⁴ To change the name and not the letter

Is a change for the worse and not for the better.

CHAMBERS, Book of Days. Vol. i, p. 723.

¹⁵ It is better to marry than to burn.

NEW TESTAMENT: I Corinthians, vii, 9.

¹⁶ Misses! the tale that I relate

This lesson seems to carry—

Choose not alone a proper mate,

But proper time to marry.

COWPER, Pairing Time Anticipated: Moral.

¹⁷ For a young man not yet; for an old man never at all. (Tota vita natus imperio, tota æspeculatore prædicatione.)

DIOGENES, when asked the proper time to marry. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 54.)

He was reputed one of the wise men that made answer to the question when a man should marry? "A young man not yet, an elder man not at all."

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Marriage and Single Life. Also Apothegms, No. 220.

Honest men marry quickly, but wise men not at all.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 2.

A woman needs a stronger head than her own for counsel—she should marry. (Una mujer no tiene. Valor para el consejo, y la conviene casarse.)

CALDERON, El Purgatorio de Sans Patricio. Act III, sc. 4.

I have always thought that every woman should marry, and no man.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 30.

Men in single state should marry, While women, I suggest, should marry.

SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, Advice on Marriage.

It is a woman's business to get married as soon as possible, and a man's to keep unmarried as long as he can.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act II.

Marriage is of so much use to a woman, opens out to her so much more of life, and puts her in the way of so much more freedom and usefulness, that, whether she marry well or ill, she can hardly miss some benefit.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I.

Keep thy eyes wide open before marriage, and half shut afterwards.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

Wholly abstain, or wed. Thy bounteous Lord Allows thee choice of paths; take no by-ways.

Continence bath his joy; weigh both, and so If rottenness have more, let Heaven go.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 3.

Marry your son when you will, your daughter when you can.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Be careful to marry a woman who lives near to you. (Τὴν δι μέλιτος γάμειν, ἢ τὴν πόλεως ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵματος.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 700.

Who marries does well, who marries not does better.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, II, 666. (1659)

Marriage is the best state for man in general; and every man is the worse man, in proportion as he is unfit for the married state.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

If you are honestly devoted to one woman,

then bow your head and submit your neck to the yoke. (Si tibi simplicitas uxoria, deditur uni Est animus, summatte caput cervice parata Ferre jugum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. VI, l. 206.

To rise betimes, and to marry young, are what no man ever repents of doing.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk: Marriage.

Take heed, Camilla, that seeking all the Wood for a straight stick, you choose not at the last a crooked staff.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues.

Ev'n in the happiest choice, where fav'ring heaven

Has equal love and easy fortune giv'n,— Think not, the husband gain'd, that all is done;

The prize of happiness must still be won: And, oft, the careless find it to their cost, The lover in the husband may be lost; The graces might alone his heart allure; They and the virtues, meeting, must secure.

GEORGE LYTTLETON, Advice to a Lady.

And, to all married men, be this a caution, Which they should duly tender as their life, Neither to doat too much, nor doubt a wife.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Picture. Act V, sc. 3.

Advice to persons about to marry—Don't.

HENRY MAYHEW, in Punch, vol. VIII, p. 1. (1845) This, the most famous joke that Punch ever made, is stated by Spielman, in his History of Punch, to have been written by Mayhew, one of the three co-editors under whose direction Punch was first published.

'Tis unlucky to marry in the month of May. (Mense malum Maio nubere.)

OWN, Fasti. Eleg. V, l. 490.

Marry in May, repent alway.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
Marry in Lent, live to repent.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

It does not much signify whom one marries, as one is sure to find next morning that it is some one else.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Table-Talk.

Maidens! why should you worry in choosing whom you should marry?

Choose whom you may, you will find you have got somebody else.

JOHN RAY, Distiches. No. 10.

If thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act III, sc. 1, l. 142.

'Tis my maxim, be's a fool that marries; but be's a greater that does not marry a fool.

WYCHERLEY, Country Wife. Act I, sc. 1, l. 502.

Intelligent women always marry fools.

ANATOLE FRANCE.

1. Whichever you do you will repent it. ("Ὅ ἅ ἀνδρὶ νοσήσῃς, μετάνοιός.")

SOCRATES, when asked whether or not a man should marry. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Socrates. Sec. 16.)

2. No woman should marry a teetotalter or a man who does not smoke.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I.

I see . . . men . . . taking into their lives acidulous vestals.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I.

3. Better to sit up all night than to go to bed with a dragon.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, p. 213.

4. Monday for wealth, Tuesday for health, Wednesday the best day of all:

Thursday for crosses, Friday for losses,

Saturday no luck at all.

UNKNOWN, (BRAND, Popular Antiquities.)

Days lucky or unlucky for marriage.

Marry Monday, marry for wealth;

Marry Tuesday, marry for health;

Marry Wednesday, the best day of all;

Marry Thursday, marry for crosses;

Marry Friday, marry for losses;

Marry Saturday, no luck at all.

UNKNOWN, (HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes.)

IV—Marriage: Like with Like

5. Ah, wise was he who first pondered this truth and gave it utterance: that to marry in one's own degree is far the best, and that neither among the rich nor the high-born should marriage be desired by a man who tolleth with his hands.

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 887.

Oh! wise was he, the first who taught
This lesson of observant thought,
That equal fates alone may bless
The bowers of nuptial happiness;
That never where ancestral pride
Inflames, or affluence rolls its tide,
Should love's ill-omened bonds entwine
The offspring of a humbler line.

THOMAS LOVE PRACOCK, Connubial Equality.

An adaptation of Æschylus, Prometheus Bound, l. 887. (ἡ σοφὴ ἡ σοφός, etc.)

6. Like blood, like goods, and like age,

Make the happiest marriage.

JOHN CLARKE, Paramologia, 28. (1639)

7. For any man to match above his rank

Is but to sell his liberty.

MASSINGER, The Virgin Martyr. Act I, sc. 1.

8. Among unequals what society

Can sort, what harmony, or true delight?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 383.

9. As the ill-mated steer yoked miserably at the plough, so fares the wife who is less than her mighty lord. (Quam male inæquales veniunt ad aratra iuveni, Tam premittur magno conjuge nupta minor.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. ix, l. 29.

10. If you would marry wisely, marry your equal.

(Siqua voles apte nubere, nube pari.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. ix, l. 32.

11. Whip your own top. (Τῆς κατὰ σάρκα ἑαυτοῦ.)

PITTACUS, when asked by a stranger whether he should marry his equal or his superior.

Pittacus led him to a group of boys who were spinning tops, and bade him listen to them. The boys were crying to each other, "Whip your own top." The words also mean, "Keep to your own sphere," and the stranger led home the humbler bride. (CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams: Anth. Pal., vii, 89.)

12. Let like mate with like; the ill-matched never agree. (Par pari jugator conjunx; quidquid impar, dissidet.)

SOLON. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententia, l. 30.)

V—Marriage and Money

13. A poor man who marries a wealthy woman gets a ruler and not a wife.

ANAXANDRIDES. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium.)

14. There are but two objects in marriage, love or money. If you marry for love, you will certainly have some very happy days, and probably many very uneasy ones; if for money, you will have no happy days and probably no uneasy ones.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters. (To be delivered posthumously.)

15. His designs were strictly honourable, as the phrase is, that is to rob a lady of her fortune by way of marriage.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xi, ch. 4.

16. He that marries for wealth sells his liberty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2238.

Who wives for a dowry resigns his own power.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

17. The woes of wedlock with the joys, we mix;

'Tis best repenting in a coach and six.

SAMUEL GARTH, Cato: Prologue.

18. 'Tis sad when you think of her wasted life,

For youth cannot mate with age,

And her beauty was sold for an old man's gold—

She's a bird in a gilded cage.

ARTHUR J. LAGER, A Bird in a Gilded Cage.

(1900) Music by HARRY VON TILLY.

Class . . .

One of those Unions that neglect to Une . . .
She was a Saint! He was a Hound! Alas,
That such a Peach should marry such a Prune!

Why did she stick? Who knows the inward tune

To which these women march? We know, at least,

Mark had a Wad, and bought her gowns and shoon . . .

Also, one eats or one is soon deceased. . . .
Mayhap it was a case of Booty and the Beast!

DON MARQUIS, Tristram and Isolde.

² O thrice ill-starred is he who marries when he is poor! (Ὁ τρίς κακοδαίμων, ὅστις ὅν νύμφης γαμέῃ.)

MEVANDER, Ploclus.

³ Let all mankind this certain maxim hold:
Marry who will, our sex is to be sold.
With empty hands no tassels you can lure,
But fulsome love for gain we can endure;
For gold we love the impotent and old,
And heave, and pant, and kiss, and cling, for
gold.

Yet with embraces curses oft I mixt,
Then kiss'd again, and chid, and rail'd betwixt.
POPE, Wife of Bath: Prologue, l. 170.

But honored well are charms to sell
If priests the selling do.

NATHANIEL PARKER WILLIS, Unseen Spirits.

⁴ I asked of Echo, 't other day
(Whose words are few and often funny),
What to a novice she could say
Of courtship, love, and matrimony.
Quoth Echo, plainly,—“Matter-o'-money.”
J. G. Saxe, Echo.

⁵ I come to wive it wealthily.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
I, sc. 2, l. 75.

⁶ Doñt thou marry for munny, but goñ wheer munny is!

TENNISON, Northern Farmer, New Style. St. S.
Remember, it is as easy to marry a rich woman
as a poor woman.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Bk. I, ch. 28.

⁷ I prefer a man without money, to money without a man, (*Ego vero malo virum, qui moon; it is harvest moon with me.”

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu
19 May, 1756.

VI—Marriage: December and May

⁹ What woes must such unequal union bring,
When hoary Winter weds the youthfu
Spring?

You, like Mezentius, in the nuptial bed,
Once more unite the living and the dead.

WILLIAM BROOME, *On a Gentleman of Seventy
Who Married a Lady of Sixteen*.

The living and the dead, at his [Mezentius'] command,

Were coupled face to face and hand to hand.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. viii.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Coming Terror, 267.

¹² Men should wedden after their estate,
For youth and old are often at debate.

CHAUCER, The Miller's Tale, l. 43.

¹³ Husband twice as old as wife,

Argues ill for married life.

W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act. I.

¹⁴ Better be an old man's darling than a young man's warling.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. II, ch. 7. (1546)

“Warling” was apparently coined for this proverb, which will be found also in CAM-DEN, Remains, 293; SWIFT, Polite Conversation, I; ADAMS, Misc's Daughter, III,
15, and elsewhere.

Better be an old man's darling

Than become a young man's slave.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravagance, v, 206.

¹⁵ For it ne sits not unto fresh May

Forto be coupled to cold January.

JOHN LYDGATE, Temple of Glas. (c. 1400)

Lustful he was, at forty must be wed,

Old January will have May in bed.

UNKNOWN, Musarum Delicia, I, 103.

¹⁶ Since thou wouldst needs (bewitched with

VII—Marriage and Repentance

3
Be not hasty to marry; it's better to have one plough going than two cradles; and more profit to have a barn filled than a bed.

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam.

4
You should indeed have longer tarried
By the roadside before you married.

W. S. LANDOR, To One Ill-mated.

5
In hasty recklessness men often marry,
And afterwards repent it all their lives.
(Par un prompt désespoir souvent on se
marie,
Qu'on s'en repent après tout le temps de sa vie.)

MOLIERE, Les Femmes Savantes. Act v, sc. 4,
l. 89.

6
Lest in making hasty choice, leisure for repentance should follow.

WILLIAM PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure, l. 115.
(1566)

She was afraid to match in haste lest she might repent at leisure.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, xi, 86. (1592)

Marry too soon, and you'll repent too late.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Jealous Lovers. Act v,
sc. 2. (1632)

Marry in haste, repent at leisure.

CONGREVE, Old Batchelor. Act v, sc. 8. (1692)

7
Hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 18.

Wooling, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch flg, a measure, and a cinque pace.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 76.

Who would in haste, and means to wed at leisure.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 11.

8
Marriage leapeth up upon the saddle, and repentance upon the crupper.

UNKNOWN, Poeticalus, 35. (1669)

And sure all marriage in repentance ends.

DEYLEN, Don Sebastian: Epilogue.

VIII—Marriage and Love

9
The angry tyrant lays his yoke on all,
Yet in his fiercest rage is charming still;
Officious Hymen comes where'er we call,
But haughty Love comes only when he will.
APERA BEEN, Love and Marriage.

'Tis Love alone can make our fetters please.
APERA BEEN, Love and Marriage.

10
Love-matches are made by people who are content, for a month of honey, to condemn themselves to a life of vinegar.

COUNTRESS OF BLESSINGTON, Commonplace Book.

Marriage, from love, like vinegar from wine—
A sad, sour, sober beverage—by time
Is sharpen'd from its high celestial flavour
Down to a very homely household savour.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 5.

11
For Wedlock without love, some say,
Is but a lock without a key.
It is a kind of rape to marry

One that neglects or cares not for ye.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 321.

12
'Tis melancholy, and a fearful sign
Of human frailty, folly, also crime,
That love and marriage rarely can combine,
Although they both are born in the same
clime.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 5.

13
People marry through a variety of other reasons, and with varying results; but to marry for love is to invite inevitable tragedy.

J. B. CARELL, The Cream of the Jest, p. 235.

14
Can you keep the bee from ranging,
Or the ringdove's neck from changing?
No! nor fettered Love from dying
In the knot there's no untying.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Song. St. 6.

15
There as my heart is set, there will I wive.
CHAUCER, The Clerk's Tale, l. 117.

16
Marriage has, as you say, no natural relation to love. Marriage belongs to society; it is a social contract.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, p. 450.

17
And all the young ladies said . . . that to be sure a love-match was the only thing for happiness, where the parties could anyway afford it.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Castle Rackrent: Continuation of Memoirs.

18
Where there's marriage without love, there will be love without marriage.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

There can be only one end to marriage without love, and that is love without marriage.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

Where love is there is marriage; where love is not, there is prostitution.

JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, Where Love Is.

¹ 'Tis highly rational, we can't dispute,
That Love, being naked, should promote a suit:

But doth not oddity to him attach
Whose fire's so oft extinguished by a match?
RICHARD GARNETT, On Love and Marriage.

² Marriage the happiest bond of love might be,
If hands were only joined where hearts agree.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, The British Enchanters.
Act v, sc. 1.

Union of hearts, not hands, does marriage make,
And sympathy of mind keeps love awake.
AARON HILL, Astors.

³ If a man really loves a woman, of course he wouldn't marry her for the world if he were not quite sure that he was the best person she could by any possibility marry.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 10.

⁴ It is commonly a weak man who marries for love.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

⁵ It is love that is sacred. . . . Marriage and love have nothing in common. . . . We marry only once . . . but we may love twenty times. . . . Marriage is law, and love is instinct.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, The Love of Long Ago.

⁶ Hail wedded love, mysterious law, true source
Of human offspring, sole propriety
In Paradise of all things common else.
By thee adulterous lust was driv'n from men
Among the bestial herds to range; by thee,
Founded in reason, loyal, just, and pure,
Relations dear, and all the charities
Of father, son, and brother, first were known.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 750.

⁷ Love is often a fruit of marriage. (L'amour est souvent un fruit de mariage.)

MOULIER, Sganarelle. Sc. 1, l. 54.

The old family maxim, that "if she marries first, love will come after."

EUSTACE BUDGELL, The Spectator. No. 605.

Marry first and love will follow.

HANNAH COWLEY, The Belle's Stratagem. Act iii, sc. 1. Quoted as "the good old maxim."

The woman that marries to love better will be as much mistaken as the wench that marries to live better. Marrying to increase love is like gaming to become rich; you only lose what little stock you had before.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wits. Act iv.

⁸ A good marriage (if any there be) refuse: the company and conditions of love; it en deavors to present those of amity.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

I see no marriages fail sooner, or more troubled than such as are concluded for beauty's sake, and huddled up for amorous desires.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

You cannot pluck roses without fear of thorns. Nor enjoy a fair wife without danger of horns.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

⁹ Where I love I must not marry,
Where I marry, cannot love.

THOMAS MOORE, Love and Marriage.

They gied him my hand, tho' my heart was at sea.

¹⁰ The garlands fade, the vows are worn away;
So dies her love, and so my hopes decay.

POPE, Pastorals: Autumn, l. 69.

¹¹ How oft, when press'd to marriage, have I said,
Curse on all laws but those which Love has made!

Love, free as air, at sight of human ties,
Spreads his light wings, and in a moment flies.
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 73.

¹² Marry for love and work for siller.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Who marries for love without money, bath merry nights and sorry days.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

¹³ Love as a relation between men and women was ruined by the desire to make sure of the legitimacy of children.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Marriage and Morals, p. 27.

¹⁴ I will marry her, sir, at your request; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance. . . . I hope, upon familiarity will grow more contempt: I will marry her; that I am freely dissolved, and dissolutely.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 1, l. 253.

¹⁵ 'Tis safest in matrimony to begin with a little aversion.

SHERRIDAN, The Rivals. Act ii, sc. 2.

¹⁶ If they only married when they fell in love, most people would die unwed.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Ch. 1.

The Lion is the King of Beasts, but he is scarcely suitable for a domestic pet. In the same way, I suspect love is rather too violent a passion to make a good domestic sentiment.

R. L. STVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Ch. 1.

1 Venus, a beautiful, good-natured lady, was the goddess of love; Juno, a terrible shrew, the goddess of marriage: and they were always mortal enemies.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

2 The only thing that can hallow marriage is love, and the only genuine marriage is that which is hallowed by love.

LEO TOLSTOY, The Kreutzer Sonata. Ch. 2.

3 All true love is grounded on esteem.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKK OF BUCKINGHAM, True Love.

Wedded love is founded on esteem.

ELIJAH FENTON, Marianna.

4 One should always be in love. That is the reason one should never marry.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act III.

IX—Marriage: Made in Heaven

5 True it is that marriages be done in heaven and performed on earth.

WM. FAIRBANK, Palace of Pleasure. III, 24. (1567)

Marriages are made in heaven and consummated on earth:

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act iv, sc. 1.

(1590) The French have the same proverb, "Les mariages se font au ciel, et se consomment sur la terre."

6 Marriage is destiny, made in heaven.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. (1590)

7 Matches are made in heaven.

That earliest wedding-day,

The primal marriage blessing,

It hath not passed away.

JOHN KEEL, Holy Matrimony.

17 Nothing is to me more distasteful than that entire complacency and satisfaction which beam in the faces of a new-married couple,—in that of the lady particularly.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: A Bachelor's Complaint.

18 Fair Concord, ever abide by their couch, and to so well matched a pair may Venus ever be propitious. (Candida perpetuo reside, Concordia, lecta, Tamque pari semper sit Venus æqua iugo.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. IV, epig. 11.

God the best maker of all marriages
Combine your hearts in one.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 386.

1 What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 6.

What God hath joined together no man shall ever put asunder: God will take care of that.

BERNARD SHAW, Getting Married.

Under this window in stormy weather
I marry this man and woman together;
Let none but Him who rules the thunder
Put this man and woman asunder.

SWIFT, Marriage Services from His Chamber Window.

Yet 'tis "so nominated in the bond."

That both are tied till one shall have expired.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 7.

2 To church in the morning, and there saw a wedding in the church, which I have not seen many a day; and the young people so merry one with another! and strange to see what delight we married people have to see these poor fools decoyed into our condition, every man and woman gazing and smiling at them.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 25 Dec., 1665.

To church the parties went,
At once with carnal and devout intent.

POPE, January and May, l. 309.

3 You've picked an unlucky day for changing your name. (Ne hodie malo cum auspicio nomen commutaveris.)

PLAUTUS, Astineria, l. 373. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

4 Wooed, and married, and a'
Married, and wooed, and a'
And was she nœ very weel off
That was wooed, and married, and a'?

ALEXANDER ROSS, Song.

5 But who ever heard of a marriage deterred
Or even deferred
By any contrivance so very absurd
As scolding the boy, and caging his bird?

J. G. SAXE, Pyramus and Thisbe.

6 A man may weep upon his wedding day.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Prologue, l. 32.

7 Till holy church incorporate two in one.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 5,
l. 37.

Since first he called her his before the holy man.
CAMPELLE, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 130.

8 I must marry the girl first, and ask his consent afterwards.

R. B. SHERRIDAN, St. Patrick's Day. Act i, sc. 1.

9 Behold, whiles she before the altar stands,
Hearing the holy priest that to her speaks,

And blesseth her with his two happy hands,
How the red roses flush up in her cheeks,
And the pure snow with goodly vermeil stair
Like crimson dyed in grain:
That even th' angels, which continually
About the sacred altar do remain,
Forget their service and about her fly,
Off peeping in her face, that seems more fair
The more they on it stare.

SPENSER, Epithalamion, l. 223.

Against their bridal day, which is not long:
Sweet Thames, run softly, till I end my song.

SPENSER, Prothalamion, l. 35.

10 Now when they sever wedded hands,
Joy trembles in their bosom-strands,
And lovely laughter leaps and falls
Upon their lips in madrigals.

R. L. STEVENSON, Underwoods. No. 4.

11 What woman, however old, has not the bridal-favours and raiment stowed away, and packed in lavender, in the inmost cupboards of her heart?

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 33.

12 Design, or chance makes others wive,
But nature did this match contrive.

EDMUND WALLER, Marriage of the Dwarfs.

13 A manly form at her side she saw,
And joy was duty, and love was law.

WHITTIER, Maud Muller.

XI—Marriage: Bride and Bridegroom

14 The bride bath paced into the hall,
Red as a rose is she.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. i.

Holy and pure are the drops that fall
When the young bride goes from her father's hall.

FELICIA HEMANS, The Bride of the Greek Isle.

15 Blest is the Bride on whom the sun doth shine.

ROBERT HERRICK, A Nuptial Song.

Blessed is the corpse that the rain falls on;
Blessed is the bride that the sun shines on.

WILLIAM HORE, Table-Book, 667.

Fair weather weddings make fair weather lives.

RICHARD HOEVEY, The Marriage of Guinevere.
Act i, sc. 3.

16 As the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride.
Old Testament: Isaiah, lxii, 5.

As are those dulcet sounds in break of day
That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear
And summon him to marriage.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 51.

17 A bonny bride is soon bunsit.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

¹ And you, brides and bridegrooms all,
With measure heap'd in joy to the measures
fall.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 4,
l. 184.

² A happy bridesmaid makes a happy bride,
TENNYSON, The Bridesmaid.

Bridesmaids may soon be brides; one wedding brings on another.

C. H. SPURKSON, Salt-Cellars.

XII—Marriage: the Honeymoon

³ Is Venus odious to brides? Or do they mock their parents with false tears, which they shed plentifully within their virgin bowers?
CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lvi, l. 15.

⁴ More anxious than ever bride was on her wedding night, when wishes, hopes, fears, and doubts, tumultuously agitate, please, and terrify her.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 June, 1752.

⁵ 'Tis not beauty that witheth bridegrooms, but nobleness. (Ὁ δὲ κάλλος ἀλλ' ἀρεταί τίθεται τοῖς ἐννύμφαις.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 208.

O lady, nobility is thine, and thy form is the reflection of thy nature!

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 238.

Solon had the bride eat a quince the first night of marriage, intimating thereby, it seems, that the bridegroom was to expect his first pleasure from the bride's mouth and conversation.

PLUTARCH, Morals: Conjugal Precepts, Sec. 2.

⁶ Need we expose to vulgar sight
The raptures of the bridal night? . . .
Let it suffice, that each had charms;
He clasp'd a goddess in his arms;
And, though she felt his usage rough,
Yet in a man 'twas well enough.

GOLDSMITH, The Double Transformation, l. 21.

⁷ The moon, the moon, so silver and cold,
Her fickle temper has oft been told,
Now shady—now bright and sunny—
But of all the lunar things that change,
The one that shows most fickle and strange,
And takes the most eccentric range,
Is the moon—so called—of honey!

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Honeymoon.

Other rites

Observing none, but adoration pure
Which God likes best, into their inmost bower

Handed they went; and eas'd the putting off
These troublesome disguises which we wear,

Straight side by side were laid; nor turn'd,
I ween,
Adam from his fair spouse, nor Eve the rites

Mysterious of connubial love refus'd:
Whatever hypocrites austere talk
Of purity and place and innocence,
Defaming as impure what God declares
Pure, and commands to some, leaves free to all.

Our Maker bids increase; who bids abstain
But our destroyer, foe to God and Man?
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 736.

She what was honour knew,
And with obsequious majesty approv'd
My pleaded reason. To the nuptial bow'r
I led her blushing like the morn: all Heav'n
And happy constellations on that hour
Shed their selectest influence; the earth
Gave sign of gratulation, and each hill;
Joyous the birds; fresh gales and gentle airs
Whisper'd it to the woods, and from their wings
Flung rose, flung odours from the spicy shrub.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 508.

⁸ When a couple are newly-married, the first month is honey-moon or smick-smack;
The second is hither and thither: the third is thwack thwack:

The fourth, the Devil take them that brought thee and I together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 53.

¹⁰ To-night,
When I should take possession of the bride.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 5, l. 28.

Surfeiting in joys of love, With his new bride.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 252.

¹¹ Put off your shame with your clothes when you go in to your husband, and put it on again when you come out.

THEANO, wife of Pythagoras, advising a woman. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras.
Bk. viii, sec. 43.)

¹² All the women we need are inside, said the bridegroom, and closed the door on the bride.

THEOCYTUS, Idyls. No. xv, l. 77.

XIII—Marriage: Man and Wife

¹³ Thus in the East they are extremely strict,
And wedlock and a padlock mean the
same; . . .

But then their own polygamy's to blame;
Why don't they knead two virtuous souls
for life

Into that moral centaur, man and wife?
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 158. This stanza, which Byron composed in bed, 28
Feb., 1821, was omitted by his publisher

from the first edition of the poem, but replaced in subsequent editions when Byron protested in a fury "that I will not permit any human being to take such liberties with my writings."

¹ Valentine: The two greatest monsters in the world are a man and a woman.

Sir Sampson Legend: Why my opinion is that those two monsters, joined together, make a yet greater, that's a man and his wife.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act iv, sc. 2.
Composed that monstrous animal, a husband and wife.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xv, ch. 9.

² The reason that husbands and wives do not understand each other is because they belong to different sexes.

DOROTHY DIX, in her syndicated column.

³ Pure, as the charities above,
Rise the sweet sympathies of love;
And closer chords than those of life
Unite the husband to the wife.

JOHN LOGAN, The Lovers.

⁴ There is no such cosy combination as man and wife. (Oniscus obitav obiter dicitur in drap re sal' yourt.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 647.

Husband and wife come to look alike at last.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table, Ch. 7.

⁵ Men are April when they woo, December when they wed: maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 147.

They dream in courtship, but in wedlock wake.
POPE, The Wife of Bath, l. 103.

You must not contrast too strongly the hours of courtship with the years of possession.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 17 March, 1845.

⁶ He is the half part of a blessed man
Left to be finished by such as she;
And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fulness of perfection lies in him.
O, two such silver currents, when they join,
Do glorify the banks that bound them in!

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 437.

XIV—Marriage: Its Pleasures

⁷ And such a bliss is there betwixt them two
That, save the joy that lasteth evermo',
There is none like, that any creature
Hath seen or shall, while that the world may dure.

CHAUCER, Man of Law's Tale, l. 1075.

The joys of marriage are the heaven on earth,
Life's paradise, great princes, the soul's quiet,
Sins of concord, earthly immortality,
Eternity of pleasures.

JOHN FORD, The Broken Heart. Act I, sc. 2
l. 102.

⁸ Thus hand in hand through life we'll go;
Its checkered paths of joy and woe
With cautious steps we'll tread.

NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside. St. 31.

⁹ As your wedding ring wears,
You'll wear off your cares.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologies. No. 6146.

¹⁰ Remember the nightingales which sing only some months in the spring, but commonly are silent when they have hatched their eggs, as if their mirth were turned into care for their young ones. Yet all the molestations of Marriage are abundantly recompensed with other comforts which God bestoweth on them who make a wise choice of a wife.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State.

As the birds do, so do we,
Bill our mate, and choose our tree.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Three Singers to Young Blood.

¹¹ Thrice happy they whom an unbroken bond unites,
And whom no quarrel shall sunder before life's final day.

(*Felices ter et amplius,
Quos inrupta tenet copula nec malis
Divulsus querimonis

HORACE, Odes. Bk. I, ode 13, l. 17.

¹² There is, indeed, nothing that so much se-duces reason from vigilance, as the thought of passing life with an amiable woman.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, I, 381.)

¹³ Ay, marriage is the life-long miracle,
The self-begetting wonder, daily fresh.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act
II, sc. 9.

¹⁴ Not caged, my bird, my ah, sweet bird,
But nested—nested!

HARRINGTON LULHAM, Nested.

¹⁵ Let nothing break our bond but Death,
For in the world above
'Tis the breaker Death that soldereth
Our ring of Wedded Love.

GERALD MASSEY, On a Wedding Day. St. 11.

¹⁶ Blest pair; and O yet happiest if ye seek
No happier state, and know to know no
more.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. IV, l. 774.

¹ Grave authors say, and witty poets sing,
That honest wedlock is a glorious thing.
POPE, January and May, l. 21.

The married man may bear his yoke with ease,
Secure at once himself and Heav'n to please;
And pass his inoffensive hours away,
In bliss all night, and innocence all day:
Tho' fortune change, his constant spouse remains,
Augments his joys, or mitigates his pains.
POPE, January and May, l. 37.

² Purest Love's unwasting treasure,
Constant faith, fair hope, long leisure,
Days of ease, and nights of pleasure,
Sacred Hymen! these are thine.
POPE, Tragedy of Brutus: Chorus.

³ The sacred academy of man's life,
Is holy wedlock in a happy wife.
FRANCIS QUAREZ, History of Queen Esther.
Sec. lii, mtd. 3.

⁴ One year of joy, another of comfort, and all the rest of content.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. A marriage wish.

⁵ But happy they! the happiest of their kind!
Whom gentler stars unite, and in one fate
Their hearts, their fortunes, and their beings blend.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 1113.

⁶ Thrice happy is that humble pair,
Beneath the level of all care,
Over whose heads those arrows fly
Of sad distrust and jealousy.
EDMUND WALLER, The Marriage of the Dwarfs,
l. 7.

XV.—Marriage: Its Pains

⁷ Though women are angels, yet wedlock's the devil.
BYRON, To Eliza. Quoted.

⁸ Here's a happy new year! but with reason
I beg you'll permit me to say—
Wish me many returns of the season,
But as few as you please of the day.
BYRON, On My Wedding-Day.

This day, of all our days, has done
The worst for me and you:—
'Tis just six years since we were one,
And five since we were two.
BYRON, To Penelope, 2 Jan., 1821.

⁹ We wedded men live in sorrow and care.
CHAUCER, The Merchant's Prologue, l. 16.

¹⁰ Man and wife,
Coupled together for the sake of strife.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rivalry, l. 1005.

War is no strife,
To the dark house and the detested wife.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii,
sc. 3, l. 308.

Body and soul, like peevish man and wife,
United jar, and yet are loath to part.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 175.

¹¹ Oh! how many torments lie in the small circle of a wedding-ring!
COLLEY CIBBER, Double Gallies. Act. i, sc. 2.

¹² The kindest and the happiest pair
Will find occasion to forbear,
And something every day they live
To pity, and, perhaps, forgive.
COWPER, Mutual Forbearance Necessary to the Happiness of the Married State.

¹³ If a man stay away from his wife for seven years, the law presumes the separation to have killed him; yet, according to our daily experience, it might well prolong his life.
CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Saindus Juris.

¹⁴ The victim o' connubiality.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20.

When you're a married man, Samivel, you'll understand a good many things as you don't understand now; but vether it's worth while goin' through so much to learn so little, as the charity boy said ven he got to the end of the alphabet, is a matter o' taste.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 27.

¹⁵ Falsely your Church seven sacraments does frams;
Penance and Matrimony are the same.
RICHARD DURE, To a Roman Catholic Friend upon Marriage.

¹⁶ I don't think matrimony consistent with the liberty of the subject.
FARQUHAR, The Twin Rivals. Act v, sc. 3.

'Tis a kind of bilboes to be married.
FLETCHER, The Wild Goose Chase. Act i, sc. 2.
The married man turns his staff into a stake.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentium.

But married once,
A man is staked or pound'd, and cannot graze
Beyond his own hedge.
MARRINGER, The Fetal Dowry. Act iv, sc. 1.

No man with such a faithful true intelligence at his side would ever stray far from his reservation.
DAN QUIN, Scrapbook, 29 Jan., 1892, p. 32, referring to William Jennings Bryan.

¹⁷ When the husband is fire and the wife tow,
the devil easily sets all in a flame.
THOMAS FULLER, Græmologia. No. 3594.

¹⁸ They that marry ancient people, marry expectation to bury them, hang themselves,

in hope that one will come and cut the halter.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States: Of Marriage.

1 The husband's sullen, dogged, shy,
The wife grows flippant in reply;
He loves command and due restriction,
And she as well likes contradiction.
She never slavishly submits,
She'll have her will, or have her fits;
He his way tugs, she t'other draws;
The man grows jealous, and with cause.

JOHN GAY, Cupid, Hymen, and Plutus.

2 Yet Wedlock's a very awful thing!
'Tis something like that feat in the ring,
Which requires good nerve to do it—
When one of a "Grand Equestrian Troop"
Makes a jump at a gilded hoop,

Not certain at all

Of what may befall

After his getting through it!

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Marriage. St. 19.

3 It is so far from natural for a man and a woman to live in the state of marriage, that we find all the motives which they have for remaining in that connection, and the restraints which civilized society imposes to prevent separation, are hardly sufficient to keep them together.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1772.)

4 No man likes to live under the eye of perpetual disapprobation.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1772.)

You may think you had a conscience, but what is a conscience to a wife? . . . To marry is to domesticate the Recording Angel.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. ii.

5 What! Posthumus, are you, who once had your wits, taking to yourself a wife? What snakes are driving you mad? Can you submit to a she-tyrant when there is so much rope to be had, so many dizzy heights of windows standing open?

1 A young man married is a man that's marr'd
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
II, sc. 3, l. 315.

2 O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures
ours,
And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others' uses
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act III, sc. 3, l. 268.

3 She's not well married that lives married

6 The best of men and the best of women may sometimes live together all their lives, and
. . . hold each other lost spirits to the end
R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I.
Even if we take matrimony at its lowest, even if we regard it as no more than a sort of friendship recognized by the police.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I.
Once you are married, there is nothing left for you, not even suicide, but to be good.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I.

7 As the husband is, the wife is; thou art
mated with a clown,
And the grossness of his nature will have weight to drag thee down

He will hold thee, when his passion shall have spent its novel force,
Something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall. l. 47.

Alas! for all the pretty women who marry dull
men,
Go into the suburbs and never come out
again. . . .

What do these pretty women suffer when they marry?

They bear a boy who is like Uncle Harry.
ANNA WICKHAM, Mediation at Kew.

8 It is he who has broken the bond of marriage—not I I only break its bondage.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, xi, 74.

⁵ Celibates replace sentiment by habits.
GEORGE MOORE, Impressions. Paraphrasing Balzac.

⁶ Marriage may often be a stormy lake, but celibacy is almost always a muddy horsepond.

T. L. PEACOCK, Melincourt. Ch. 7.

⁷ Let sinful bachelors their woes deplore,
Full well they merit all they feel, and more.
POPE, January and May, l. 29.

⁸ Thrice-blessed they that master so their
blood,

To undergo such maiden pilgrimage;
But earthlier happy is the rose distill'd,
Than that which, withering on the virgin
thorn,

Grows, lives and dies in single blessedness.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 74.

⁹ Shall I never see a bachelor of threescore
again?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 201.

The world must be peopled. When I said, I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till
I were married.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 251.

¹⁰ If you wish the pick of men and women,
take a good bachelor and a good wife.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

It is not for nothing that Don Quixote was a bachelor and Marcus Aurelius married ill.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

¹¹ Celibate, like the fly in the heart of an apple, dwells in a perpetual sweetness, but sits alone, and is confined and dies in singularity

JEREMY TAYLOR, Sermons: The Marriage Ring.

¹² The happy married man dies in good stile a home, surrounded by his weeping wife and children. The old bachelor don't die at all—he sort of rots away, like a pollywog's tail
ARTEMUS WARD, The Draft in Baldinsville.

¹³ Nowadays all the married men live like bachelors, and all the bachelors like married men.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15.
Married men are viler than bachelors.

A. W. PINERO, Preserving Mr. Panmure. Act ii.

¹⁴ I never married, and I wish my father never had. (Μὴ γάμου αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ μὴδ' ὁ πατήρ.)

UNKNOWN, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 309.)

I'm Smith of Stoke, aged sixty-odd,

I've lived without a dame

From youth-time on; and would to God

My dad had done the same.

THOMAS HARDY, Epitaph on a Pessimist.

XVII—Marriage: The Ins and the Outs

¹⁵ Wedlock, indeed, hath oft compared been
To public feasts, where meet a public rout,
Where they that are without would fain go
in,

And they that are within would fain go out.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, The Married State. (1612)

Wedlock, as old men note, hath likened been Unto a public crowd or common rout;
Where those that are without would fain get in,
And those that are within would fain get out.
Grief oft treads upon the heels of pleasure,
Marry'd in haste, we oft repent at leisure;
Some by experience find these words misplaced,
Marry'd at leisure, they repent in haste.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

Oh, could he have my share of din,

And I his quiet!—past a doubt

'Twould still be one man bored within,

And just another bored without.

J. R. LOWELL, Without and Within.

¹⁶ It happens as with cages: the birds without despair to get in, and those within despair of getting out.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Is not marriage an open question, when it is alleged, from the beginning of the world, that such as are in the institution wish to get out, and such as are out wish to get in.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

'Tis just like a summer bird cage in a garden;
the birds that are without despair to get in, and the birds that are within despair, and are in a consumption, for fear they shall never get out.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act i, sc. 2.

¹ Marriage is like a beleaguered fortress; those who are without want to get in, and those within want to get out. (Le mariage est comme une forteresse assiégée; ceux qui sont dehors veulent y entrer et ceux qui sont dedans en sortir.)

QUITTARD, Études sur Proverbes Français, p. 102.

I'd rather be outside a-looking in than on the inside a-looking out.

TED SNYDER, Title and refrain of popular song. (1906)

² Marriage is a desperate thing: the frogs in Æsop were extreme wise; they had a great mind to some water, but they would not leap into the well, because they could not get out again.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Marriage.

³ People who share a cell in the Bastille, or are thrown together on an uninhabited isle, if they do not immediately fall to fisticuffs, will find some possible ground of compromise.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

⁴ The reason why so few marriages are happy is because young ladies spend their time in making nets, not in making cages.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

XVIII—Marriage: Second Marriage

⁵ Women who have been happy in a first marriage, are the most apt to venture upon a second.

ADDISON, The Drummer. Act ii, sc. 1.

⁶ When widows exclaim loudly against second marriages, I would always lay a wager that the man, if not the wedding-day, is absolutely fixed on.

FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. vi, ch. 8.

⁷ For I'm not so old, and I'm not so plain, And I'm quite prepared to marry again.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act i.

⁸ He loves his bonds, who, when the first are broke,

Submits his neck unto a second yoke.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 42.

⁹ Alas! another instance of the triumph of hope over experience.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to the second marriage of a friend who had been unhappy with his first wife. (BOSWELL, Life, 1770, quoting from the Collectanea of Dr. William Maxwell.)

¹⁰ Christ saw a wedding once, the Scripture says,
And saw but one, 'twas thought, in all his days;

MARTYR AND MARTYRDOM 1279

Whence some infer, whose conscience is too nice,

No pious Christian ought to marry twice.

POPE, The Wife of Bath, l. 9.

¹¹ Disagreeable suspicions are usually the fruits of a second marriage. (Les soupçons importuns Sont d'un second hymen les fruits les plus communs.)

RACINE, Phèdre. Act ii, sc. 5.

¹² In second husband let me be accurst!

None wed the second but who killed the first.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 189.

The instances that second marriage move
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love:

A second time I kill my husband dead

When second husband kisses me in bed.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 192.

¹³ I think you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your first.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 224.

¹⁴ Alas, she married another. They frequently do. I hope she is happy—because I am.

ARTEMUS WARD, Lecture.

¹⁵ When a man marries again it is because he adored his first wife.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15.

¹⁶ A tear is an intellectual thing,
And a sigh is the sword of an Angel King,
And the bitter groan of the martyr's woe
Is an arrow from the Almighty's bow.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Grey Monk.

¹⁷ Commend me to the king, and tell him he is constant in his course of advancing me; from a private gentlewoman he made me a marquise, and from a marquise a queen; and now, as he had left no higher degree of earthly honour, he hath made me a martyr.

ANNE BOLEYN, on the way to execution. (FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms, No. 9.)

¹⁸ The noble army of martyrs.

Book of Common Prayer: Morning Prayer.

¹⁹ Plaintive martyrs, worthy of the name.

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night.

²⁰ To know how to say what others only know how to think is what makes men poets or sages; and to dare to say what others only dare to think makes men martyrs or reformers—or both.

- Stern saints and tortured martyrs frowned
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi
st. 29.
- 16 Of one, whose naked soul stood clad in love
Like a pale martyr in his shirt of fire.
ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc ii, l. 225 Pycroft (Ways and Means of Men of Letters) reports Smith's printer as saying, "We utterly ruined one poet through a ridiculous misprint of 'shirt' for 'sheet,'" but there is no foundation for the story, as the line is not a misprint.
- 17 And martyrs, when the joyful crown is

Forget the pain by which they purchased heaven
GEORGE STEPHEN, To King James II.
- Martyrs by the pang without the palm.
E. B. BROWNING.
- 18 The more ye mow us down, the more quickly
we grow; the blood of Christians is fresh seed. (Mures effluimur quoties metimur a vobis; semen est sanguis Christianorum.)
TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus Ch. 50. Generally quoted, "The blood of martyrs is the seed of the Church."
- The blood of martyrs is the seed of Christians.

I—Medicine: Definitions

17 Medicine is a science which hath been, as we have said, more professed than laboured, and yet more laboured than advanced: the labour having been, in my judgment, rather in circle than in progression.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

¹ Surely every medicine is an innovation; and he that will not apply new remedies, must expect new evils.

BACON, Essays: Of Innovations.

² Then comes the question, how do drugs, hygiene and animal magnetism heal? It may be affirmed that they do not heal, but only relieve suffering temporarily, exchanging one disease for another.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 483.

³ Dr. Bigelow's formula was, that fevers are self-limiting; afterwards that all disease is so; therefore no use in treatment. Dr. Holmes said, No use in drugs. Dr. Samuel Jackson said, Rest, absolute rest, is the panacea.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1860.

Our foster nurse of nature is repose.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 12.

⁴ By opposites opposites are cured. (Tà énarria vav (vavriav toriv liguara.)

HIPPOCRATES, De Flatibus. Vol. i, p. 570.

In diseases, less [of everything]. (In motbis minus.)

HIPPOCRATES. Quoted by Bacon as "a good, profound aphorism."

Like cures like. (Similia similibus curantur.)

HAEHNEMANN, Motto, for the homoeopathic school of medicine which he founded, and which he attributed to Hippocrates, quoting: "By similar things disease is produced, and by similar things administered to the sick, they are healed of their diseases," a sentence derived from Ilepi rotur vav kar' ávθpwrov, attributed to Hippocrates.

Take a little rum

The less you take the better,

Pour it in the lakes

Of Wener or of Wetter.

Dip a spoonful out

And mind you don't get groggy,

Pour it in the lake

Of Winnipisslogie.

Stir the mixture well

Lest it prove inferior,

Then put half a drop

Into Lake Superior.

Every other day

Take a drop in water,

You'll be better soon

Or at least you oughter.

GEORGE WASHINGTON DOANE, Lines on Homoeopathy.

⁵ I firmly believe that if the whole materia medica could be sunk to the bottom of the sea, it would be all the better for mankind and all the worse for the fishes.

O. W. HOLMES, Lectures, Harvard Medical School.

⁶ In physic things of melancholic hue and quality are used against melancholy, sour against sour, salt to remove salt humours.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes: Preface.

⁷ Medicine is a collection of uncertain prescriptions, the results of which, taken collectively, are more fatal than useful to mankind. Water, air, and cleanliness are the chief articles in my pharmacopoeia.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, to Dr. Antomarchi at St. Helena.

⁸ Oft has a bitter medicine brought help to the languishing. (Sæpe tulit lassia sucus amarus opem.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 8.

We cannot endure sweets; a bitter potion strengthens us. (Dulcia non ferimus: suco renovemur amaro.)

OVID, Art Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 583.

For 'tis a physic That's bitter to sweet end.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 7.

⁹ The art of medicine is a question of time: wine timely given helps, untimely, harms. (Temporis ars medicina fere est: data tempore prosunt, Et data non apto tempore vina nocent.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 131.

Medicine sometimes injures, sometimes restores health; showing which plant is healthful and which harmful. (Eripit interdum, modo dat medicina salutem, Quæque juvet, monstrat, quæque ait herba nocens.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 269.

There is no medicine to remove the knotty gout, or relieve the fearful dropsy. (Tollere nodosam nescit medicina podagram, Nec formaditis auxiliatur aquis.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 3, l. 23.

¹⁰ Nothing hinders a cure so much as frequent change of medicine. (Nihil æque sanitatem impedit quam remediorum crebra mutatio.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epia. ii, sec. 3.

Remedies do not avail unless they remain in the system. (Remedia non prosunt, nisi immorantur.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epia. xi, sec. 4.

Not even medicines can master incurable diseases. (Ne medicina quidem morbos insanabiles vincit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epia. xciv, 24.

¹¹ From the nature of human frailty, remedies operate more slowly than disease, and the body itself is slow to grow and quick to decay. (Natura tamen infirmitatis humanæ tardè diors sunt remedia quam mala; et ut corpora nostra lente augeantur, cito extinguuntur.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3.

II.—Medicine: Apothegms

¹ Dogs with their tongues their wounds do heal,
But men with hands, as thou shalt feel.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 773.

² Because all the sick do not recover does not prove that there is no art of medicine. (Ne agri quidem quis non omnes convalescant idcirco ars nulla medicina est.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 4, 12.

³ When taken To be well shaken.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Newcastle Apothecary.

⁴ Though I have patches on me pantaloons, I've ne'er a wan on me intestines.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Thanksgiving.

⁵ For of the most High cometh healing.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxviii, 2.

God who sends the wound sends the medicine. (Dios que dá la laga, dá la medicina.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 19.

A salve there is for every sore.

UNKNOWN, School-House of Women, l. 401. (1542) See also GOD: HIS MERCY.

⁶ Many dishes, many diseases. Many medicines, few cures.

For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 254.

Is this the poultice for my aching bones?

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 5, l. 66.

You rub the sore,
When you should bring the plaster.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 138.

⁸ Some fell by laudanum, and some by steel,
And death in ambush lay in every pill.

GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto iv, l. 62.

⁹ Strange and rare escapes there happen sometimes in physic. (Monstra contingunt in medicina.)

HIPPOCRATES, Adagia.

Many men have been cured of diseases by accidents; but they were not remedies.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Beneficia.

¹⁰ The worst about medicine is that one kind makes another necessary.

'Twas a dangerous cliff, as they freely confessed,
Though to walk near its crest was so pleasant,
But over its terrible edge there had slipped

A Duke and full many a peasant;

So the people said something would have to be done,

But their projects did not at all tally.

Some said: "Put a fence round the edge of the cliff."

Some: "An ambulance down in the valley."

SENeca, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epist. civ, 18.

¹⁸ It is part of the cure to wish to be cured. (Pars sanitatis velle sanari fuit.)

SENeca, Hippolytus, l. 249.

Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,

Which we ascribe to heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act I, sc. 1, l. 231.

1 Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 3, l. 47.

Out, loathed medicine! hated potion, hence!

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 264.

Trust not the physician;

His antidotes are poison, and he slays

More than you rob.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 434.

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 28.

7 The medicine increases the disease. (Ægrecitque medendo.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 46.

IV—Medicine: Desperate Remedies

8 No remedies cause so much pain as those which are efficacious. (Nulla remedia tam faciunt dolorem quam que sunt salutaria.)

BACON, Letter to Lord Henry Howard. Quoted.

9 'Tis not amiss, ere ye're giv'n o'er,

To try one desp'rate med'cine more;

For where your case can be no worse,

The desp'rat'st is the wisest course.

BUTLER, Epistle of Hudibras to Sirophobus, l. 5.

And ill it therefore suits

The mood of one of my high temperature

To pause inactive while await me means

Of desperate cure for those so desperate ill.

THOMAS HARDY, The Dynasts. Act iv, sc. 3.

10 Extreme remedies are very appropriate for extreme diseases.

HIPPOCRATES, Adagia.

11 When desperate ill demand a speedy cure,

Distrust is cowardice, and prudence folly.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 87.

12 For the strongest maladies the strongest remedies. (Aux plus fortes maladies les plus forts remèdes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

13 No one tries desperate remedies at first. (Extrema primo nemo tentavit loco.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 153.

14 Diseases desperate grown

By desperate appliance are relieved,

Or not at all.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 9. (1602)

A desperate disease must have a desperate cure.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Humourists, iv. (1670)

Strong disease requires a strong medicine.

TAVERNER, Proverbs, Fo. iv. (1539)

V—Medicine: Herbs as Medicine

15 The Lord hath created medicines out of the earth; and he that is wise will not abhor them.

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xxviii, 4.

16 And in requital ope his leathern scrip,

And show me simples of a thousand names,

Telling their strange and vigorous faculties.

MILTON, Comus, l. 626.

17 No cataplasm so rare,

Collected from all simples that have virtue

Under the moon, can save the thing from death.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 144.

In such a night

Medea gather'd the enchanted herbs

That did renew old Æson.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchants of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 12.

18 O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies

In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 15.

19 He preferred to know the power of herbs and their value for curing purposes, and, heedless of glory, to exercise that quiet art. (Scire

potestates herbarum usumque medendi

Maluit et mutas agitare inglorius artis.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 396.

Learn from the beasts the physic of the field.

II—Meeting and Parting

¹⁵ Like a plank of driftwood

Tossed on the watery main,

Another plank encountered,

Meets, touches, parts again;

So tossed, and drifting ever,

On life's unresting sea.

Men meet, and greet, and sever,

Parting eternally

EDWIN ARNOLD, Book of Good Counsel. A free

12 There is no greater cause of melancholy than idleness; "no better cure than business," as Rhasis holds.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

Employment, sir, and hardships, prevent melancholy.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1777.)

13 If there be a hell upon earth it is to be found in a melancholy man's heart.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. 4, mem. 1, subs. 2.

That feral melancholy which crucifies the soul.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. 2, mem. 1, subs. 2.

14 As melancholy as an unbraced drum.

SUSANNAH CANTLIVER, Wonder. Act ii, sc. 1.

15 Melancholy was made, not for beasts, but for men; but if men give way to it overmuch they turn to beasts.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 11.

16 With eyes up-raised, as one inspir'd,

Pale Melancholy sate retir'd;

And, from her wild, sequester'd seat,

In notes by distance made more sweet,

Pour'd thro' the mellow horn her pensive soul.

WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 57.

17 There is a kindly mood of melancholy
That wings the soul, and points her to the skies.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Ruins of Rome, l. 346.

18 There's naught in this life sweet,
If man were wise to see 't,

But only melancholy;

O sweetest Melancholy!

JOHN FLACCA, The Nice Valour. Act iii, sc. 3.
(c. 1620) Written probably in conjunction with Thomas Middleton. This song has also been attributed to Dr. William Strode, and appears in his play The Floating Island.
(1636)

All my joys to this are folly,
Naught so sweet as melancholy.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy:
The Author's Abstract.

All my grieis to this are jolly,
Naught so dam'd as melancholy.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy:
The Author's Abstract.

1 Tell us, pray, what devil
This melancholy is, which can transform
Men into monsters.

JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 107.

2 Melancholy
Is not, as you conceive, indisposition
Of body, but the mind's disease.

JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 111.

3 Here rests his head upon the lap of Earth,
A Youth, to Fortune and to Fame unknown.
Fair Science frown'd not on his humble birth,
And Melancholy mark'd him for her own.
THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard: The Epitaph*.

4 All things are touch'd with Melancholy,
Born of the secret soul's mistrust.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Melancholy, l. 109.

There's not a string attun'd to mirth
But has its chord in Melancholy.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Melancholy, l. 121.

5 Melancholy is the pleasure of being sad.
VICTOR HUGO, Toilers of the Sea. Pt. iii, bk. i,
ch. 1.

Go! you may call it madness, folly;
You shall not chase my gloom away!
There's such a charm in melancholy
I would not if I could be gay.

SAMUEL ROGERS, To —.

And yet I cannot tell thee why,
I'm pleased and yet I'm sad.
H. K. WHITE, I'm Pleased and Yet I'm Sad.

6 Sit melancholy and pick your teeth when you cannot speak.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour.
Act i, sc. 2.

7 She dwells with Beauty—Beauty that must die;

And Joy, whose hand is ever at his lips
Bidding adieu; and aching Pleasure nigh,
Turning to Poison while the bee-mouth
sips;

Aye, in the very temple of Delight
Vell'd Melancholy has her sovran shrine,
Though seen of none save him whose strenuous tongue

Can burst Joy's grape against his palate fine;

His soul shall taste the sadness of her might,
And be among her cloudy trophies hung.

KEATS, Ode on Melancholy. St. 3.

7 It is a kind of happiness to know just how unhappy one should be. (C'est une espèce de bonheur de connaître jusqu'à quel point on doit être malheureux.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées, §70.

8 A feeling of sadness and longing
That is not akin to pain,

And resembles sorrow only
As the mist resembles the rain.

LONGFELLOW, The Day Is Done. St. 3.

9 But hail, thou Goddess, sage and holy,
Hail, divinest Melancholy,
Whose Saintly visage is too bright
To hit the Sense of human sight.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 11.

These pleasures, Melancholy, give;
And I with thee will choose to live.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 175.

10 Hence, loathed Melancholy,
Of Cerberus, and blackest midnight born,
In Stygian cave forlorn,
'Mongst horrid shapes, and shrieks and sights unholy!

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 1.

Moping melancholy, And moon-struck madness,

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 485.

11 Oh! when a cheek is to be dried,
All pharmacy is folly; . . .
There's nothing like a rattling ride
For curing melancholy!

W. M. PRAED, The Troubadour.

12 He has a cloud in 's face.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 51.

Love, I am full of lead.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,
sc. 11, l. 72.

13 I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 13.

I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is emulation; nor the musician's, which is fantastical; nor the courtier's, which is proud; nor the soldier's, which is ambitious; nor the lawyer's, which is politic; nor the lady's, which is nice;
nor the lover's, which is all these: but it is a melancholy of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects, and indeed the sundry contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me in a most humorous sadness.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 10.

1 O melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish crate

Might easiliest harbour in?

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 203.

2 There's something in his soul,
O'er which his melancholy sits on brood.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 174.

Oh! the good times when we were so unhappy.
(Oh le bon temps où étions si malheureux.)

DUMAS, Le Chevalier d'Harmenai. Bk. ii, p. 318.

Oh! that was the good time; I was very unhappy.
(Oh! c'était le bon temps; j'étais bien malheureuse.)

SOPHIE ARNOULD, Remark, to Rulhière.

One day, a famous actress was telling me of the rages of her first lover, and, half-dreaming, halflaughing, she added this charming word: Oh, that was the good time—I was very unhappy.
(Un jour, une actrice fameuse
Me contait les fureurs de son premier amant;
Moitié rêvant, moitié rieuse,
Elle ajouta ce mot charmant:
Oh! c'était le bon temps, j'étais bien malheureuse.)

CLAUDE RULHIÈRE, Épître à Monsieur de Cho.

So may it be: that so dead Yesterday,
No sad-eyed ghost but generous and gay,
May serve you memories like almighty wine,
When you are old!

W. E. HENLEY, When You Are Old.

This memory brightens o'er the past,
As when the sun, concealed
Behind some cloud that near us hangs,
Shines on a distant field.

A reminiscence sing.
WALT WHITMAN, Out of the Cradle.

And, when the stream
Which overflowed the soul was passed away,
A consciousness remained that it had left,
Deposited upon the silent shore
Of memory, images and precious thoughts,
That shall not die, and cannot be destroyed.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vii, l. 25.

If there be a joy that slights the claim
Of grateful memory, let that joy depart!
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii,
No. 5.

For oft, when on my couch I lie
In vacant or in pensive mood,
They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude;

And then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils.

WORDSWORTH, I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud.
Wordsworth stated that this stanza was suggested by his wife.

The thought of our past years in me doth breed
Perpetual benediction.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. St. 9.

Where'er I go,
Thy genuine image, Yarrow!
Will dwell with me,—to heighten joy,
And cheer my mind in sorrow.
WORDSWORTH, Yarrow Visited, l. 85.

IV—Memory: Its Bitterness

For of fortune's sharp adversity
The worst kind of infortune is this,
A man to have been in prosperity,
And it remember, when it passed is.

CHAUVER, Troilus and Crueyde. Bk. iii, l. 1625.

Of joys departed,
Not to return, how painful the remembrance!

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 109.

No traces left of all the busy scene,
But that remembrance says: The things have been.

SAMUEL BOYSE, The Deity.

There is no greater sorrow than to recall, in misery, the time when we were happy. (Nes-sun maggior dolore Che ricordarsi del tempo felice Nella miseria.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 121.

There is no worse sorrow than remembering happiness in the day of sorrow (Il n'est pire douleur Qu'un souvenir heureux dans le jour de malheur.)

ALFRED DE MUSSET, Le Saule.

But woe to him, who left to moan,
Reviews the hours of brightness gone.

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia in Tauris, l. 1121. (An-stice, tr.)

Memory of happiness makes misery woeful.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4650.

But were there ever any
With'd not at passed joy?

KEATS, Stanzas: In a Dream-Nighted December.

Nor nothing more may heartes disavaunce
Than of old joy new remembrance.

LYDQATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. i, l. 650. (c. 1440)

O Memory! thou fond deceiver!
Still importunate and vain;
To former joys recurring ever,
And turning all the past to pain.

GOLDSMITH, The Captivity. Act i, sc. 1.

Remembrance wakes with all her busy train,
Swells at my breast, and turns the past to pain.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 81.

The bitter memory
Of what he was, what is, and what must be.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 24.

O dear, dear Jeanie Morrison,
The thochts o' bygone years

Still fling their shadows ower my path,
And blind my een wi' tears.

WILLIAM MOTTERWELL, Jeanie Morrison.

When time has assuaged the wounds of the mind, he who unseasonably reminds us of them, opens them afresh.

(At cum longa dies sedavit vulnera mentis, Intempestive qui movet illa, novat.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 11,
l. 19.

Yet bath my night of life some memory,
My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 514.

Remember thee!
Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat

In this distracted globe. Remember thee!

Yea, from the table of my memory

I'll wipe away all trivial fond records.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 95.

I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 222.

It presses to my memory,

Like damned, guilty deeds to sinners' minds.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2,
l. 110.

Here did she fall a tear; here in this place
I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace:
Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be
seen,

In the remembrance of a weeping queen.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 104.

There's rosemary, that's for remembrance.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 175.

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxx.

How sharp the point of this remembrance is!

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 138.

Let us not burden our remembrance with
A heaviness that's gone.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 199.

This is truth the poet sings
That a sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things.

TENNISON, Locksley Hall. St. 38.

The saddest lot of all is to know the good, and yet, perforce, to be debarred therefrom.

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. iv, l. 510. Said by Churton Collins (Illustrations of Tennyson, p. 62) to have inspired Tennyson's line.

 1 So joys, remembered without wish or will,
 Sharpen the keenest edge of present ill.
 WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: Captivity.

V—Memory: Tender Memories

2 Oh, I have roamed o'er many lands,
 And many friends I've met;
 Not one fair scene or kindly smile
 Can this fond heart forget.
 T. H. BAYLY, Song: Oh, Steer My Bark.

3 Ah, we fondly cherish
 Faded things
 That had better perish.
 Memory clings

To each leaf it saves.

J. H. BOWEN, Gather Leaves and Grasses.

4 'Tis but a little faded flower,

But oh, how fondly dear!

'T will bring me back one golden hour,
 Through many a weary year.

* ELLEN CLEMENTINE HOWARTH, 'Tis But a Little Faded Flower.

Where is the heart that doth not keep,
 Within its inmost core,

Some fond remembrance hidden deep,
 Of days that are no more?

ELLEN CLEMENTINE HOWARTH, 'Tis But a Little Faded Flower.

Who hath not saved some trifling thing
 More prized than jewels rare,
 A faded flower, a broken ring,
 A tress of golden hair.

ELLEN CLEMENTINE HOWARTH, 'Tis But a Little Faded Flower.

Yet for old sake's sake she is still, dear,
 The prettiest doll in the world.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, My Little Doll.

4 When other lips and other hearts
 Their tales of love shall tell,
 In language whose excess imparts
 The power they feel so well,

There may, perhaps, in such a scene,
 Some recollection be

Of days that have as happy been,
 And you'll remember me.

ALFRED BURN, Then You'll Remember Me.
 (The Bohemian Girl. Act iii.)

5 Oh! scenes in strong remembrance set!
 Scenes never, never to return!

ROBERT BURNS, The Lament. St. 10.

Still o'er these scenes my mem'ry wakes,
 And fondly broods with miser care;
 Time but th' impression stronger makes,
 As streams their channels deeper wear.
 ROBERT BURNS, To Mary in Heaven.

6 While Memory watches o'er the sad review
 Of joys that faded like the morning dew.

7 How cruelly sweet are the echoes that start
 When memory plays an old tune on the heart!

ELIZA COOK, Old Dobbin. St. 16.

8 O Genevieve, sweet Genevieve,
 The days may come, the days may go,
 But still the hands of mem'ry weave
 The blissful dreams of long ago.

GEORGE COOPER, Sweet Genevieve. A popular song the music of which was written about 1877 by Henry Tucker.

9 Don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt,—
 Sweet Alice, whose hair was so brown,
 Who wept with delight when you gave her a smile,

And trembled with fear at your frown?

THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH, Ben Bolt. First published in The New Mirror (N. Y.), 2 Sept., 1843.

10 A place in thy memory, Dearest!
 Is all that I claim:

To pause and look back when thou hearest
 The sound of my name.

GERALD GRIFFIN, A Place in Thy Memory.

11 Only a dream, and yet I hear you singing, Singing in the shadows, while gently falls
 the dew.

Roses may fade, but each returning twilight
 Brings the fragrant memory of you.

BERNARD HAMBLEN, The Memory of You.

12 I recollect a nurse called Ann,
 Who carried me about the grass,
 And one fine day a fine young man
 Came up and kissed the pretty lass.
 She did not make the least objection.

Thinks I, "Aha,

When I can talk I'll tell Mama,"

And that's my earliest recollection.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A Terrible Infant.

13 The leaves of memory seemed to make
 A mournful rustling in the dark.

LONGFELLOW, The Fire of Driftwood.

There comes to me out of the Past
 A voice, whose tones are sweet and wild,
 Singing a song almost divine,
 And with a tear in every line.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. iii, Interlude.

14 To live with them is far less sweet
 Than to remember thee.

THOMAS MOORE, I Saw Thy Form.

So turn our hearts, as on we rove,
 To those we've left behind us!

THOMAS MOORE, The Journey Onwards.

15 All to myself I think of you,
 Think of the things we used to do,

Think of the things we used to say,
Think of each happy bygone day.
Sometimes I sigh, and sometimes I smile,
But I keep each olden, golden while
All to myself.

WILSON D. NESBITT, All to Myself.

1
My home, the city, and the image of well-known places pass before my eyes. (Ante oculos errant domus, urbsque et forma locorum.)

OVIN, Tristia. Bk. III, eleg. 4, l. 57.

I remember, I remember
The house where I was born,
The little window where the sun
Came peeping in at morn.

THOMAS HOOD, I Remember, I Remember.

2
I wept for memory.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, She Sat and Sang Always.

3
Still are the thoughts to memory dear.
SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 33.

4
The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination,
And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apparell'd in more precious habit,
More moving-delicate and full of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soul.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 226.

5
Ah, how much less all living loves to me,
Than that one rapture of remembering thee.
(Heu quanto minus est cum reliquis versari, quam tui meminisse.)

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Epitaph to the Memory of Mary Doleman. (Munby, tr.)

9
I sit beside my lonely fire
And pray for wisdom yet:
For calmness to remember
Or courage to forget.

CHARLES HAMILTON AINS, Remember or Forget.

Forget that I remember,

And dream that I forget.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Rococo.

10
Remembrances embellish life but forgetfulness alone makes it possible. (Les souvenirs embellissent la vie, l'oubli seul la rend possible.)

GENERAL CIALDINI, Written in an Album.

11
We have all forgot more than we remember.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5442.

12
A retentive memory is a good thing, but the ability to forget is the true token of greatness.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

13
Ah, tell me not that memory
Sheds gladness o'er the past;
What is recalled by faded flowers,
Save that they did not last?
Were it not better to forget,
Than but remember and regret?

LETITIA ELIZABETH LONDON, Despondency.

14
Better by far you should forget and smile,
Than that you should remember and be sad.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Remember.

15
Though varying wishes, hopes, and fears
Fever'd the progress of these years,
Yet now, days, weeks, and months but seem
The recollection of a dream.

SCOTT, Mormion: Canto iv, Introduction, l. 21.

16
I shall remember while the light lives yet,
And in the night-time I shall not forget.
SWINBURNE, Ereotion.

17
Teach me not the art of remembering, but the art of forgetting, for I remember things
I do not wish to remember, but I cannot forget things I wish to forget.

THEMISTOCLES, when Simonides offered to teach him the art of memory. (CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. II, ch. 32, sec. 104.)

Mem: To remember to forget to ask
Old Whitbred to my house one day.

JOHN WOLCOT, Whitbread's Brewery Visited by Their Majesties.

MERCY

19
For Mercy, Courage, Kindness, Mirth,
There is no measure upon earth;
Nay, they wither, root and stem,
If an end be set to them.

LAURENCE BINYON, A Song.

For Mercy has a human heart,
Pity a human face,
And Love, the human form divine,
And Peace, the human dress.

Toen every man, of every clime,
That prays in his distress,

Prays to the human form divine,
Love, Mercy, Pity, Peace.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Divine Image.

BYRON, Lines on Hearing Lady Byron Was Ill.

Mercy to him that shows it, is the rule.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 595.

Mercy of mercy needs must arise.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus xii, l. 233.

² Bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering.

New Testament: Colossians, iii, 12.

Open thy bowels of compassion.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act iv, sc. 7.

³ We hand folks over to God's mercy, and show none ourselves.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 42. See also

Church-yard*. St. 17.

⁶ Mercy the wise Athenians held to be
Not an affection, but a Deity.

ROBERT HERRICK, Mercy.

⁷ Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 7.

Who will not mercy unto others show,
How can he mercy ever hope to have?

vnuplas apcloosur*.)

PITTACUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus. Bk. i,
sec. 76.)

⁹ Mercy stood in the cloud, with eye that wept
Essential love.

POLLOCK, The Course of Time. Bk. iii, l. 658.

¹⁰ Teach me to feel another's woe,

To hide the fault I see;

That mercy I to others show,

That mercy show to me.

POPE, Universal Prayer. St. 10.

¹¹ So much his courage and his mercy strive,
He wounds to cure, and conquers to forgive.

PENDE, Ode in Imitation of Horace. Bk. iii, ode 2.

¹² Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxv, 10.

¹³ It is a bad cause which asks for mercy.

Tigers have courage and the rugged bear,
But man alone can, whom he conquers, spare.

WALLER, Epistle to My Lord Protector.

¹⁵ Mercy often gives death instead of life.
(Mortem misericors sepe pro vita dabit.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 329.

¹⁶ Whereto serves mercy
But to confront the visage of offence?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 46.

You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy;
For your own reasons turn into your bosoms,
As dogs upon their masters, worrying you.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 81.

I cry you, mercy, 'tis but Quid for Quo.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry VI. Act v, sc. 3, l. 109.

¹⁷ Mercy is not itself, that oft looks so;
Pardon is still the nurse of second woe.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 297. See also JUSTICE: LET JUSTICE
BE DONE.

¹⁸ No ceremony that to great ones 'longs,
Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword,
The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,

Become them with one half so good a grace
As mercy does.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 59.

¹⁹ The quality of mercy is not strain'd;
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath: it is twice blest;
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes:
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest: it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown;
His sceptre shows the force of temporal
power,

The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above this sceptred sway;
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest
God's

When mercy seasons justice.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 184.

We do pray for mercy;
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 200.

1 Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,
Which better fits a lion than a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 3, l. 37.

2 Willst thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful:
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 117.

3 For mercy will soon pardon the meanest:
but mighty men shall be mightily tormented.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, vi, 6.

4 Sweet Mercy! to the gates of Heaven
This Minstrel lead, his sins forgiven;
The rueful conflict, the heart riven
With vain endeavour,
And memory of Earth's bitter leaven
Effaced for ever.

⁹ O, train me not, sweet mermaid, with thy note.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 45.

But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong,
I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 168.

As if some mermaid did their ears entice.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 202.

¹⁰ Once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid on a dolphin's back
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath
That the rude sea grew civil at her song:
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres,

To hear the sea-maid's music.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 149.

¹¹ Who would be A mermaid fair,
Singing alone, Combing her hair?

TENNYSON, The Mermaid.

How sail'd the weary mariners and saw,
Betwixt the green brink and the running foam,

MERRIMENT

IV—Merriment: Some Merry Men

2
In Paris a queer little man you may see,
A little man all in gray;
Rosy and round as an apple is he,
Content with the present whate'er it may be,
While from care and from cash he is equally free,

And merry both night and day!
"Ma foi! I laugh at the world," says he,
"I laugh at the world, and the world laughs at me!"

What a gay little man in gray.
BIRANGER, The Little Man all in Gray. (Amelia Edwards, tr.)

3
I'll be merry and free,
I'll be sad for naeboddy;
Naeboddy cares for me,
I care for naeboddy.
ROBERT BURNS, I Hae a Wife.

There was a jolly miller once,
Lived on the river Dee;
He work'd, and sung, from morn till night,
No lark more blythe than he,
And this the burthen of his song,
For ever us'd to be,
"I care for nobody, not I,
If no one cares for me."
ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act I, 5.

4
He was a care-defying blade
As ever Bacchus listed!
Tho' Fortune sair upon him laid,
His heart, she ever miss'd it.
He had nae wish but—to be glad,
Nor want but—when he thirsted;
He hated naught but—to be sad.
ROBERT BURNS, The Jolly Beggars.

5
A merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal:
His eye begets occasion for his wit;
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest,
Which his fair tongue, conceit's expositor,
Delivers in such apt and gracious words
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act II,
sc. 1, l. 65.

II, sc. 1, l. 323.

Don Pedro: To be merry best becomes you:
for, out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beatrice: No, sure, my lord, my mother cried;
but then there was a star danced, and under that was I born.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
II, sc. 1, l. 346.

BURNS, Tam o' Shanter.

9
Is it for work? There comes no fool to bore
us.

Midnight intoxicates the human swine;
I, pen in hand, with all the gods for chorus,
Write then my clearest thought, my noblest line.

Midnight is mine.

MORTIMER COLLINS, Midnight Is Mine.

But wouldst thou hear the melodies of Time,
Listen when sleep and drowsy darkness roll
Over hush'd cities, and the midnight chime Sounds from their hundred clocks, and deep bells toll,

Like a last knell over the dead world's soul.

Behind the dark church-tower.
LONGFELLOW, The Bridge.

From the cool cisterns of the midnight air
My spirit drank repose;
The fountain of perpetual peace flows there,—
From those deep cisterns flows.
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

Midnight! the outpost of advancing day!
The frontier town and citadel of night!
LONGFELLOW, The Two Rivers. Pt. I.

14
O wild and wondrous midnight,
There is a might in thee
To make the charmed body
Almost like spirit be,

And give it some faint glimpses
Of immortality!

J. R. LOWELL, Midnight.

1 Midnight brought on the dusky hour
Friendliest to sleep and silence.

Act v, sc. 1, l. 370.

8 Pale Midnight on her starry throne.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab, Canto iv, l. 40.

9 Midnight, and yet no eye
Through all the Imperial City closed in sleep!

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Curse of Kehama, Pt. i, l. 1.

Midnight, yet not a nose

From Tower Hill to Piccadilly snored!

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses: The Rebuilding.

10 And thy dark pencil, midnight! darker still
In melancholy dipt, embrowns the whole.

ÆSCHYLUS, Cæthora, l. 244. (Plumptre, tr.)

12 And much, and oft, he warn'd him to eschew

Falsehood and guile, and aye maintain the right,
By pleasure unseduc'd, unaw'd by lawless
might.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel, Bk. i, st. 28.

Either by might or might.

JOHN CLARE, Parameologia, 127. (1639)

13

Might

That makes a Title, where there is no Right.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Civil War, Bk. ii, st. 36.

14

For who can be secure of private right,
If sovereign sway may be dissolv'd by might?

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel, Pt. i, l. 779.

ground. (Κατὰ γὰρ τὴν δελφίνου ἐν χερσὶν βία.)

ION. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes, Sec. 3.)

16

Might and right govern everything in this world; might till right is ready. (C'est la force et le droit qui règlent toutes choses dans le monde; la force, en attendant le droit.)

JOUBERT, Pensées, Ch. 15, No. 2.

17

The reason of the strongest is always the best. (La raison du plus fort est toujours la meilleure.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables, Bk. i, fab. 10.

We have unmistakable proof that throughout all past time, there has been a ceaseless devouring of the weak by the strong.

HERBERT SPENCER, First Principles.

18

Let us have faith that right makes might,
and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, Cooper Institute,
N. Y., 27 Feb., 1860.

It has been said of the world's history hitherto that might makes right. It is for us and for our time to reverse the maxim, and to say that right makes might.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

19

Might was the measure of right. (Mensuraque juris Vis erat.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili, Bk. i, l. 175.

20

Old Tubal Cain was a man of might
In the days when earth was young.

CHARLES MACKEY, Tubal Cain.

21

I proclaim that might is right, justice the interest of the stronger. (Θαυὶ γὰρ ἐστὶν εὐαίρετος οὐκ ἄλλο τι ἢ τὸ τοῦ κρείττους συμφέρον.)

PLATO, The Republic, Bk. i, sec. 338. (Jowett, tr.)

Might is right. (Plus potest, qui plus valet.)

Might overcometh right.

JOHN HEYWOOD, English Proverbs. Pt. II, cb. 5.

Right is overcome by might. (Vi verum vincitur.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, i. 591. (Act II, sc. 1.)

O God, that right should thus overcome might!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 27.

Where might is, the right is:

Long purses make strong swords.

Let weakness learn meekness:

God save the House of Lords.

SWINBURNE, A Word for the Country. St. 1.

But let the free-winged angel Truth their guarded passes scale,
To teach that right is more than might, and justice more than mail!

J. G. WHITTIER, Brown of Ossawatimie.

So let it be. In God's own might

We gird us for the coming fight,

And, strong in Him whose cause is ours

In conflict with unholy powers,

We grasp the weapons He has given,—

The Light, and Truth, and Love of Heaven.

WHITTIER, The Moral Warfare.

MILK

Every one that useth milk is unskilful in the word of righteousness: for he is a babe.

New Testament: Hebrews, v, 13.

If you would live forever,

You must wash milk from your liver.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. See also under DRINKING.

Come to my woman's breasts,

And take my milk for gall.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act I, sc. 5, l. 48.

Sir, there is no crying for shed milk, that which is past cannot be recall'd.

ANDREW YARRANTON, England's Improvement. Pt. II, p. 107. (1681)

However, it's no use crying over spilt milk.

W. S. GILBERT, Foggarty's Fairy. Act I.

It's no good crying over spilt milk, because all the forces of the universe were bent on spilling it.

W. S. MAUGHAM, Of Human Bondage, p. 343.

Gospel of spilt milk.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, The Great Adventure. Chapter heading.

MILL and MILLER

Two millers thin, called Bone and Skin,

Would starve us all, or near it;

But be it known to Skin and Bone

That Flesh and Blood can't bear it.

JOHN BYROM, On Two Millers, Bone and Skin, Who Wished a Monopoly of Corn.

Well could be stolen corn and tollen thrice,
And yet he had a thumb of gold, pardee.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 563.

Every honest miller has a golden thumb.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales. An old saying, referring to a merchant keeping his thumb on the scales when weighing anything.

Honest millers have golden thumbs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2531. Ray states that the miller's reply was, "None but a cuckold can see it"; or, "True, but it takes a thief to see it."

The miller—the prosperous fellow with the golden thumb.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Chronicles of Clovernook, p. 94.

The water that is past cannot make the mill

go.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bib. Scho. Instruct., p. 151. (1633)

The mill cannot grind with water that's past.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Oh seize the instant time; you never will

With waters once passed by impel the mill.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, Proverbs. (Poems, p. 303.)

Listen to the Water-Mill:

Through the live-long day

How the clicking of its wheel

Wears the hours away!

Languidly the Autumn wind

Stirs the forest leaves,

From the field the reapers sing

Binding up their sheaves:

And a proverb haunts my mind

As a spell is cast,

"The mill cannot grind

With the water that is past."

SARAH DOUDNEY, The Lesson of the Water-Mill. Fraudulently claimed by General D. C. McCallum. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)

The mill goes toiling slowly around

With steady and solemn creak,

And my little one hears in the kindly sound

The voice of the old mill speak.

EUGENE FIELD, Nightfall in Dordrecht.

As good water goes by the mill as drives it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 691.

There is no likelihood that those things will bring grist to the mill.

GOLDING, Calvin on Deuteronomy, 755. (1583)

'Tis a pick-purse doctrine, contrived to bring grist to the Pope's mill.

WILLIAM GURNALL, Christian in Complete Armour. Pt. III, ch. 5. (1661)

Some people make fat, some blood, and some ble; and whatever they take is a sort of grist to the mill.

GEORGE ELIOT, Middlemarch. Ch. 10.

1 The same water that drives the mill, decayeth it.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse.

2 Much water goeth by the mill That the miller knoweth not of.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

More water glideth by the mill Than wots the miller of.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 86. (1593)

The miller sees not all the water that goeth by his mill.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iii, mem. 4, subs. 1. (1621)

3 The miller grinds more men's corn than one.

THOMAS NASH, Works. Vol. iii, p. 25.

MILLS OF THE GODS, see under RETRIBUTION.

4 Here lies an Israelite indeed;

Match him if you can:

A neighbour good, a miller too,

And yet an honest man.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, Longbridge Deverill, Wiltshire, England.

MILTON, JOHN

5 Milton's golden lyre.

MARK AKENSIDE, Ode on a Sermon Against Glory. St. 2.

6 On his anointed eyes, God set his seal And gave him—blindness and the inward light,

That he, repining not at lack of sight, Might see as never man saw.

RICHARD ROGERS BOWKER, Milton.

7 Milton's the prince of poets—so we say; A little heavy, but no less divine;

An independent being in his day—

Learn'd, pious, temperate in love and wine.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 91.

8 The words of Milton are true in all things, and were never truer than in this: "He who would write heroic poems must make his whole life a heroic poem."

CARLYLE, Essays: Burns.

9 Ages clasp'd ere Homer's lamp appear'd. And ages ere the Mantuan swan was heard: To carry nature lengths unknown before, To give a Milton birth, ask'd ages more. Thus genius rose and set at order'd times, And shot a day-spring into distant climes, Ennobling ev'ry region that he chose; He sunk in Greece, in Italy he rose;

And, tedious years of Gothic darkness pass'd, Emerg'd all splendour in our isle at last.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 556.

Greece boasts her Homer, Rome can Virgil claim;

England can either match in Milton's fame. (Græcia Mæonidam, Iactet sibi Roma Maronem Anklia Miltonum Iactat utrique parem.)

SALVAGGI, Ad Joannem Miltonum.

10 Three Poets, in three distant Ages born, Greece, Italy, and England did adorn.

The first in loftiness of thought surpass'd,

The next in majesty, in both the last:

The force of nature could no farther go;

To make the third she join'd the former two.

DRYDEN, Lines under the Portrait of Milton.

Referring to Homer, Virgil, and Milton.

11 Nor second He, that rode sublime

Upon the seraph-wings of Ecstasy,

The secrets of th' Abyss to spy.

He pass'd the flaming bounds of Place and Time:

The living Throne, the sapphire blaze,

Where Angels tremble, while they gaze,

He saw; but blasted with excess of light,

Closed his eyes in endless night.

THOMAS GRAY, Progress of Poetry. Pt. iii, st. 2.

12 He was a Phidias that could cut a Colossus out of a rock, but could not cut heads out of cherry stones.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to Milton. (HARRIS MORT, Johnsoniana.)

13 I am old and blind!

Men point at me as smitten by God's frown.

ELIZABETH LLOYD, Milton on His Blindness.

Sometimes attributed to Milton himself.

Miss Lloyd was a member of the Society of Friends of Philadelphia, Pa.

14 Milton's strong pinion now not Heav'n can bound,

Now, serpent-like, in prose he sweeps the ground,

In quibbles, Angel and Archangel join,

And God the Father turns a School-divine.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. II, epis. 1, l. 99.

15 O mighty-mouth'd inventor of harmonica,

O skill'd to sing of Time or Eternity,

God-gifted organ-voice of England,

Milton, a name to resound for ages.

TENNYSON, Milton.

16 Lover of Liberty at heart wast thou,

Above all beauty bright, all music clear:

To thee she bared her bosom and her brow,

Breathing her virgin promise in thine ear,

And bound thee to her with a double vow,—

Exquisite Puritan, grave Cavalier!

HENRY VAN DYKE, Milton.

Their common frechold while both worlds endure.
WHITTIER, On the Milton Window, in St. Margaret's, Westminster.

⁴ That mighty orb of song, The divine Milton.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. i, l. 249.
The sightless Milton, with his hair
Around his placid temples curled.
WORDSWORTH, The Italian Itinerant. Pt. i, l. 12.
Thy soul was like a Star, and dwelt apart;
Thou hadst a voice whose sound was like the sea:
Pure as the naked heavens, majestic, free,
So didst thou travel on life's common way,
In cheerful godliness; and yet thy heart
The lowliest duties on herself did lay.
WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: London, 1802.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 150.

⁸ The true, strong, and sound mind is the mind that can embrace equally great things and small.

SAMUEL JOHNSON (BOSWELL, Life, 1778.)
A great mind conceives the greatest things; it sees and understands the smallest ones (Un grand esprit . . . imagine les plus grandes choses; il voit et connaît les plus petites.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Réflexions Diverses: Ch. xvi, De la Différence des Esprits.

Greatness of mind is not shown by admitting small things, but by making small things great under its influence. He who can take no interest in what is small, will take false interest in what is great.

RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Pt. ii, sec. 4, ch. 4.

⁹ By a tranquil mind I mean nothing else than a mind well ordered

20 My mind to me a kingdom is;
Such present joys therein I find,
That it excels all other bliss

That earth affords or grows by kind:

Though much I want which most would have,
Yet still my mind forbids to crave.

EDWARD DYER, My Mind to Me a Kingdom Is.

My mind to me a kingdom is;
Such perfect joy therein I find

As far exceeds all earthly bliss,
That God or Nature hath assigned:
Though much I want, that most would have,
Yet still my mind forbids to crave.

EDWARD DYER, My Mind to Me a Kingdom Is.

As altered by William Byrd, in Psalmes, Sonets, and Songs of Sadnes. London, 1588. (PERCY, Reliques. Ser. i, bk. 3.)

I am no such pil'd cynic to believe
That beggary is the only happiness,
Or, with a number of these patient fools,

VII—Mind: Its Power

¹ The human understanding is naturally right, and has within itself a strength sufficient to arrive at the knowledge of truth, and to distinguish it from error.

BURLAMAQUI, Principles of Natural Law.

² The brute-tamer stands by the brutes, a head's breadth only above them.

A head's breadth? Ay, but therein is hell's depth, and the height up to heaven,
And the thrones of the gods and their halls,
their chariots, purples, and splendors.

PADRAIC COLUM, The Plougher.

³ How fleet is a glance of the mind!
Compar'd with the speed of its flight,
The tempest itself lags behind,
And the swift-wing'd arrows of light.
COWPER, Verses Supposed to be Written by Alexander Selkirk.

⁴ Thy mind reverting still to things of earth,
Strikes darkness from true light.

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xv, l. 62. (Cary, tr.)

⁵ 'Tis true, 'tis certain; man, tho' dead, retains

Part of himself; th' immortal mind remains.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiii, l. 122. (Pope, tr.) See (Creech, tr.) The reference is to Epicurus.

Three sleepless nights I passed in sounding on,
Through words and things, a dim and perilous
way.

WORDSWORTH, The Borderers. Act iv, sc. 2, l.
1774. (Written eighteen years before The Excursion.)

The intellectual power, through words and things,

Went sounding on, a dim and perilous way!
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iii, l. 700.

A mind forever

Voyaging through strange seas of thought alone.
WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. III, l. 62.

⁸ Nothing can withstand the powers of the mind. Barriers, enormous masses of matter, the remotest recesses are conquered; all things succumb; the very heaven itself is laid open. (Rationi nulla resistunt. Claustra nec succumbunt; ipsum est penetrabile cœlum.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica. Bk. i, 541.

⁹ The mind, unmastered by passions, is a very citadel, for a man has no fortress more impregnable wherein to find refuge and be un-taken forever.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. viii, sec.
48.

¹⁰ The mind, that ocean where each kind
Does straight its own resemblance find;
Yet it creates, transcending these,
Far other worlds, and other seas;
Annihilating all that's made
To a green thought in a green shade.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Garden.

¹¹ The social states of human kinds
Are made by multitudes of minds,
And after multitudes of years
A little human growth appears
Worth having, even to the soul
Who sees most plain it's not the whole.

¹³ The mind is its own place, and in itself
Can make a Heav'n of Hell, a hell of Heav'n.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 254.

¹⁴ The mind hath no horizon,
It looks beyond the eye, and seeks for mind
In all it sees, or all it sees o'eruling.
MONTGOMERY, The Pelican Island. Canto i, l.
78.

¹⁵ There are but two powers in the world, the sword and the mind. In the long run the sword is always beaten by the mind.

¹⁵ We should toughen our minds. (Indurandum est animus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epis. ii, sec. 5.

¹⁶ Thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To closeness and the bettering of my mind.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 89.

¹⁷ He who seeks the mind's improvement,
Aids the world, in aiding mind.

CHARLES SWAIN, What Is Noble?

¹⁸ Nor less I deem that there are Powers
Which of themselves our minds impress;
That we can feed this mind of ours
In a wise passiveness.

WORDSWORTH, Expostulation and Reply.

¹⁹ If we work upon marble, it will perish. If we work upon brass, time will efface it. If we rear temples, they will crumble to dust. But if we work upon men's immortal minds, if we imbue them with high principles, with the just fear of God and love of their fellow men, we engrave on those tablets something which no time can efface, and which will brighten and brighten to all eternity.

⁵ O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown!
The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword;

The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion and the mould of form,
The observed of all observers, quite, quite, down!

And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,

Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 158.

⁶ Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased,
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote

XI—Mind: Mind and Matter

All the choir of heaven and furniture of earth—in a word, all those bodies which compose the mighty frame of the world—have not any subsistence without a mind.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Principles of Human Knowledge.

Mind and Matter.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, title of dissertation.

Berkeley, in the early part of his life, wrote a dissertation against the existence of material beings and external objects, with such subtlety that Whiston acknowledged himself unable to confute it.

DR. JOHN HAWKESWORTH, Note to Swift's Letters, 1769.

When Bishop Berkeley said "there was no matter,"

And proved it—'twas no matter what he said.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 1.

What is mind? No matter. What is matter? Never mind.

THOMAS HEWITT KEY. (On the authority of F. J. Furnivall.)

Doctor Berkeley, Bishop of Cloyne, a very worthy, ingenious, and learned man, has written a book to prove that there is no such thing as matter, and that nothing exists but in idea. . . . His arguments, strictly speaking, are unanswerable; but yet I am so far from being convinced by them, that I am determined to go on to eat and drink, and walk and ride, in order to keep that Matter, which I so mistakenly imagine my body at present to consist of, in as good plight as possible.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1748.

Bishop Berkeley destroyed this world in one volume octavo; and nothing remained, after his time, but mind; which experienced a similar fate from the hand of Mr. Hume in 1737.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy: Introductory Lecture.

Mind moves matter. (Mens agitāt molem.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 727.

I believe that there is no God, but that matter is God and God is matter; and that it is no matter whether there is any God or no.

EMERSON, Fragment.

⁶ An old French sentence says, "God works in moments." We ask for long life, but 'tis deep life, or grand moments, that signify.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days, Emerson is translating an old French proverb, "En peu d'heure Dieu labore."

⁷ His best things are done in the flash of a moment.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 836.

⁸ Still work for the minute and not for the year.

* JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Rules of the Road.

Eternity gives back nothing of what one leaves out of the minutes.

SCHILLER, Resignation, St. 18.

⁹ Like as the waves make toward the pebbled
shore,

So do our minutes hasten to their end.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets, No. 1x.

One by one the sands are flowing,

One by one the moments fall;

Some are coming, some are going;

Do not strive to grasp them all.

LIFE: ITS SHORTNESS.

¹⁰ Alas! how little can a moment show
Of an eye where feeling plays

In ten thousand dewy rays;

A face o'er which a thousand shadows go!

WORDSWORTH, The Triad, l. 128.

MIRACLE

¹¹ I should not be a Christian but for the miracles.

ST. AUGUSTINE. (PASCAL, Pensées, No. 812.)

¹² Every believer is God's miracle.

BAILLY, Festus: Home.

¹³ The Age of Miracles, as it ever was, now is.

CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics.

¹⁴ When Christ, at Cana's feast, by pow'r divine,
Inspir'd cold water with the warmth of wine,
See! cry'd they while, in red'ning tide, it
gush'd,

The bashful stream hath seen its God, and blush'd.

(Unde rubor vestris, et non sua purpura, lymphis?

Quæ rosa mirantes tam nova mutat aquas?

Numen (convivæ) præsens agnoscite Nu-
men;

Nympha pudica Deum vidit, et erubuit.)

RICHARD CRASHAW, Epigrammations Sacra,
No. 96. (Aaron Hill, tr.)

The conscious water saw its God, and blushed.
(Vidit et erubuit lympa pudica Deum.)

RICHARD CRASHAW, *Upon the Water Made
Wine*. His own translation of his Latin line.

Thou water turn'st to wine (fair friend of life);

Thy foe, to cross the sweet arts of Thy reign,
Distils from thence the tears of wrath and strife,

And so turns wine to water back again.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Steps to the Temple: To Our Lord, Upon the Water Made Wine.

The water owns a power Divine,

And conscious blushes into wine;

Its very nature changed displays

The power divine that it obeys.

SCOLLINS, Hymns, Sedulius (Scotus Hyber-nicus) was a biblical commentator of Irish birth who died in 828. His poem was written in Latin and translated into English by Canon Macilwaine. (Lyra Hibernica Sacra.)

¹ We must not sit down, and look for miracles. Up, and be doing, and the Lord will be with thee. Prayer and pains, through faith in Christ Jesus, will do anything.

JOHN ELIOT, Indian Grammar Begun: Post-script.

² Miracles exist as ancient history merely; they are not in the belief, nor in the aspiration of society.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Address.

The word Miracle, as pronounced by Christian churches, gives a false impression; it is Monster. EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Address.

I have never seen a greater monster or miracle in the world than myself.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 11.

³ Miracles are the swaddling-clothes of infant churches.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Vol. ii, p. 239.

Religion seems to have grown an infant with age, and requires miracles to nurse it, as it had in its infancy.

SWIRT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

⁴ The dearest child of Faith is Miracle. (Das Wunder ist des Glaubens liebstes Kind.)

GOETHE, Faust. Part i, sc. 1, l. 413.

Things that are mysterious are not necessarily miracles.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

⁵ A Miracle: An event described by those to whom it was told by men who did not see it. ELBERT HUNNARD, Epigrams.

⁶ The question before the human race is, whether the God of Nature shall govern the world by His own laws, or whether priests and kings shall rule it by fictitious miracles.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams, 1815.

⁷ Miracles and truth are necessary, because it is necessary to convince the entire man, in body and soul.

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 806.

Had it not been for the miracles, there would have been no sin in not believing in Christ.

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 811.

⁸ Miracles serve not to convert, but to condemn.

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 825.

To aim to convert a man by miracles is a profanation of the soul.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Address.

⁹ Accept a miracle: Instead of wit,
See two dull lines by Stanhope's pencil writ.

ALEXANDER POPE to Lord Chesterfield, on using the latter's pencil. (JOHN TAYLOR, Records of My Life Vol. i, p. 161; NEWBERRY, Art of Poetry on a New Plan. Vol. i, p. 57.)

¹⁰ Miracles are to those who believe in them.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 810.

Miracle comes to the miraculous, not to the arithmetician.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

¹¹ Great seas have dried
When miracles have by the greatest been denied.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 143.

¹² They say miracles are past.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 1.

It must be so; for miracles are ceased.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act i, sc. 1, l. 67.

Alas! there are no longer any miracles! (Ach! es geschehen keine Wunder mehr.)

SCHILLER, Jungfrau von Orleans. Act i, sc. 1.

¹³ A miracle is an event which creates faith. . . . Frauds deceive. An event which creates faith does not deceive; therefore it is not a fraud, but a miracle.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Sc. ii.

¹⁴ To me every hour of the light and dark is a miracle.

WALT WHITMAN, Miracles, l. 17.

¹⁵ What is a miracle?—"Tis a reproach,
'Tis an implicit satire, on mankind;
And while it satisfies, it censures too.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 1241.

¹⁶ By order of the King: "It is forbidden for God to work miracles here." (De par de roi: Defense à Dieu De faire des miracles en ce lieu.)

Epigram, written by an unknown wit upon the gates of the cemetery of St. Médard, when closed by Louis XV, because of the reputed miracles worked by the relics of Le Diacre Paris, a jansenist interred there.

MIRROR

¹⁷ Glass antique! 'twixt thee and Nell
Draw we here a parallel!

She, like thee, was forced to bear
All reflections, foul or fair,
Thou art deep and bright within,
Depths as bright belong'd to Gwynne;
Thou art very frail as well,

Frail as flesh is.—so was Nell.

LAMON BLANCHARD, Nell Gwynne's Looking Glass.

⁶ To hold as 'twere, the mirror up to nature.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 24.

⁷ You have no such mirrors as will turn

Your hidden worthiness into your eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 56.

⁸ Go some of you and fetch a looking-glass.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 268.

An if my word be sterling yet in England,

Let it command a mirror hither straight,

That it may show me what a face I have.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 265.

I'll be at charges for a looking-glass.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 256.

Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,

I—Moderation: Apothegms

15 Moderation is best (Méropos Apistov.)

CLEOBULUS OF LINDUS, one of the seven wise men of Greece, who died 579 B.C. This phrase, his maxim, is said to have been inscribed on the wall of the temple of Apollo at Delphi. The Latin form is, "Optimus modus." (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus. Bk. i, sec. 93.)

Is not ariston metron "moderation is best?" ("Ἀριστον μέτρον ἀνὸς οὐκ ὀψιμὸς ὁδός")

CLEOBULUS. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 152.)

Observe moderation; proportion is best in all things. (Μέτρη φυλάσσεσθαι καὶ οὐδ' ἐνὶ πᾶσι ἄσπερον.)

HERODOTUS, Works and Days, l. 694.

I, who have so much and so universally adored this ἀριστον μέτρον, "excellent moderation," of ancient times, and who have concluded the most moderate measure the most perfect, shall I pretend to an unreasonable and prodigious old age?

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

Be not too zealous; moderation is best in all things. (Μὴδὲν ἄγαν ἐπιθεῖν πάντων μὲν ἀρίστη.)

II—Moderation: The Golden Mean

The golden mean is free from trips.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Pleasant Quips, p. 14. (1596)

Safely he jogs along the way which "Golden Mean" the sages call;

Who scales the brow of frowning Alp must face full many a slip and fall.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. viii, st. 12.

Whoso cultivates the golden mean, avoids the poverty of a hovel and the envy of a palace. (Auream quisquis mediocritatem Diligit, tulus caret obsoleto Sordibus tecti, caret invidenda Sobrius aula.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 10, l. 5.

He that holds fast the golden mean,

And lives contentedly between

The little and the great,

Feels not the wants that pinch the poor,

Nor plagues that haunt the rich man's door,

Imbittering all his state.

HORACE, Odes, ii, 10. (Cowper, tr.)

III—Moderation: Nothing in Excess

Nothing to excess. That is enough, or precept too will run to excess, (Nil nimium. Satis hoc, ne sit et hoc nimium.)

ANACHARSIS. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 49.)

Nothing in excess. (Μὴδὲν ἄγαν.)

EURIPIDES. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 156.)

Nothing in excess. (Μὴδὲν ἄγαν.)

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i, sec. 63. Laertius also ascribes the saying to Socrates, who lived two centuries later. Bk. ii, sec. 32: "Being once asked in what consisted the virtue of a young man, Socrates said, 'In doing nothing in excess.'—Τὸ μὴ ἄγαν.) The more familiar Latin form is, "Ne quid nimis." With the equally famous, "Know thyself" (Γνῶθι σεαυτόν), it was inscribed on the temple of Apollo at Delphi.

⁸ To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light

To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,

Is wasteful and ridiculous excess.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 11.

But Shakespeare also says, 'tis very silly
"To gild refined gold, or paint the lily."

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

The road of excess leads to the palace of wisdom.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

There is moderation even in excess.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. vi, ch. 1.

IV—Moderation: Living on Little

¹⁰ Men live better on little. (Vivitur exiguo melius.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. i, l. 215.

Our portion is not large, indeed;

But then how little do we need,

For Nature's calls are few!

In this the art of living lies,

To want no more than may suffice,

And make that little do.

We'll therefore relish with content,

Whate'er kind Providence has sent,

Nor aim beyond our pow'r;

For, if our stock be very small,

'Tis prudent to enjoy it all,

Nor lose the present hour.

NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside. Sts. 9, 10.

¹¹ He who understands the limits of life knows how easy it is to procure enough to remove the pain of want and make the whole life complete and perfect. Hence he has no longer any need of things which are to be won only by labor and conflict.

EPICURUS, Souvan Maxims. No. 21.

¹² He will always be a slave who does not know how to live upon a little. (Serviet aeternum, quia parvo nesciet uti.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 41.

Let's live with that small pittance which we have;

Who covets more is evermore a slave.

HERRICK, The Covetous Still Captive.

¹³ What, and how great, the virtue and the art
To live on little with a cheerful heart!

(Quæ virtus et quanta, boni, sit vivere parvo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 1. (Pope, tr.)

¹⁴ O Luxury, extravagant of resources and never satisfied with what costs little, . . . learn how little it costs to prolong life, and how little nature demands, . . . Running water and bread are enough for mankind.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iv, l. 373.

¹ Thou seest how few be the things, the which if a man has at his command his life flows gently on and is divine.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. II, sec. 5.

Remember this,—that very little is needed to make a happy life. (Τούτου μέμνησαι δεῖ, καὶ ἐν ἡμῖν, ἐν τῷ ἐπιχθονίοις αἰεὶ τὸ εὐδαίμονος βίωσαι.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. VII, sec. 67.

² How many things I can do without! (Πόσων ἢν χρεῖαι οὐκ ἔχω.)

SOCRATES, on looking in the shop windows. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Sec. 8.)

³ Man's rich with little, were his judgment true;

Nature is frugal, and her wants are few;
These few wants answer'd, brings sincere de-
lights,

But fools create themselves new appetites.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 166.

V—Moderation: Enough Is As Good As a Feast

⁴ Enough sufficeth for the wise. ('Εὰν τὰ γ' ἀρκούσθ' ἱκανὰ τοῖς γε εὐφροσύνῃ.)

EURIPIDES, Phanias, l. 554.

Now that's enough! (Jam satis est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. IV, epig. 89, l. 1.

Who has enough, of no more has he need.

ROBERT HENRYSON, Town and Country Mouse.

Enough, with over-measure.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act III, sc. 1, l. 140.

⁵ As good is enough as a great feast.

JOHN LYDGATE, Assembly of Gods, 59. (c. 1420)

Enough is as good as a feast.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. II, ch. 11.

⁶ "Pray take them, Sir—enough's a feast;
Eat some, and pocket up the rest."

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. I, epia. vii, l. 24.

⁷ Distribution should undo excess,

And each man have enough.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 73.

Cited by Huey Long as his goal in his "Share the wealth" program.

⁸ I neither want nor yet abound,—

Enough's a feast, content is crowned.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, A Contented Mind.

⁹ Enough is a plenty, too much is a pride.

THOMAS TUBER, Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: Dinner Masters.

VI—Moderation: Its Virtues

¹⁰ Moderation, the noblest gift of Heaven. (Σοφροσύνη, δόγμα καλλίστην Θεοῦ.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 635.

Moderation: a virtue not to be despised by the most exalted among men, and prized also by the gods.

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. XV, sec. 2.

¹¹ Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl-chain of all virtues.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States: Bk. III, Of Moderation. Quoted by Bishop Joseph Hall in the introduction to Christian Moderation as an Oriental proverb.

¹² True happiness springs from moderation. (Aus Mässigkeit entspringt ein reines Glück.)

GOETHE, Die Naturliche Tochter. Act II, sc. 5.

¹³ Let him who has enough ask for nothing more. (Quod satis est cui contigit, nihil amplius optet.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. I, epia. II, l. 46.

Give us enough but with a sparing hand.

EDMUND WALLER, Reflections.

You never know what is enough unless you know what is more than enough.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

¹⁴ He who desires only what is enough, is troubled neither by raging seas, nor hail-smitten vineyards, nor an unproductive farm. (Desiderantem quod satis est neque Tumultuosum sollicitat mare, . . . Non verberatæ grandine vineæ Fundusque mendax.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. III, ode I, l. 25.

¹⁵ The moderation of fortunate people comes from the calm which good fortune gives to their tempers. (La modération des personnes heureuses vient du calme que la bonne fortune donne à leur humeur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 17.

Moderation is like sobriety: one would like to eat more, but one fears to make oneself ill. (La modération est comme la sobriété: on voudrait bien manger davantage, mais on craint de se faire mal.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 507.

¹⁶ Enjoy thy possessions as if about to die, and use them sparingly, as if about to live. That man is wise who understands both these commandments, and hath applied a measure both to thrift and unthrift.

LUCIAN, Greek Anthology. Bk. 2, epig. 26.)

It is great riches to a man to live sparingly with an even mind. (Divitiæ grandes homini sunt, vivere parce æquo animo.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. V, l. 1117.

¹⁷ Take this at least, this last advice, my son:

Keep a stiff rein, and move but gently on:
The coursers of themselves will run too fast,
Your art must be to moderate their haste.

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 147. (Addison, tr.) The story of Phaëton.

Up hill, our course is rather slow;
Down hill, how merrily we go;
But when 'tis neither up nor down,
It is a middling pace I own.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto xxii, l. 227.

¹ In many things the middle have the best; be mine a middle station, (Παλά μέσσιον ἔριστα, Μέσση ὁδῶ ἐν πόλει εἶναι.)

PHOCYLÆS, Fragment. (ARISTOTLE, Politics, iv, 6, 8.)

Tenants of life's middle state,
Securely plac'd between the small and great,
Whose character, yet undebauch'd, retains
Two-thirds of all the virtue that remains.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 807.

He knows to live who keeps the middle state,
And neither leans on this side nor on that.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 61.

² Give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xii, 8.

³ Only moderation gives charm to life. (Nur Maas ihm Reiz.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 145.

⁴ A thatched roof once covered free men; under marble and gold dwells slavery. (Culmus liberos texit, sub marmore atque servitus habitat.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xc, sec. 10.

⁵ In modesty of fortune there are the fewer dangers. (Ex mediocritate fortunæ, pauciora pericula sunt.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xiv, sec. 60.

⁶ There is a limit to enjoyment, though the sources of wealth be boundless,
And the choicest pleasures of life lie within the ring of moderation.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Compensation, l. 15.

VII—Moderation: Some Wishes

⁷ In the downhill of life when I find I'm declining,

May my lot no less fortunate be
Than a snug elbow-chair can afford for reclining,

And a cot that looks o'er the wide sea.
JOHN COLLINS, In the Downhill of Life.

⁸ Ah, yet, e'er I descend to th' grave,

May I a small House and large Garden have,
And a few Friends, and many Books, both
true,

Both wise, and both delightful too.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Wish. St. 2.

This only grant me, that my means may lie
Too low for envy, for contempt too high.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself.

⁹ Some have too much, yet still they crave;
I little have, yet seek no more:

They are but poor, though much they have,
And I am rich with little store:

They poor, I rich; they beg, I give;
They lack, I lend; they pine, I live.

SIR EDWARD DYER, My Mind to Me a Kingdom Is. St. 5.

¹⁰ May heaven (it's all I wish for) send
One genial room to treat a friend,

Where decent cupboard, little plate,
Display benevolence, not state.

And may my humble dwelling stand
Upon some chosen spot of land:

A pond before full to the brim,
Where cows may cool, and geese may swim;
Behind, a green like velvet neat,
Soft to the eye, and to the feet.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 642.

¹¹ Give me a three-legged table, a shell of clean salt, and a coat that, however coarse, will keep out the cold. (Sit mihi mensa tripea et Concha salis puri et toga, quæ defendere frigus Quamvis, crassa queat.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 13.

¹² This is what I prayed for: a piece of land not very large, where there would be a garden, and near the house a spring of ever-flowing water, and above these a bit of woodland. More and better than this have the gods done for me. I am content.

(Hoc erat in votis: modus agri non ita magnus.)

Hortus ubi et tecto vicinus jugis aque fons Et paulum silve super his foret. Auctius atque

Di melius fecere. Bene est.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 1. The opening words give expression, not to a wish,
but to satisfaction as the poet looks out across his little farm, the realization of his dreams. Hence the past tense of erat.

Give me, ye gods, the produce of one field,
That so I neither may be rich nor poor;
And having just enough, not covet more.

DRYDEN, Imitation of Horace.

O grant me, Heaven, a middle state,
Neither too humble nor too great;
More than enough for nature's ends,
With something left to treat my friends.

DAVID MALLEY, Imitation of Horace.

I've often wish'd that I had clear
For life, six hundred pounds a year;
A handsome house to lodge a friend;
A river at my garden's end;
A terrace walk, and half a rood
Of land set out to plant a wood.

SWIRI, Imitation of Horace. Bk. ii, sat. 6.

In all my wand'rings round this world of care,

In all my griefs—and God has given my share—

I still had hopes my latest hours to crown,
Amidst these humble bowers to lay me down.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 83.

Ye gods! my wishes are confined
To—health of body, peace of mind,
Clean linen, and a guinea!

EDWARD LYSAGHT, Ambition.

That spot of ground pleases me in which small possession makes me happy, and where slight resources are abundant. (Illa placet tellus in qua res parva beatum Me facit et tenues luxuriantur opes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. 96, l. 5.

If I live to grow old, as I find I go down,
Let this be my fate: in a country town,
May I have a warm house, with a stone at my gate,
And a cleanly young girl to rub my bald pate.
May I govern my passions with absolute sway,
Grow wiser and better as my strength wears
away,

Without gout or stone, by a gentle decay.

WALTER POPE, The Old Man's Wish. (1685)

Mine be a cot beside the hill;
A bee-hive's hum shall soothe my ear;
A willow brook, that turns a mill,
With many a fall, shall linger near.

SAMUEL ROGERS, A Wish.

Give me, indulgent gods! with mind serene,
And guiltless heart, to range the sylvan scene;
No splendid poverty, no smiling care,
No well-bred hate, or servile grandeur, there.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 243.

MODESTY

I—Modesty: Definitions

Modesty cannot properly be described as a virtue, for it is a feeling rather than a disposition—a kind of fear of disrepute.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. iv, ch. 9,
sec. 1.

Modesty is the only sure bait when you angle for praise.

LORD CHRISTMASFIELD, Letters, 8 May, 1750.

Modesty is that feeling by which honorable shame acquires a valuable and lasting authority.

CICERO, De Inventione Rhetorica. Bk. ii, 56.

Modesty is the citadel of beauty and of virtue. (Αἰδώς τοῦ καλοῦ καὶ ἀρετῆς πύλις.)

DEMADES, Peri Dodekathias. (MÜLLER, Oratores Attici. Vol. ii, p. 438.)

Modesty is often mistaken for secrecy, and silence for bad temper. (Plerumque modes-tus Occupat obscuri speciem, taciturnitus acerbi.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 94.

Modesty, and unstained Honor, sister to Justice. (Pudor, et Justitiæ soror, Incorrupta Fides.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode. 24, l. 6.

Modesty is to merit what shadows are to a painting; it gives it force and relief. (La mo-destie est au mérite ce que les ombres sont aux figures dans un tableau: elle lui donne de la force et du relief.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 2.

Modesty antedates clothes and will be resumed when clothes are no more. Modesty died when clothes were born. Modesty died when false modesty was born.

MARK TWAIN, (PAINE, Life. Vol. iii, p. 1513.)

II—Modesty: Apothegms

With time diffidence dies away in man. (Ἐν χρόνῳ δ' ἀνοφθίμει τὸ τάχος ἀνθρώποις.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 857.

Modesty does not long survive innocence.

EDMUND BURKE, *Impeachment of Warren
Hastings*, 17 Feb., 1788.

I'm modesty personified!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

I'm shy, nervous, modest, retiring, and diffident.
W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

There's no false modesty about you.
W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

An impudent fellow may counterfeit modesty, but I'll be hanged if a modest man can ever counterfeit impudence.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act ii.

A truly modest fellow. (Multum demissus homo.)

Modesty becomes a young man. (Decet verendum esse adulescentem.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 833. (Act v, sc. 1.)

I have done one braver thing Than all the Worthies did,

And yet a braver thence doth spring, Which is, to keep that hid.

JOHN DONNE, The Undertaking.

He full of bashfulness and truth, Loved much, hoped little, and desired naught.

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered. Bk. ii, st. 16. (Fairfax, tr.)

IV—Modesty: Its Faults

Modest dogs miss much meat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Modesty in a man is a crime. Don't be modest. It is a woman's virtue.

FREDERICK WARDE, Interview, on his 80th birthday, 23 Feb., 1931.

All men have their faults; too much modesty is his.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man, Act ii.

William was once a bashful youth; His modesty was such,

That one might say (to say the truth), He rather had too much.

WILLIAM COWPER, Of Himself.

There is a luxury in self-dispraise; And inward self-disparagement affords To meditative spleen a grateful feast.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 475.

V—Modesty in Women

Modesty is the beauty of women.

UNKNOWN. A Gaelic proverb.

Rare is agreement between beauty and modesty. (Rara est adeo concordia formæ Atque pudicitie.)

Lay down the wreck of power to rest,
Where man can boast that he has trod
On him that was "the scourge of God"

EDWARD EVERETT, Alaric the Visigoth St. 3.

¹⁵
How poor remembrances are statues, tombs,
And other monuments that men erect
To princes, which remain closed rooms
Where but a few behold them.

JOHN FLORIO, Ode

¹⁶
Tombs are the clothes of the dead; a grave is but a plain suit, and a rich monument is one embroidered

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State; Of Tombs.

¹⁷
There wants no marble for a tomb
Whose breast hath marble been to me.

WILLIAM HARRINGTON, To Roses in the Bosom of Castara.

¹⁸
Not by marble graven with public records is the breath and life of godly heroes continued after death. (Non incisa notis marmora publicis, Per quæ spiritus et vita redivit bonis
Post mortem ducibus.)

HORACE, Odes, Bk. iv, ode 8, l. 13.

¹⁹
See nations slowly wise, and meanly just,

To buried merit raise the tardy bust.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 139.

¹ He is covered by the heavens who has no sepulchral urn. (Caelo tegitur qui non habet urnam.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 819.

He that unburied lies wants not his hearse,
For unto him a tomb's the Universe.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 41.

Nothing can cover his high fame but Heaven;
No pyramids set off his memories,
But the eternal substance of his greatness;
To which I leave him.

JOHN FLETCHER, The False One. Act ii, sc. 1.

² Towers of silence.

ROBERT X. MURPHY. (SIR GEORGE BROWOOD, Letter, London Times, 8 Aug., 1905.)

³ To this man a statue of gold should be set up. (Huic decet statuam statui ex auro.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 640. (Act iv, sc. 4.)

I will raise her statue in pure gold.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 3, l. 299.

⁴ The erection of a monument is superfluous; our memory will endure if our lives have deserved it. (Impensa monumenti supercavua est; memoria nostri durabit, si vita meruimus.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ix, epis. 19, sec. 3.

The marble keeps merely a cold and sad memory of a man who would else be forgotten. No man who needs a monument ever ought to have one.

HAWTHORNE, English Note-Books: 12 Nov., 1857, Westminster Abbey.

Those only deserve a monument who do not need one; that is, who have raised themselves a monument in the minds and memories of men.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 388.

⁵ Protect his memory, and preserve his story.
Remain a lasting monument of his glory.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Lines on Drayton's Monument.

Like Collins, ill-starred name!
Whose lay's requital was, that tardy Fame,
Who bound no laurel round his living head,
Should hang it o'er his monument when dead.

SCOTT, The Bridal of Triermain: Introduction. St. 8.

⁶ So fits the world's uncertain span!
Nor zeal for God, nor love for man
Gives mortal monuments a date
Beyond the power of Time and Fate.

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Canto vi, st. 1.

⁷ This grave shall have a living monument.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 320.

⁸ And when old time shall lead him to his end,
Goodness and he fill up one monument!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 93.

⁹ If charnel-houses and our graves must send
Those that we bury back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 71.

¹⁰ If a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument than the bell rings and the widow weeps.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 2, l. 80.

There's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: but, by 'r lady, he must build churches, then; or else shall he suffer not thinking on.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 142.

¹¹ Among the knightly brasses of the graves,
And by the cold Hic Jacets of the dead!

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 750. The first two words of tombstone inscriptions were usually "Hic Jacet," Here Lies.

May no rude hand deface it,
And its forlorn Hic jacet!

WORDSWORTH, Ellen Irwin, or The Braes of Kirth. St. 7.

¹² Let it rise! Let it rise, till it meet the sun in his coming; let the earliest light of the morning gild it, and the parting day linger and play on its summit.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address, on laying the corner-stone of the Bunker Hill Monument.

¹³ A warrior, with his shield of pride
Cleaving humbly to his side,
And hands in resignation prest,
Palm to palm, on his tranquil breast.

WORDSWORTH, The White Doe of Rylstone. Canto i, l. 128.

¹⁴ If you would see his monument, look around.
(Si monumentum requiris circumspeice.)

CHRISTOPHER WREN, Epitaph, for his father, Sir Christopher Wren, inscribed on his tomb in St. Paul's cathedral, London.

Wouldst thou behold his monument? look around!

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: Florence. Referring to Massaccio.

And, talking of Epitaphs,—much I admire his,
Circumspeice si Monumentum requiris;
Which an erudite Verger translated to me,
"If you ask for his monument, Sir-cons-spy-see!"

R. H. BARTAM, The Cynatoph.

"Si monumentum queris, circumspeice" would be equally applicable to a physician buried in a churchyard.

HORACE SMITH, The Tin Trumpet.

MOON, THE

I—Moon: Apophisms

¹ Thinketh, He dwelleth i' the cold o' the moon.

Thinketh He made it, with the sun to match,
But not the stars; the stars came otherwise.

ROBERT BROWNING, Caliban upon Setebos, l. 25.

Do I carry the moon in my pocket?

ROBERT BROWNING, Master Hugues of Saxe-Gotha, St. 29.

² Doth the moon care for the barking of a dog?

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 7.

The moon does not heed the barking of dogs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 208.

³ Quoth Pandarus, thou hast a full great care
Lest that the churl may fall out of the moon!

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. i, l. 1023.

⁴ And hail their queen, fair regent of the night.

ERASMUS DARWIN, Botanic Garden, Pt. i, canto ii, l. 90.

Now Cynthia, nam'd fair regent of the night.

JOHN GAY, Trivia, Bk. iii, l. 4.

The dews of summer night did fall;

The moon (sweet regent of the sky)

Silver'd the walls of Cumnor Hall,

And many an oak that grew thereby.

WILLIAM JULIUS MICKLE, Cumnor Hall.

⁵ The appearance of the face in the moon may equally well arise from interchange of parts.

EPICURUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus, Bk. x, sec. 95.)

⁶ With this pleasant, merry toy, he . . . made his friends believe the moon to be made of green cheese.

ERASMUS, Adagia. (Udall, tr., 1542.) This is one of the most frequently found sayings in sixteenth and seventeenth century literature.

They would make men believe that the moon is made of green cheese.

JOHN FRITH, Antithesis, 315. (1573)

Or think that the moon is made of a green cheese.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

He . . . thought the moon was made of green
cheese.

RABELAIS, Works, Bk. i, ch. 11.

He made an instrument to know

If the moon shine at full or no;

That would, as soon as e'er she shone straight,

Whether 'twere day or night demonstrate;

Tell what her d'iameter to an Inch is,

And prove that she's not made of green cheese.

BUTLER, Hudibras, Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 261.

⁷ You gazed at the moon and fell in a gutter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 5904.

⁸ Fear may force a man to cast beyond the moon.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

I cast before the Moon.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 78. (1579)

⁹ We should in that but hark against the moon.

HEYWOOD AND ROWLEY, Fortune by Land and Sea, Act i, sc. 1.

I'd rather be a dog, and bay the moon,

Than such a Roman.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, Act iv, sc. 3, l. 27.

But thou, as blind Bayards, barkest at the moon.

THOMAS WRIGHT, Political Poems, ii, 53.

¹⁰ O Maker of sweet poets.

KEATS, I Stood Tiptoe Upon a Little Hill, l.
116. Referring to the moon.

¹¹ Let the air strike our tune,
Whilst we show reverence to yond peeping
moon.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Witch, Act v, sc. 2.

¹² Another Cynthia her new journey runs,

And other planets circle other suns.

PORR, The Dunciad, Bk. iii, l. 243.

¹³ God saves the moon from the wolves.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

To keep the moon safe from the wolves. (Garder la lune des loups.)

RABELAIS, Works, Bk. ii.

¹⁴ The moon is not seen where the sun shines.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

¹⁵ That I could clamber to the frozen moon

And draw the ladder after me.

SCHOPENHAUER, Parerga and Paralipomena.

¹⁶ O sovereign mistress of true melancholy.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, Act iv,
sc. 9, l. 11.

¹⁷ How now, moon-calf? How dost thine ague?

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, Act ii, sc. 2, l. 139.

¹⁸ A sweet little Venus we'll fondle between us,

When I wed my old man in the moon.

JAMES THORNTON, My Sweetheart's the Man in the Moon. (1892)

¹⁹ Everyone is a moon, and has a dark side which he never shows to anybody.

MARK TWAIN, *Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Cal-
ender*.

Nay; for if that moon could love a mortal, . . .

She would turn a new side to her mortal,

Side unseen of herdsman, huntsman, steers-
man— . . .

Dumb to Homer, dumb to Keats—him, even!

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More, Sec. 116.

See also BROWNING under LOVE: PROTESTATIONS.

J. AUGUSTINE WADE, Meet Me by Moonlight
.. Alone.

II—Moon: Description

² Soon as the evening shades prevail,
The moon takes up the wondrous tale,
And nightly, to the listening earth,
Repeats the story of her birth.

ADDISON, Ode. (Spectator. No. 465.)

³ The moon is a silver pin-head vast,
That holds the heaven's tent-hangings fast.
W. R. ALGER, The Use of the Moon.

⁴ And from embattled clouds emerging slow,
Cynthia came riding on her silver car.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. ii, l. 107.

Choose a firm cloud before it fall, and in it
Catch, ere she change, the Cynthia of this minute.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 19.

⁵ The moon, like a flower,
In heaven's high bower
With silent delight
Sits and smiles on the night.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Night.

⁶ Curving on a sky imbrued with colour,
Drifted over Fiesole by twilight;
Came she, our new crescent of a hair'sbreadth.

Full she flared it, lamping Samminiato.
Rounder 'twixt the cypresses and rounder,
Perfect till the nightingales applauded.

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Sec. 15.

⁷ That gentle Moon, the lesser light, the Lover's lamp, the Swain's delight,
A ruined world, a globe burnt out, a corpse
upon the road of night.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. v, 11.

⁸ The moon pull'd off her veil of light,
That hides her face by day from sight
(Mysterious veil, of brightness made,
That's both her lustre and her shade),
And in the lantern of the night,
With shining horns hung out her light.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 4, l. 905.

⁹ The devil's in the moon for mischief; they Who call'd her chaste, methinks, began too soon

Their nomenclature; there is not a day,
The longest, not the twenty-first of June,
Sees half the business in a wicked way,
On which three single hours of moonshine
smile—

And then she looks so modest all the while!
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto 1, st. 113.

¹⁰ Into the sunset's turquoise marge
The moon dips, like a pearly barge;
Enchantment sails through magic seas,
To fairyland Hesperides,
Over the hills and away.

MADISON CRAWFORD, At Sunset.

¹¹ Till clomb above the eastern bar
The horned Moon, with one bright star
Within the nether tips.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner, l. 209.

The moving Moon went up the sky,
And no where did abide:
Softly she was going up,
And a star or two beside.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner, l. 263.

¹² When the hollow drum has beat to bed
And the little sifer hangs his head,
When all is mute the Moorish flute,
And nodding guards watch wearily,
Oh, then let me,
From prison free,

March out by moonlight cheerily.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Mountaineers.
Act 1, sc. 2.

¹³ Hour after hour that passionless bright face
Climbs up the desolate blue.

DINAH MARIA MULLOCK CRAIK, Moon-Struck.

¹⁴ How like a queen comes forth the lonely
Moon

From the slow opening curtains of the clouds;

Walking in beauty to her midnight throne!
GEORGE CROLY, Diana.

¹⁵ The moon is distant from the sea,
And yet with amber hands
She leads him, docile as a boy,
Along appointed sands.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iii, No. 31.

¹⁶ The man who has seen the rising moon break out of the clouds at midnight, has been present like an archangel at the creation of light and of the world.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

¹⁷ The moon low sailing where the waters fill
The lozenge lake, beside the banks of balm,
Gleams like a chevron on the river's arm.

BRET HARTE, Cadet Grey. Canto ii, st. 2.

¹⁸ A golden sickle reaping darkness down.
JAMES BARRON HOPE, Jamestown.

¹⁹ He who would see old Hoghton right
Must view it by the pale moonlight.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, English Proverbs and Provincial Phrases, p. 196.

If thou would'st view fair Melrose aright,
Go visit it by the pale moonlight.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto ii, st. 1.

¹ Mother of light! how fairly dost thou go Over those hoary crests, divinely led!
Art thou that huntress of the silver bow
Fabled of old? Or rather dost thou tread
Those cloudy summits thence to gaze below,
Like the wild chamois from her Alpine snow,
Where hunters never climb'd—secure from dread?

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to the Moon. St. 1.

² The crimson Moon, uprising from the sea,
With large delight, foretells the harvest near.
EDWARD HOVELL-THURLOW, The Harvest Moon.

³ Queen and huntress, chaste and fair,
Now the sun is laid to sleep,
Seated in thy silver chair,
State in wonted manner keep:
Hesperus entreats thy light,
Goddess excellently bright. . . .
Bless us then with wish'd sight,
Goddess excellently bright.
BEN JONSON, Hymn to Diana. (Cynthia's Revels. Act v, sc. 3.)

⁴ What is there in thee, Moon! that thou should'st move
My heart so potently?
KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iii, l. 142.

The moon put forth a little diamond peak,
No bigger than an unobserved star,
Or tiny point of fairy cinetars.
KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 497.

⁵ See yonder fire! It is the moon
Slow rising o'er the eastern hill.
It glimmers on the forest tips.
And through the dewy foliage drips
In little rivulets of light,
And makes the heart in love with night.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. vi, l. 462.

⁶ The bent and broken moon,
Batter'd and black, as from a thousand battles,
Hangs silent on the purple walls of Heaven.
JOAQUIN MILLER, Ira. Sc. 2.

⁷ The moon had climbed the highest hill
Which rises o'er the source of Dee,
And from the eastern summit shed
Her silver light on tower and tree.
JOHN LOWE, Mary's Dream.

⁸ Unmuffle, ye faint stars; and thou fair Moon,
That won'tst to love the traveller's benison,
Stoop thy pale visage through an amber cloud,
And disinherit Chaos.
MILTON, Comus, l. 331.

I walk unseen
On the dry smooth-shaven green,
To behold the wandering Moon
Riding near her highest noon,
Like one that had been led astray
Through the heav'n's wide pathless way;
And oft, as if her head she bow'd,
Stooping through a fleecy cloud.
MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 63.

⁹ The Moon,
Rising in clouded majesty, at length,
Apparent Queen, unveil'd her peerless light,
And o'er the dark her silver mantle threw.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 606.

¹⁰ Like moonlight o'er a troubled sea,
Brightening the storm it cannot calm.
THOMAS MOORE, The Loves of the Angels,
l. 1153.

¹¹ The moon looks On many brooks,
The brook can see no moon but this.
THOMAS MOORE, While Gazing on the Moon's Light. Lines suggested by:
The moon looks upon many night flowers; the night flowers see but one moon.
SIR WILLIAM JONAS.

¹² The moon was a ghostly galleon tossed upon cloudy seas.
ALFRED NOYES, The Highwayman.

¹³ Day glimmer'd in the east, and the white
Moon
Hung like a vapour in the cloudless sky.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: The Lake of Geneva.

¹⁴ Again thou reignest in thy golden hall,
Rejoicing in thy sway, fair queen of night!
THOMAS ROSCOE, To the Harvest Moon.

¹⁵ The curled moon Was like a little feather
Fluttering far down the gulf.
D. G. ROSSETTI, The Blessed Damsel. St. 10.

¹⁶ Good even, good fair moon, good even to
thee;
I prithee, dear moon, now show to me
The form and the features, the speech and degree,
Of the man that true lover of mine shall be.
SCOTT, The Heart of Mid-Lothian. Ch. 17.

¹⁷ The glimpses of the moon.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 83.
Let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon.
SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 27.

¹⁸ Dull: What was a month old at Cain's birth;
that's not five months old as yet?
Hol: Dictyanna, goodman Dull; Dictyanna, goodman Dull.
Dull: What is Dictyanna?

Nath: A title to Phoebe, to Luna, to the moon.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 37.

1 Upon the corner of the moon,
There hangs a vaporous drop profound.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 23.

2 How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 54.

3 How slow

This old moon wanes! she lingers my desires,
Like to a step-dame or a dowager
Long withering out a young man's revenue.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act i, sc. 1, l. 3.

The moon, the governess of floods.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 103

The wat'ry star.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 1.

4 It is the very error of the moon;
She comes more nearer earth than she was wont,
And makes men mad.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 109.

5 Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
Who is already sick and pale with grief,
That thou her maid art far more fair than she:

Be not her maid, since she is envious.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 4.

6 Romeo: Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear,
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops—

Juliet: O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,

That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 107.

7 That orb'd maiden with white fire laden,
Whom mortals call the moon.

SHELLEY, The Cloud, l. 45.

Bright wanderer, fair coquette of Heaven,
To whom alone it has been given
To change and be adored forever.

SHELLEY, Fragment: To the Moon.

Art thou pale for weariness
Of climbing Heaven and gazing on the earth,
Wandering companionless

Among the stars that have a different birth,—
And ever changing, like a joyless eye
That finds no object worth its constancy?

SHELLEY, Fragment: To the Moon.

8 The young moon has fed
Her exhausted horn

With the sunset's fire.

SHELLEY, Hellas, l. 1031.

The moonlight's ineffectual glow.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto viii.

9 With how sad steps, O Moon, thou climb'st
the skies!

How silently and with how wan a face!

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet xxxi. Quoted by Wordsworth, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii, No. 23.

With what a silent and dejected pace
Dost thou, wan Moon, upon thy way advance.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, Angelina.

10 I with borrow'd silver shine,
What you see is none of mine.

First I show you but a quarter,
Like the bow that guards the Tartar:

Then the half, and then the whole,
Ever dancing round the pole.

SWIFT, On the Moon.

11 Behold, whatever wind prevail,
Slow westering, a phantom sail—

The lonely soul of Yesterday—

Unpiloted, pursues her way.

JOHN B. TABB, The Mid-day Moon.

12 Moon, worn thin to the width of a quill,
In the sawn clouds flying,

How good to go, light into light, and still

Give light, dying.

SARA TEASDALE, Moon's Ending.

13 A maiden moon that sparkles on a sty.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 178.

14 Ask me no more: the moon may draw the sea.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vi, l. 364.

The innocent moon that nothing does but shine
Moves all the labouring surges of the world.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Mirage.

15 Pale ports o' the moon.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Hound of Heaven.

16 Lo, the moon ascending,

Up from the east the silvery round moon,
Beautiful over the house-tops, ghostly, phantom moon,

Immense and silent moon.

WALT WHITMAN, Dregs for Two Veterans.

17 But tenderly Above the sea

Hangs, white and calm, the hunter's moon.

J. G. WHITTIER, The Eve of Election. St. 1.

18 And suddenly the moon withdraws
Her sickle from the lightening skies,

And to her sombre cavern flies,
Wrapped in a veil of yellow gauze.

OSCAR WILDE, La Puite de la Lune.

¹ You meaner beauties of the night,
That poorly satisfy our eyes
More by your number than your light;
You common people of the skies,—
What are you when the moon shall rise?
SM HENRY WORTON, On His Mistress, The Queen of Bohemia.

² Late, late yestreen I saw the new moon,
Wi' the auld moon in hir arm.
UNKNOWN, Sir Patrick Spence. St. 7. (PERCY, Reliques. Ser. 1.)

I saw the new moon late yestreen,
Wi' the auld moon in her arm.
UNKNOWN, Ballad. (SCOTT, Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border.)

³ By the light of the moon, my friend Pierrot,
Lend me thy pen to write a word;
My candle is out, I've no more fire,
Open your door to me, for the love of God.
(Au clair de la lune, Mon ami Pierrot,
Prête moi ta plume, Pour écrire un mot;
Ma chandelle est morte, Je n'ai plus de feu,
Ouvre moi ta porte, Pour l'amour de Dieu.
UNKNOWN. French folk song, quoted by George du Maurier in Trilby.)

MORALITY

⁴ Not the whiteness of years but of morals is to be praised. (Non annorum canities est laudanda, sed morum.)

AMBROSIUS, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, sec. 7.

⁵ Kant, as we all know, compared the Moral Law to the starry heavens, and found them both sublime. It would, on the naturalistic hypothesis, be more appropriate to compare it to the protective blotches on the beetle's back,
and to find them both ingenious.

ARTHUR J. BALFOUR, Foundations of Belief: Naturalism and Ethics. See 1914:8.

⁶ The foundations of morality are like all other foundations: if you dig too much about them
the superstructure will come tumbling down.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-books.

⁷ A moral (like all morals) melancholy.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 63.

"Tut, tut, child!" said the Duchess. "Every thing's got a moral, if you only can find it."

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 9.

What'er the story be, the moral's true.
DAYDEN, University of Oxford: Prologue.

⁸ Morality was held a standing jest,

And faith a necessary fraud at best.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. II, l. 597.

⁹ He cursed the canting moralist,
Who measures right and wrong.

JOHN DAVIDSON, A Ballad of a Post Born.

To denounce moralizing out of hand is to pronounce a moral judgment.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. I, p. 19.

¹⁰ Let us be moral. Let us contemplate existence.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 10.

¹¹ Morality, said Jesus, is kindness to the weak; morality, said Nietzsche, is the bravery of the strong; morality, said Plato, is the effective harmony of the whole. Probably all three doctrines must be combined to find a perfect ethic; but can we doubt which of the elements is fundamental?

WILL DURANT, The Story of Philosophy.

¹² Men talk of "mere Morality," which is much as if one should say "Poor God, with nobody to help him."

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

¹³ The moral system of the universe is like a document written in alternate ciphers, which change from line to line.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Calvinism.

¹⁴ Morality, when vigorously alive, sees farther than intellect.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Divine Caesar.

¹⁵ It is for each man to procure himself the emotion he needs, and the morality which suits him.

RÉMY DE GOURMONT, Decadence.

¹⁶ We are doomed to be moral and cannot help ourselves.

JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, Morality.

¹⁷ Veracity is the heart of morality.

THOMAS HENRY HUXLEY, Universities Actual and Ideal.

¹⁸ Rhetoric takes no real account of the art in literature, and morality takes no account of the art in life.

J. W. KRUTCH, The Modern Temper, p. 134.

¹⁹ Morality without religion is only a kind of dead reckoning,—an endeavor to find our place on a cloudy sea.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanaugh. Ch. 13.

²⁰ The difference between a moral man and a man of honor is that the latter regrets a discreditable act even when it has worked.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. IV, p. 206.

1 I find the doctors and the sages
Have differ'd in all climes and ages,
And two in fifty scarce agree
On what is pure morality.

THOMAS MOORE, Morality, l. 15.

2 Never did moral thought occur
In more unlucky hour than this;
For oh! I just was leading her
To talk of love and think of bliss.
THOMAS MOORE, The Snake.

3 There are many religions, but there is only one morality.

RUSKIN, Lectures on Art, Lect. II, sec. 37.

4 A moral fool.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act IV, sc. 2, l. 58.

Come, you are too severe a moralist.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act II, sc. 3, l. 301.

5 Absolute morality is the regulation of conduct in such a way that pain shall not be inflicted.

HERBERT SPENCER, Essays: Prison Ethics.

Morality knows nothing of geographical boundaries or distinctions of race.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics, Pt. I, ch. 2.

6 If thy morals make thee dreary, depend upon it they are wrong.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Christmas Sermon.

7 Morals are a personal affair; in the war of righteousness every man fights for his own hand.

R. L. STEVENSON, Lay Morals.

8 There is no such thing as morality; it is not immoral for the tiger to eat the wolf, or the wolf the cat, or the cat the bird, and so on down; that is their business. . . . It is not immoral to create the human species—with or without ceremony; nature intended exactly these things.

MARK TWAIN, (PAINE, Mark Twain.)

9 Morality is simply the attitude we adopt towards people we personally dislike.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband, Act II.

Modern morality consists in accepting the standard of one's age.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray, Ch. 6.

10 Morality was made for man, not man for morality.

11 I oft had seen the dawning light run

As red wine through the hills, and break
Through many a mist's burning;
But, here, no earth profaned the sun;
Heaven, ocean, did alone partake
The sacrament of morning.

E. B. BROWNING, A Sabbath Morning at Sea.

12 Never glad, confident morning again!
ROBERT BROWNING, The Lost Leader.

13 The morn is up again, the dewy morn,
With breath all incense, and with cheek all bloom.

The very face to make us sad;
If but to think in other times
The same calm quiet look she had.

THOMAS HOOD, On Melancholy.

'Tis always morning somewhere in the world.

RICHARD HENGST HORNE, Orion. Bk. lii, can. 2.

'Tis always morning somewhere, and above
The awakening continents, from shore to shore,
Somewhere the birds are singing evermore.

LONGFELLOW, Birds of Killingworth. St. 16.

The blessed morn has come again;
The early gray

Taps at the slumberer's window-pane,
And seems to say,

Break, break from the enchanter's chain,
Away, away!

RALPH HOYT, Snow: A Winter Sketch.

MOSES

⁹ And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor: but no man knoweth of his sepulcher unto this day.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxiv, 6.

By Nebo's lonely mountain,
On this side Jordan's wave,

In a vale in the land of Moab,

There lies a lonely grave;

But no man built that sepulcher,

And no man saw it e'er,

For the angels of God upturned the sod

And laid the dead man there

CYRIL FRANCIS ALEXANDER, The Burial of Moses

This was the truest warrior

That ever buckled sword;

This the most gifted poet

That ever breathed a word;

And never earth's philosopher

Traced with his golden pen

On the deathless page truths half so sage

As he wrote down for men.

CYRIL FRANCIS ALEXANDER, The Burial of Moses.

¹⁰ Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth.

Old Testament: Numbers, xii, 3.

Moses was a merciful, meek man, and yet with what fury did he run through the camp, and cut the throats of three-and-thirty thousand of his dear Israelites that were fallen into idolatry.

DANIEL DEFOE, The Shortest Way with the Dissenters.

¹¹ Whilst you are fighting (said Panurge) I will pray God for your victory, after the example of the chivalrous Captain Moses, leader of the people of Israel. (Pendant que comba-

Just try to be the fellow that your Mother thinks you are.

WILL S. ADKIN, Just Try to Be the Fellow.

²¹ But the father's heart was broken,
And this is all he said:
"Their mother is in a casket
In the baggage coach ahead."
FRANK ARCHER, Mother. Later rewritten by Gussie L. Davis and renamed In the Baggage Coach Ahead. (1896)

²² My father urged me sair—my mother didna speak,
But she looket in my face till my heart was like to break.

LADY ANNE BARNARD, Auld Robin Gray.

²³ My mother! when I learn'd that thou wast dead,

Say, wast thou conscious of the tears I shed?
Hover'd thy spirit o'er thy sorrowing soa,
Wretch even then, life's journey just begun?

Perhaps thou gav'st me, though unseen, a kiss;
Perhaps a tear, if souls can weep in bliss—
Ah, that maternal smile! it answers—Yes.
COWPER, On the Receipt of My Mother's Picture, l. 21.

¹ You may have tangible wealth untold;
Caskets of jewels and coffers of gold.
Richer than I you can never be—
I had a mother who read to me.

There is none,
In all this cold and hollow world, no fount
Of deep, strong, deathless love, save that within
A mother's heart.

FELICIA HEMANS, The Siege of Valencia.

Youth fades; love droops; the leaves of friendship fall:

A mother's secret love outlives them all.

O. W. HOLMES, The Mother's Secret.

If I were hanged on the highest hill,

He governs land and sea,
He wields a mighty scepter
O'er lesser powers that be;
But a mightier power and stronger
Man from his throne has hurled,
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.
WILLIAM ROSS WALLACE, What Rules the World. (c. 1865)

They say man rules the universe,
That subject shore and main
Kneel down and bless the empery
Of his majestic reign;
But a sovereign, gentler, mightier,
Man from his throne has hurled,
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.
WILLIAM STEWART ROSS, The Hand That Rocks the Cradle. (Woman: Her Glory.
Vol. ii, p. 420. 1894.)

"The hand that rocks the cradle"—but today
there's no such hand.
It is bad to rock the baby, they would have us understand;
So the cradle's but a relic of the former foolish
days,
When mothers reared their children in unscientific ways;
When they jounced them and they bounced them, those poor dwarfs of long ago—

(VOLTAIRE, Sicile de Louis XIV. Ch. 28.)

Fournier alleges that this is just another example of Voltaire inventing history, and that the phrase was really used by the Spanish Ambassador when he greeted the new king.

A mountain and a river are good neighbours.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Ye crags and peaks, I'm with you once again!

O sacred forms, how proud you look!

How high you lift your heads into the sky!

How huge you are! how mighty and how free!

JAMES SHERRIDAN KNOWLES, William Tell. Act i, sc. 2.

Mountains, ye are growing old; your ribs of granite are getting weak and rotten.

E. M. MORSE, Mountains.

A mountain was in labor, sending forth dreadful groans, and there was the highest expectation throughout the region. But it brought forth only a mouse. (Mons parturibat, gemitus immanes ciens; Eratque in terris maxima expectatio. At ille murem peperit.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 22, l. 1. The Latin rendering of Æsop's fable of The Mountain in Labor.

The mountain groaned in pangs of birth:

Great expectation filled the earth;

Aud lo! a mouse was born!

Metrical rendering of Phædrus, iv, 22, l.

The mountain labors, and a ridiculous mouse is born. (Parturient montes, nascetur ridiculus mus.)

HORACE, Art Poetica, l. 139.

The old fable was made good, "A mountain is in travail and then a mouse is born." (Τὸ μωλογοῦσθαι τὸν ὄρειον ὅπως, εἴνα μὲν δεικνύσθαι.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Agesilaus. Ch. 36, sec. 5. In Athenæus, it is Tachos himself who makes this jest upon Agesilaus, who retorts, "Some day you will think me a lion."

Friends may meet,

But mountains never greet.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. An English rendering of the Greek proverb, "Ὅρος ὄρος οὐ μίγνυται," "Mountain will not mingle with mountain." The French have a proverb, dating from the fifteenth century, "Entre deux montagnes vallée."

I found the proverb true that men have more privilege than mountains in meeting.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, The Penniless Pilgrimage. (1618)

Friends possibly may meet, but mountains never.

GEORGE WITHER, Dark Lantern, 29. (1653)

Mountains never shake hands. Their roots may touch: they may keep together some way up; but at length they part company, and rise into individual, insulated peaks. So it is with great men.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

MOUNTAIN AND MAHOMET, see ADAPTABILITY.

Mountains are the beginning and the end of all natural scenery.

RUSKIN, True and Beautiful: Mountains.

Who digs hills because they do aspire,

Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 4, l. 5.

As mountains are for winds,

That shake not, though they blow perpetually.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1, 141.

Longer shadows fall from lofty mountains. (Majoresque cadunt altis de montibus umbræ.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. i, l. 84.

II—Mountain: Ossa on Pelion

They were fain to pile Ossa on Olympus, and Pelion, with it waving forests, on Ossa, so that heaven might be scaled. ("Ὅσσαν ἐπ' Ὀλύμπῳ μέσσαν θέμεν, ἀντάρ ἐπ' Ὅσσῃ Πήλιον ἐπισφύλλου, ἵ' οὐρανὸς ἐμβαδὸς εἴη.")

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 315. An allusion to the myth of the Titans, who piled Mount Pelion and Mount Ossa upon Olympus in order to scale the dwelling of the gods, but were overthrown by Jupiter.

To fling Ossa upon Olympus, and to pile Pelion with all its growth of leafy woods on Ossa.

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 315. (Bryant, tr.)

They were setting

Ossa upon Olympus, and upon

Steep Ossa heavy Pelius.

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 315. (Chapman, tr.)

To the Olympian summit they essayed

To heave up Ossa, and to Ossa's crown

Branch-waving Pelion.

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 315. (Cowper, tr.)

Heav'd on Olympus tottering Ossa stood;
On Ossa, Pelion nods with all his wood.

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 315. (Pope, tr.)

1 To pile Pelion upon Olympus. (Pelion imposuisse Olympo.)

HORACE, Odes, Bk. iii, ode 4, l. 52.

2 Then the Almighty Father hurled his thunderbolts, shattering Olympus, and dashed Pelion down from underlying Ossa. (Tum pater omnipotens misso perfregit Olympum Fulmine et excussit subjectæ Pelion Ossæ.)

OVID, Metamorphoses, Bk. i, l. 154.

3 I would have you call to mind the strength of the ancient giants, that undertook to lay the high mountain Pelion on the top of Ossa, and set among those the shady Olympus.

RABELAIS, Works, Bk. iv, ch. 38.

4 Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead, Till of this flat a mountain you have made, To o'ertop old Pelion, on the skyish head Of blue Olympus.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act v, sc. i, l. 274.

5 Thrice did they attempt to pile Ossa on Pelion, and over Ossa to roll leafy Olympus. (Ter sunt conati Pelio Ossam Scilicet, atque Ossæ frondosum involvere Olympum.)

VERGIL, Georgics, Bk. i, l. 281.

III—Mountain: Alp on Alp

6 Ah! as a pilgrim who the Alps doth pass,
Or Atlas' temples crown'd with winter's glass,

The airy Caucasus, the Apennine,
Pyrenees' cliffs where sun doth never shine,
When he some heaps of hills hath overwent,
Begins to think on rest, his journey spent,
Till, mounting some tall mountain, he do find
More heights before him than he left behind.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Flowers of Sion: Hymn of the Fairest Fœn, l. 149. (1623)

So pleas'd at first the tow'ring Alps we try,
Mount o'er the vales, and seem to tread the sky;
Th' eternal snows appear already past,
And the first clouds and mountains seem the last:

But those attain'd, we tremble to survey
The growing labours of the lengthen'd way;
Th' increasing prospect tires our wand'ring eyes,
Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise!

POPE, Essay on Criticism, Pt. ii, l. 25. (1711)

7 Alps on Alps in clusters swelling,
Mighty, and pure, and fit to make
The ramparts of a Godhead's dwelling!

THOMAS MOORE, Rhymes on the Road, Extract i, l. 26.

8 Inexperienced travellers who, finding themselves for the first time in the Alps, imagine that they can clear them with every mountain, and, when they have reached the summit, are discouraged to see higher mountains in front of them.

ROUSSEAU, Emile, Bk. iv. Addison used the same comparison in the Spectator.

9 He was like the adventurous climber on the Alps, to whom the surmounting the most dangerous precipices and ascending to the most towering peaks only shows yet dizzier heights and higher points of elevation.

SCOTT, of Napoleon, in his Life of Napoleon.

IV—Mountain: Description

10 Oh, thou Parnassus whom I now survey,
Not in the phrensy of a dreamer's eye,
Not in the fabled landscape of a lay,
But soaring snow-clad through thy native sky,

In the wild pomp of mountain majesty!

BLISS CARMAN, The Cry of the Hill-born.

15 Hast thou a charm to stay the morning-star
In his steep course? So long he seems to pause

On thy bald, awful head, O sovran Blanc!
S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise in the Vale of Chamouni, l. 1.

Thou, most awful Form!
Risest from forth thy silent sea of pines,
How silently! Around thee and above
Deep is the air and dark, substantial, black,
An æon mass: methinks thou piercest it
As with a wedge! But when I look again
It is thine own calm home, thy crystal shrine,
Thy habitation from eternity!
O dread and silent Mount! I gazed upon thee,
Till thou, still present to the bodily sense,
Didst vanish from my thought: entranced in prayer
I worshipp'd the Invisible alone.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise, l. 5.

Rise, O ever rise!

Rise like a cloud of incense, from the Earth!
Thou kingly Spirit throned among the hills,
Thou dread ambassador from Earth to Heaven.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise, l. 79.

Mont Blanc is the monarch of mountains;
They crown'd him long ago,
On a throne of rocks, in a robe of clouds,
With a diadem of snow.

BYRON, Manfred, Act i, sc. 1, l. 62.

Mountains are good to look upon
But do not look too long.
They are made of granite. They will break your heart.

COLONEL SELWY TITUS. Title of tract recommending the assassination of Cromwell.
(Harleian Miscellany.)

Who killed Cock Robin?

"I," said the Sparrow,
"With my bow and arrow,
I killed Cock Robin."

UNKNOWN, *The Death and Burial of Cock
Robin*. Probably an adaptation of John Skelton's account of the sparrow's funeral in his Bake of Phylipp Sparrow (c. 1504), which in turn derives from Catullus's famous elegy,
"Passer mortuus est mee puella."

Blood, though it sleep a time, yet never dies.
The gods on murderers fix revengeful eyes.
CHAPMAN, The Widow's Tears. Act v, sc. 4.

Murder may pass unpunish'd for a time,
But tardy justice will o'ertake the crime.
DRYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 285.

Foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 237.

For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak
With most miraculous organ.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 622.

Truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid
long.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, li, 2, 83.

III—Murder: According to Shakespeare

Murder most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange and unnatural.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 27.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dis-patch'd:

Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhousel'd, disappointed, unanel'd,
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 74.

He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as fresh as
May;

And how his audit stands who knows save heaven?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 80.

At gaming, swearing, or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in't;
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven,
And that his soul may be as damn'd and black
As hell, whereto it goes.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 91.

Oh me unhappy! I have found them lying
Close in each other's arms, and fast asleep.
But that I would not damn two precious souls,
Bought with my Saviour's blood, and send them, laden

With all their scarlet sins upon their backs,
Unto a fearful judgment, their two lives
Had met upon my rapier!

THOMAS HEYWOOD, A Woman Killed with Kindness. Act iv, sc. 6.

1
Confusion now hath made his masterpiece!
Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o' the building!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 71.

Blood hath been shed ere now i' the olden time,
Ere humane statute purg'd the gentle weal;
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd
Too terrible for the ear

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 75.

The murderers.

Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers

Unmannerly breech'd with gore.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 120.

2
Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contrived murder: I lack iniquity
Sometimes to do me service.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 2, l. 1.

Then murder's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 115.

3
The great King of kings
Hath in the tables of his law commanded
That thou shalt do no murder: and wilt thou,
then,

Spurn at his edict and fulfil a man's?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 200.

Are you call'd forth from out a world of men
To slay the innocent?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 186.

IV—Murder: Some Jingles

4
Lizzie Borden took an axe
And gave her Mother forty whacks;
When she saw what she had done,
She gave her Father forty-one.

UNKNOWN, Lizzie Borden. Commemorating the murder of Lizzie Borden's father and step-mother at Fall River, Mass., 4 Aug., 1892.

There's no evidence of guilt,

Lizzie Borden,

That should make your spirit wilt,

Lizzie Borden;

Many do not think that you

Chopped your father's head in two,

It's so hard a thing to do,

Lizzie Borden.

A. L. BIXBY, To Lizzie.

6
Up the close an' down the stair,
But an' ben wi' Burke and Hare.
Burke's the butcher, Hare's the thief,
Knox the boy that buys the beef.

UNKNOWN, The West Point Murders. A series of Edinburgh crimes, committed by two degenerates named Burke and Hare for the purpose of supplying subjects for dissection to a medical college.

6
Jesse James had a wife,
She's a mourner all her life;
His children they were brave;

Oh, the dirty little coward

That shot Mr Howard,

Has laid poor Jesse in his grave.

UNKNOWN, Jesse James. Old song commemorating the murder of Jesse James by Robert Ford, at St Joseph, Mo., 3 April, 1882. James had been living under the name of Thomas Howard.

7
Two brothers in our town did dwell:
Hiram sought Heaven, but Isaac Sawtell
UNKNOWN, The Sawtell Murder. A New Hampshire crime of the '90s, in which Isaac Sawtell murdered his brother Hiram.

8
The three men came in the dead of night,
In the wind and the rain and the ruts,
They held Mrs. Shann and they took the
light,

And went up and stole their guts
UNKNOWN, The Shann Murder Case. A Princeton undergraduate song of 1892, sung to the tune of Don't You Hear Dem Bells. It celebrated the arrest of a local boarding-house keeper named Shann for the murder of her husband, supposedly by poison. It was found that his intestines had been removed, and Mrs. Shann alleged that three men had driven up at midnight, one had held her, while the other two mounted to the room where her husband's body lay and eviscerated it.

9
They cut his throat from ear to ear,
His brains they hattered in;
His name was Mr. William Weare,
He dwelt in Lyon's Inn.

THEMORE, HOOK, William Weare. On the authority of John Lockhart The lines, which refer to the murder of William Weare by John Thurtell in 1823, have also been ascribed to Lord William Lennox (see Sporting Review, 1839) and to William Webb, alias "Happy Webb," a London link-man. According to Mr. E. L. Pearson, this jingle delighted Sir Walter Scott. It was at Thurtell's trial that the famous dictum was elicited that respectability consists in keeping a gig. See under RESPECTABILITY.

1 And ever since historian writ,
And ever since a bard could sing,
Doth each exalt with all his wit
The noble art of murdering

III—Music: Music Hath Charms

Music hath charms to soothe a savage breast,
To soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride.

Act I, sc. 1, l. 1. (1697) Some editions read

"Music has charms."

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast,"

And therefore proper at a sheriff's feast.

JAMES BRAMSTON, Man of Taste. (1729)

Rugged the breast that music cannot tame.

JOHN CONINGTON BARNFIELD, Sonnet.

Music has charms, we all may find,

Ingratiate deeply with the mind.

When art does sound's high power advance,
To music's pipe the pensive dance;
Motions unwill'd its powers have shown,
Tarantulated by a tune.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 141, (1737)

Music has charms alone for peaceful minds.
Pope, Sappho to Phaoon, l. 14.

1 Orpheus could lead the savage race;
And trees uprooted left their place,
Sequacious of the lyre:
But bright Cecilia rais'd the wonder high'r:
When to her organ vocal breath was giv'n,
An angel heard, and straight appear'd
Mistaking earth for heav'n.

DRYDEN, Song for St. Cecilia's Day. St. 7.

When Orpheus strikes the trembling lyre,
The streams stand still, the stones admire;

The list'ning savages advance,
The wolf and lamb around him trip,
The bears in awkward measures leap,
And tigers mingle in the dance:
The moving woods attended as he play'd,
And Rhodophe was left without a shade.

ADDISON, A Song for St. Cecilia's Day, l. 33.

2 Music's force can tame the furious beast:
Can make the wolf or foaming boar restrain
His rage; the lion drop his crested mane
Attentive to the song.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. ii, l. 67.

3 Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing:
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung; as sun and showers,
There had made a lasting spring.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 3.

Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart

Fail asleep, or hearing, die.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 9.

4 Music oft hath such a charm
To make bad good, and good provoke to harm.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 14.

5 Therefore the poet
Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones and floods;
Since nought so stockish, hard and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his
nature.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 79.

For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews,

Whose golden touch could soften steel and stones,

Make tigers tame and huge Leviathans
Forsoke unbounded deeps to dance on sands.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 78.

IV—Music: Its Power

6 Music religious beats inspires,
It wakes the soul, and lifts it high,
And wings it with sublime desires,
And fits it to bespeak the Deity.

ADDISON, A Song for St. Cecilia's Day, l. 41.

Music exalts each joy, allays each grief.

Expels diseases, softens every pain,
Subdues the rage of poison, and the plague.
JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. iv, l. 512.

7 Tunes and airs, even in their own nature, have in themselves some affinity with the affections. . . . So it is no marvel if they alter the spirits. Yet generally music feedeth that disposition of the spirits which it findeth.

FRANCIS BACON, Sylva Sylvarum, Century II,
sec. 114.

8 Is there a heart that music cannot melt?

Alas! how is that rugged heart forlorn!

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. I, l. 453.

The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 83. Often misquoted "music in his soul." See also CARLYLE, under LAUGHTER.

9 God is its author, and not man; he laid
The key-note of all harmonies; he planned
All perfect combinations, and he made
Us so that we could hear and understand.

J. G. BRAINARD, Music.

10 [Music] strikes in me a deep fit of devotion, and a profound contemplation of the First Composer. There is something in it of Divinity more than the ear discovers.

13 When Music, Heavenly Maid, was young,

While yet in early Greece she sung,
The Passions oft, to hear her shell,
Throug'd around her magic cell.

WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 1.

There is in souls a sympathy with sounds,
And, as the mind is pitch'd, the ear is pleas'd
With melting airs, or martial, brisk, or grave:
Some chord in unison with what we hear
Is touch'd within us, and the heart replica.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 1.

And learn, my sons, the wondrous power of Noise,

To move, to raise, to ravish ev'ry heart.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 222.

By Music minds an equal temper know,
Nor swell too high, nor sink too low. . . .
Warriors the fires with animated sounds,
Pours balm into the bleeding lover's wounds.

POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 22.

Music the fiercest grief can charm,
And Fate's severest rage disarm:
Music can soften pain to ease,
And make despair and madness please:
Our joys below it can improve,
And antedate the bliss above.

POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 118.

I am advised to give her music o' mornings;
they say it will penetrate.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 12.

Preposterous ass, that never read so far
To know the cause why music was ordain'd!
Was it not to refresh the mind of man
After his studies or his unusual pain?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 9.

As I went under the new telegraph-wire, I heard it vibrating like a harp high overhead.
It was as the sound of a far-off glorious life, a supernal life, which came down to us, and vibrated the lattice-work of this life of ours.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 3 Sept., 1851. This entry marks Thoreau's discovery of his favorite musical instrument, to which he refers so often in subsequent pages of his journal.

Music hath caught a higher pace than any virtue that I know. It is the arch-reformer;
it hastens the sun to its setting; it invites him to his rising; it is the sweetest reproach, a measured satire.

THOREAU, Winter: Journal, 8 Jan., 1842.

All music is what awakes from you when you are reminded by the instruments.
It is not the violins and the cornets, it is not the oboe nor the beating drums, nor the score of the baritone singer singing his sweet romanza, nor that of the men's chorus, nor that of the women's chorus.
It is nearer and farther than they.

WALT WHITMAN, A Song for Occupations.
Pt. iv.

Where gripping griefs the heart would wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
There music with her silver sound,
With speed is wont to send redress.
UNKNOWN, A Song to the Lute in Music.
(PERCY, Reliques.)

When gripping grief the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music with her silver sound . . .
With speedy help doth lend redress.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 5,
l. 128. An adaptation of the old song.

Sec. Mus.: I say "silver sound," because musicians sound for silver.

Peter: O, I cry you mercy. . . . It is "music with her silver sound," because musicians have no gold for sounding.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 5,
l. 136.

Servant and master am I: servant of those dead, and master of those living. Through my spirit immortals speak the message that makes the world weep and laugh, and wonder and worship. . . For I am the instrument of God. I am Music.

UNKNOWN, Music. (International Musician, July, 1928. Recited by Walter Damrosch.)

V—Music: Its Sweetness

¹ "This is the way," laughed the great god Pan (Laughed while he sat by the river),
"The only way since gods began
To make sweet music, they could succeed," Then, dropping his mouth to a hole in the reed,

He blew in power by the river.

E. B. BROWNING, A Musical Instrument. St. 5.
Sweet, sweet, sweet, O Pan!

Piercing sweet by the river!
Blinding sweet, O great god Pan!
The sun on the hill forgot to die,
And the lilies revived, and the dragon-fly
Came back to dream on the river.

E. B. BROWNING, A Musical Instrument. St. 6.

² Such sweet
Soft notes as yet musician's cunning
Never gave the enraptured air.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper. Pt. xii.

³ Music arose with its voluptuous swell.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 21.

⁴ The still sweet fall of music far away.
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. II, l. 112.

In hollow murmurs died away.
WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 68.

The strains decay And melt away,
In a dying, dying fall.
POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 19.

⁵ A solemn, strange and mingled air;
'Twas sad by fits, by starts 'twas wild.
WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 27.

⁶ In notes by distance made more sweet.
WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 60.

We are like the musician on the lake, whose melody is sweeter than he knows.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Art.

Sweetest melodies
Are those that are by distance made more sweet.
WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk. St. 2.

⁷ So just, so small, yet in so sweet a note,
It seemed the music melted in the throat.
JOHN DRYDEN, Flower and the Leaf, l. 199.

⁸ Soft as the breath of distant flutes at hours
When silent evening closes up the flowers.
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. II, l. 377.

⁹ Let me have music dying, and I seek
No more delight.
KEATS, Endymion. Bk. IV, l. 140.

Fading in music.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
III, sc. 2, l. 45.

¹⁰ Hoard melodies are sweet, but those unheard
Are sweeter; therefore, ye soft pipes, play on;

Not to the sensual ear, but, more endear'd,
Pipe to the spirit ditties of no tone.
KEATS, Ode on a Grecian Urn. St. 2.

¹¹ Who shall silence all the airs and madrigals that whisper softness in chambers?
MILTON, Areopagitica.

¹² Can any mortal mixture of earth's mould
Breathe such divine enchanting ravishment?
MILTON, Comus, l. 244.

There let the pealing organ blow,
To the full voice'd quire below,
In service high, and anthems clear,
As may with sweetness, through mine ear,
Dissolve me into ecstasies,
And bring all Heav'n before mine eyes.
MILTON, H Penseroso, l. 161.

And ever against eating cares,
Lap me in soft Lydian airs,
Married to immortal verse
Such as the meeting soul may pierce
In notes, with many a winding bout
Of linked sweetness, long drawn out.
MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 135.

¹³ Hark! the numbers soft and clear
Gently steal upon the ear.
POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 12.

¹⁴ Here will we sit and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 55.

Will thou have music? hark! Apollo plays
And twenty caged nightingales do sing.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 2, l. 37.

This music crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury and my passion
With its sweet air.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act I, sc. 2, l. 391.

¹⁵ If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it, that, surfeiting,
The appetite may sicken, and so die.
That strain again! it had a dying fall:
O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet sound,
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing and giving odour!

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act I, sc. 1, l. 1.
Matthew Arnold always contended that "sound" was a misprint for "sough."
If music be the food of love,
Sing on, sing on, sing on.
THOMAS D'UZZY, Pills to Purge Melancholy:
Vol. III, Song. (1661)

Is not music the food of love?

SHERMAN, The Rheas. Act II, sc. 1.

There's sure no passion in the human soul
But finds its food in music.

GEORGE LILLO, Fatal Curiosity. Act I, sc. 2.

I pant for the music which is divine;
My heart in its thirst is a dying flower;
Pour forth the sound like enchanted wine,
Loosen the notes in a silver shower;
Like a herbless plain, for the gentle rain,
I gasp, I faint, till they wake again.

SHELLEY, Music.

Sounds overflow the listener's brain,
So sweet, that joy is almost pain.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act II, sc. 2.

If I were to begin life again, I would devote it to music. It is the only cheap and unpunished rapture upon earth.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to the Countess of Carlisle, Aug., 1844.

Eftsoones they heard a most melodious sound,

Of all that mote delight a dainty ear.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. II, canto XII, st. 70.

Music bright as the soul of light, for wings an eagle, for notes a dove.

SWINBURNE, Bohewell. Act II, l. 13.

I shall loathe sweet tunes, where a note grown strong

Relents and recoils, and climbs and closes. . . .

I shall hate sweet music my whole life long.

SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 45.

The music had the heat of blood,
A passion that no words can reach;
We sat together, and understood
Our own heart's speech.

ARTHUR SYMONS, During Music.

There is sweet music here that softer falls
Than petals from blown roses on the grass, . . .

Music that gentler on the spirit lies,
Than tired eyelids upon tired eyes;
Music that brings sweet sleep down from the blissful skies.

TENNYSOON, The Lotus-Eaters: Choric Song.
St. 1.

Where light and shade repose, where music dwells

Lingering—and wandering on as loth to die;
Like thoughts whose very sweetness yieldeth proof

That they were born for immortality.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. III,
No. 43.

Soft is the music that would charm for ever.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. II,
No. 8.

The music in my heart I bore,
Long after it was heard no more.

WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour in Scotland. No. 9.

VI—Music: Its Sadness

The mellow touch of music most doth wound
The soul, when it doth rather nigh than sound.

ROBERT HERRICK, Soft Music.

Gentle and noble are their tempers framed,
That can be quickened with perfumes and sounds.

GEORGE CRAFTMAN, Ovid's Banquet of Sense.

Fair Melody! kind Siren! I've no choice;
I must be thy sad servant evermore;
I cannot choose but kneel here and adore.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. IV, l. 303.

Seated one day at the organ,
I was weary and ill at ease,
And my fingers wandered idly
Over the noisy keys.

I do not know what I was playing,
Or what I was dreaming then,
But I struck one chord of music
Like the sound of a great Amen.
ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, The Lost Chord. As set to music, the 5th line reads, "I know not what I was playing."

As in an organ from one blast of wind
To many a row of pipes the soundboard breathes.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. I, l. 708.

I am never merry when I hear sweet music.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act V,
sc. 1, l. 69.

Inconsolable to the minuet in Ariadne.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act II, sc. 2.

A lamentable tune is the sweetest music to a woeful mind.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. II.

With a secret pain,
And smiles that seem akin to tears,
We hear the wild refrain.

WHITTIER, At Port Royal.

A quality
Which music sometimes has, being the Art
Which is most nigh to tears and memory.

OSCAR WILDE, The Burden of Itys.

VII—Music of the Spheres

There is music wherever there is harmony, order, or proportion; and thus far we may maintain the music of the Spheres; for those well-ordered motions and regular paces, though they give no sound to the ear, yet to the understanding they strike a note most full of harmony.

SIX THOMAS BROWN, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 9. (1642)

1 Her voice, the music of the spheres,
So loud, it deafens mortals' ears;
As wise philosophers have thought,
And that's the cause we hear it not.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 617.

2 There's music in the sighing of a reed;
There's music in the gushing of a rill;
There's music in all things, if men had ears:
Their earth is but an echo of the spheres.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 5.

There is beauty in the bellow of the blast,
There is grandeur in the growling of the gale.
W. S. GLASSER, The Mikado. Act ii.

3 And left so free mine ears,
That I might hear the music of the spheres,
And all the angels singing out of heaven.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Tears of Peace.

4 And after shewed he him the nine spheres,
And after that the melody heard he
That cometh of those spheres thrice three,
That well is of music and melody
In this world here, and cause of harmony.
CRAUCER, The Parlement of Foules, l. 59.

Water and Air He for the Tenor chose,
Earth made the Base, the Treble Flame arose,
To th' active Moon a quick brisk stroke he gave,
To Saturn's string a touch more soft and grave.
The motions strait, and round, and swift, and slow,

And short and long, were mixt and woven so,
Did in such artful Figures smoothly fall,
As made this decent measur'd Dance of all,
And this is Musick.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Davidis. Bk. i, l. 457.

5 Let me go where'er I will
I hear a sky-born music still: . . .
'Tis not in the high stars alone,
Nor in the cup of budding flowers,
Nor in the redbreast's mellow tone,
Nor in the bow that smiles in showers
But in the mud and scum of things
There alway, alway something sings.
EMERSON, Music.

6 When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy.
Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 7.

7 Ring out ye crystal spheres!
Once bless our human ears,
(If ye have power to touch our senses so)
And let your silver chime
Move in melodious time;
And let the base of Heav'n's deep organ blow.

And with your ninefold harmony,
Make up full consort to th' angelic symphony.

MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity. St. 13.

And in their motions harmony divine
So smooths her charming tones, that God's own ear
Listens delighted.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 625.

8 The celestial music. (La musique celeste.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 27.

9 "This must be the music," said he, "of the spheres,
For I am curst if each note of it doesn't run through one!"

THOMAS MOORE, Fudge Family in Paris. Letter v, l. 28.

10 Sit, Jessica. Look how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold:
There's not the smallest orb which thou be-hold'st

But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins;
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 58.

11 When his veering gait
And every motion of his starry train
Seem governed by a strain
Of music, audible to him alone.
WORDSWORTH, The Triad, l. 48.

VIII—Music: The Flute

12 The flute is not an instrument which has a good moral effect; it is too exciting.
ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. viii, ch. 6, sec. 5.

13 The soft complaining flute
In dying notes discovers
The woes of hopeless lovers,
Whose dirge is whisper'd by the warbling lute.
JOHN DRYDEN, Song for St. Cecilia's Day.

14 A velvet flute-note fell down pleasantly
Upon the bosom of that harmony, . . .
Somewhat, half song, half odor, forth did float

As if a rose might somehow be a throat.
SIDNEY LANIER, The Symphony.

15 Govern these ventages with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 372.

You cannot play the flute by merely blowing;
you must use your fingers too.
GORTAL, Sprüche in Prosa, iii.

IX—Music: The Harp

- 1
His harp the sole companion of his way.
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. I, st. 3.
- 2
The lyre is welcome at the feasts of supreme Jupiter. (Dapibus supremi Grata testudo Jovis.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. I, ode 32, l. 13.
- 3
Leave strumming at the doors of inns
To vagabonds and sharpers.
Where men seek minstrels for their sins
They shall not lack for harpers.
LAURENCE HOUSMAN, Farewell to Town.
- 4
The harp that once through Tara's halls
The soul of music shed,
Now hangs as mute on Tara's walls
As if that soul were fled.
So sleeps the pride of former days,
So glory's thrill is o'er;
And hearts, that once beat high for praise,
Now feel that pulse no more.
THOMAS MOORE, The Harp that Once Through Tara's Halls.
- If the pulse of the patriot, soldier, or lover,
Have throbb'd at our lay, 'tis thy glory alone;
I was but as the wind, passing heedlessly over,
And all the wild sweetness I wak'd was thy own.
THOMAS MOORE, Dear Harp of My Country.
St. 2.
- 'Tis believ'd that this harp which I wake now for thee
Was a siren of old who sung under the sea.
THOMAS MOORE, Origin of the Harp.
- 6
The music of the zither, the flute, and the lyre enervates the mind. (Enervant animos citharæ, lotosque, lyraque.)
OVID, Remedium Amoris, l. 753.
- 8
He touched his harp, and nations heard, entranced,
As some vast river of unending source,
Rapid, exhaustless, deep, his numbers flowed,
And opened new fountains in the human heart.
POLLOCK, The Course of Time. Bk. IV, l. 675.
- 7
We hanged our harps upon the willows.
Old Testament: Psalms, cxxvii, 2.
- 9
Hearken, my minstrels! which of ye all
Touched his harp with that dying fall,
So sweet, so soft, so faint,
It seemed an angel's whispered call
To an expiring saint?
SCOTT, The Bridal of Triermain. Canto I, st. 4.
- And tuned, to please a peasant's ear,
The harp a king had loved to hear.
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel: Introduction, l. 25.

- 8
Strange! that a harp of a thousand strings
Should keep in tune so long.
ISAAC WATTS, Hymns and Spiritual Songs. Bk
II, No. 19.
- TO HARP ON THE SAME STRING, see under PROV-ERBS.

X—Music: The Lute

- 10
If thou would'st have me sing and play
As once I play'd and sung,
First take this time-worn lute away,
And bring one freshly strung.
THOMAS MOORE, *If Thou Would'st Have Me
Sing and Play*.
- 11
In a sadly pleasing strain
Let the warbling lute complain.
POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 5.
- 12
Do the sounds
Which slumber in the lute, belong alone
To him who buys the chords?
SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act IV, sc. 21.
- 13
As sweet and musical
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act IV,
sc. 3, l. 342.
- Musical as is Apollo's lute.
MILTON, Comus, l. 478.
- 14
Some dead lute-player
That in dead years had done delicious things.
SWINBURNE, A Ballad of Life. St. 2.
- 15
It is the little rift within the lute
That by and by will make the music mute
And ever widening, slowly silence all.
TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 388.
- XI—Music and Discord
- 16
So discord oft in music makes the sweeter
lay.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. III, canto II, st. 15.
- Discords make the sweetest airs,
And curses are a sort of prayers.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. III, canto I, l. 919.
- I never heard
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act IV, sc. 1, l. 121.
- 17
You had that action and counteraction which,
in the natural and in the political world,
from the reciprocal struggle of discordant powers draws out the harmony of the universe.
EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.
- 18
As there is music uninform'd by art.
DRYDEN, Epistles: To Sir Robert Howard, l. 1.

¹ You think they are crusaders, sent
From some infernal clime,
To pluck the eyes of Sentiment,
And dock the tail of Rhyme,
To crack the voice of Melody,
And break the legs of Time.
O. W. HOLMES, The Music-Grinders.

² Fill'd the air with barbarous dissonance.
MILTON, Comus, l. 550.

³ Above the pitch, out of tune, and off the hinges.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 19.

⁴ Straining harsh discords and unpleasing
sharps.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5,
l. 28.

Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh-sound-
ing,
Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 431.

⁵ How sour sweet music is,
When time is broke and no proportion kept!
So is it in the music of men's lives.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 5, l. 42.
Take but degree away, untune that string,
And, hark what discord follows!

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc.
3, l. 109.

And the vile squealing of the wry-neck'd fife.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, Act
ii, sc. 5, l. 30.

XII—Music: The Musician

⁶ But God has a few of us whom he whispers in the ear;

The rest may reason and welcome: 'tis we musicians know.

ROBERT BROWNING, Abt Vogler.

Therefore to whom turn I but to thee, the in-effable Name?

Builder and maker, thou, of houses not made with hands!

ROBERT BROWNING, Abt Vogler.

⁷ From this did Paganini comb the fierce
Electric sparks, or to tenuity
Pull forth the inmost wailing of the wire—
No cat-gut could swoon out so much of soul!

ROBERT BROWNING, *Red Cotton Night-cap
Country*. Pt. I.

⁸ When a musician hath forgot his note,
He makes as though a crumb stuck in his throat.

JOHN CLARKE, Paramisologia, 108. (1639)

⁹ Who, through long days of labor,
And nights devoid of ease,

Still heard in his soul the music
Of wonderful melodies.

LONGFELLOW, The Day is Done.

¹⁰ He the best of all musicians,
He the sweetest of all singers.

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. vi, l. 20.

He is dead, the sweet musician!

He has gone from us forever,

He has moved a little nearer

To the Master of all music.

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. xv, l. 56.

¹¹ We are the music-makers,
And we are the dreamers of dreams,

Wandering by lone sea-breakers,

And sitting by desolate streams;

World-losers and world-forsakers,

Of whom the pale moon gleams:

Yet we are the movers and shakers

Of the world for ever, it seems.

ARTHUR O'SHAUGHNESSY, The Music-Makers.

¹² The language of tones belongs equally to all mankind, and melody is the absolute language in which the musician speaks to every heart.

RICHARD WAGNER, Beethoven.

¹³ Is it not strange that sheep's guts should hale souls out of men's bodies?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 61.

Music . . . horse-hairs and calves' guts.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 32.

The fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 3, 303.

See to their desks Apollo's sons repair,—

Swift rides the rosin o'er the horse's hair!

In unison their various tones to tuot,

Murmurs the hautboy, growls the hoarse bassoon;

In soft vibration sighs the whispering lute,

Tang goes the harpsichord, too-too the flute,

Brays the loud trumpet, squeaks the fiddle sharp,

Winds the French-horn, and twangs the tingling harp;

Till, like great Jove, the leader, figuring in,

Attunes to order the chaotic din.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses: The Theatre, l. 20.

A squeak's heard in the orchestra,

The leader draws across

The intestines of the agile cat

The tail of the noble boss.

GEORGE T. LANIGAN, The Amateur Orlando.

St. 8.

¹⁴ Come on and hear, come on and hear, Alexander's Ragtime Band.

IRVING BRALLER, Alexander's Ragtime Band.
(1911)

Alexander's Ragtime Band stamped a new character on American music.

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT, Irrving Berlin.

Hence from their resounding prison the docile winds are loosed, and repay a melody for their liberty received. (Hinc venti dociles resonare se carcere solvunt, Et cantum accepta pro libertate rependunt.)

JEAN BAPTISTE DE SANTEUL, Inscription on an Organ.

There's a barrel-organ carolling across a golden street

In the city as the sun sinks low;
And the music's not immortal; but the world has made it sweet

And fulfilled it with the sunset glow.

ALFRED NOYES, The Barrel-Organ.

She played upon her music-box a fancy air by chance,

And straightway all her polka-dots began a lively dance.

PETER NEWELL, Her Polka-Dots.

I have a reasonable good ear in music.
Let's have the tongs and the bones.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 30.

Let the music knock it.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 4, l. 108.

He was a fiddler, and consequently a rogue.

She ran her fingers o'er the ivory keys,
And shook a prelude from them as a bird
Shakes from its throat a song.

JAMES B. KENYON, Twilight and Music.

Five-and-thirty black slaves,
Half-a-hundred white,

All their duty but to sing

For their Queen's delight.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Key-Board.

Ah, the gracious tyrannies
Of her finger-tips.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Key-Board.

Her ivory hands on the ivory keys
Strayed in a fitful fantasy,

Like the silver gleam when the poplar trees

Rustle their pale leaves listlessly.

OSCAR WILDE, In the Gold Room: A Har-mony.

'Tis the common disease of all your musicians, that they know no mean, to be entertained either to begin or end.

BEN JONSON, The Forster. Act ii, sc. 1.

MYSTERY

The lucrative business of mystery.

BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society.

It happens, by a common vice of human nature, that we trust most to, and are most seriously frightened at, things which are strange and unknown. (Communi fit vitio nature, ut inusitatis atque incognitis rebus magis confidamus, vehementiusque extreamur.)

CÆSAR, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, sec. 4.

Plain truth will influence half a score of men at most in a nation, or an age, while mystery will lead millions by the nose.

HENRY ST. JOHN, Letter, 28 July, 1721.

O'er all there hung a shadow and a fear;
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is haunted.

THOMAS HOOD, The Hounied House.

Listen to voices in the upper air,
Nor lose thy simple faith in mysteries.

LONGFELLOW, The Castle-Builder.

If you go directly at the heart of a mystery, it ceases to be a mystery, and becomes only a question of drainage.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Where the Blue Begins, p. 9.

There was the Door to which I found no Key;

There was the Veil through which I might not see.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubdyab. St. 32. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

¹ Nail is driven out by nail. ("Ἦλεν γὰρ ὁ ἦλος.)
ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. v, ch. 9, sec. 6. Quoted as a proverb.

One nail drives out another, at least!
OWEN MEREDITH, The Portrait.

Drive not a second nail till the first be clinched.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1334.

² A nail in the wound. (Unguis in ulcere.)
CICERO, Pro Domo Sua. Ch. 3, sec. 12.

³ With tooth and nail.
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
i, day 2. (Sylvester, tr.)

⁴ To the nail. (Ad unguem.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 5, l. 32; Ars Poetica, l. 294. In the sense of highly finished, see under MANNERS.

⁵ Speak the word, and I will help you to it upon the nail.
THOMAS NASHE, Works. Vol. iii, p. 59. (1596)

⁶ I'll never see't; for, I am sure, my nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 223.

⁷ Falstaff: What, is the old king dead?
Pistol: As nail in door.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 3, l. 126.

1; HEYWOOD, Proverbs, i, 11; RABELAIS,
Works, iii, 35.

¹⁰ Every nail driven should be as another rivet in the machine of the universe, you carrying on the work.
H. D. THOREAU, Walden; Conclusion.

¹¹ A white speck upon the nails made them as sure of a gift, as if they had it already in their pockets.
UNKNOWN. (Connoisseur. No. 59. 1755.)

¹² Cut your nails on Monday, you cut them for health;
Cut them on Tuesday, you cut them for wealth;

Cut them on Wednesday, you cut them for news;

Cut them on Thursday, a new pair of shoes;
Cut them on Friday, you cut them for sorrow;

Cut them on Saturday, a present to-morrow;
But he that on Sunday cuts his horn,
Better that he had never been born!

UNKNOWN. (HENDERSON, Folk-Lore N. Counties, 18.)

Hippocrates has even left directions how we should cut our nails; that is, even with the ends of the fingers, neither shorter nor longer.

I—Name: Apothegms

¹³ I can call nothing by name if that is not his name. I call a cat a cat, and Rolet a rogue.
(Je ne puis rien nommer si ce n'est pas son nom; J'appelle un chat un chat, et Rolet un fripon.)

BOILEAU, Satires. Sat. i, l. 51.

TO CALL A SPADE A SPADE, see under CANDOR.

He said true things, but called them by wrong names.

ogy*.

¹⁴ Who hath not own'd, with rapture-smitten frame,

The power of grace, the magic of a name?
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 5.

¹⁵ "Whose name was writ in water!"
R. W. GILDER, Keats. See also under KEATS.

My name may have buoyancy enough to float
upon the sea of time.

GLADSTONE, Elton Miscellany, Nov., 1827.
Quoted.

¹⁶ And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.
LEIGH HUNT, About Ben Adhem. For full quotation, see PHILANTHROPY.

¹⁷ Indeed there is a woundy luck in names, str,
And a main mystery, an' a man knew where
To vind it.

BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act iv, sc. 2,

Let us speak plain: there is more force in names
Than most men dream of; and a lie may keep its throne a whole age longer if it skulk
Behind the shield of some fair-seeming name.

J. R. LOWELL, A Glance Behind the Curtain,
l. 251.

His opinion was that there was a strange kind of magic bias which good or bad names, as he called them, irresistibly impressed upon our characters and conduct. . . . How many Cæsars and Pompeys, he would say, by mere inspiration of the names, have been rendered worthy of them? And how many, he would add, are there, who might have done exceeding well in the world, had not their characters and spirits been totally depressed and Nicodemus'd into nothing?

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. i, ch. 19.

"Villas" now, with sounding names,

There is no stone without its name. (Nullum est sine nomine saxum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 973.

What is it? a learned man
Could give it a clumsy name.
Let him name it who can,
The beauty would be the same.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. ii, sec. 2, st. 2.

The name that dwells on every tongue,
No minstrel needs.

DON JORGE MANRIQUE, Coplas de Manrique.
St. 54. (Longfellow, tr.)

My name is Legion: for we are many.

New Testament: Mark, v. 9.

A name and also an omen. (Nomen atque omen.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 625. (Act iv, sc. 4.)

I have said everything when I have named the man. (Dixi omnia, cum hominem nominavi.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. iv, epis. 22.

I name no parties.

BRAUMONT and FLETCHER, Will at Several Weapons. Act ii, sc. 3.

Canst thou bring me to the party?

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 67.

Although it has been considered an Americanism, the older English writers frequently used "party" in the sense of "person." Shakespeare so uses it more than a score of times.

O name for ever sad! for ever dear!

Still breath'd in sighs, still usher'd with a tear.

POPE, Eliza to Abelard, l. 31.

The name of the Lord is a strong tower.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 10. (Turris fortissima, nomen Domini.—Vulgate.)

But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings.

name.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 18. (1670)

He is a fool and ever shall,
Who writes his name upon a wall.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Fools' names, like fools' faces,
Are often seen in public places.
UNKNOWN.

Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments.

New Testament: Revelation, iii, 4.

He who pronounces Saxe as Saxy
Would surely call an axe an ax.

J. C. SAXE, Epigram, when asked which was the correct pronunciation of his name.

I am the last of my race. My name ends with me.

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act i, sc. 1, l. 100.

My foot is on my native heath, and my name is MacGregor.

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 34.

Who, noteless as the race from which he sprung,
Saved others' names, but left his own unsung.

SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 13.

Thou hast stolen both mine office and my name.

The one ne'er got me credit, the other mickle
blame.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 44.

A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 64.

O good Horatio, what a wounded name, Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 355.

When we were happy we had other names.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 4, l. 8.

A name to be washed out with all men's tears.

SWINBURNE, Atlanta in Calydon: Althea.

Every godfather can give a name.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 93.

Giving a name, indeed, is a poetic art; all poetry, if we go to that with it, is but a giving of names.

CARLYLE, Journal, 18 May, 1832.

Who may, in the ambush of my name, strike
home.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i,
sc. 3, l. 41.

I cannot tell what the dickens his name is.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 20. (1600)

What the dickens!

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Edward IV. Act iii, sc. 1.
(1600)

O, Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?

Deny thy father and refuse thy name;
Or if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 33.

I cannot love my lord, and not his name.

TENNYSON, The Marriage of Geraint, l. 92.

What's in a name? that which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 42.

That which we call a Snob, by any other name would still be snobbish.

THACKERAY, Book of Snobs.

Love hangs like light about your name
As music round the shell!

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 563.

I would rather make my name than inherit it.

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 26.

The blackest ink of Fate was sure my lot,
And, when she writ my name, she made a blot.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, The Rehearsal. Act iii, sc. 2. (1671) Quoted by Fielding, Amelia. Bk. ii, ch. 9.

II—Name: Great Names

Some mighty man
Who beat his name on the drum of the world's eart.

BAILEY, Festus: A Metropolis.

Strong towers decay,
But a great name shall never pass away.

PARR BENJAMIN, A Great Name.

But he whose name is graved in the white stone
Shall last and shine when all of these are gone.

ANNE BRADSTREET, Contemplations.

Our men scarce seem in earnest now:
Distinguished names!—but 'tis, somehow,
As if they played at being names
Still more distinguished, like the games
Of children.

ROBERT BROWNING, Waring. Pt. i, sec. 6.

Round the whole world his dreaded name shall sound,
And reach to worlds, that must not yet be found.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Davidicis. Bk. ii, l. 834.
(1656)

Nations unborn your mighty names shall sound,
And worlds applaud that must not yet be found!

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 193. (1711)

Ill did those mighty men to trust thee with their story;

That hast forgot their names who reared thee
for their glory.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly-olbion. Song iii, l.
61. Referring to Stonehenge.

Victorious names, who made the world obey;
Who while they liv'd, in deeds of arms ex-cell'd,

And after death for deities were held.

DRYDEN, The Flower and the Leaf, l. 518.

Navies nor armies can exalt the state, . . .

gasp.

MILTON, Sonnets. No. xi.

The dreaded name Of Demogorgon.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 965.

Must I call your master to my aid,

At whose dread name the trembling furies quake,
Hell stands abashed, and earth's foundations quake?

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii. (Rowe, tr.)

Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,

His honour and the greatness of his name
Shall be, and make new nations.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act v, sc. 5, l. 51.

Your name is great

In mouths of wisest censure.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 192.

Bright with names that men remember, loud with names that men forget.

SWINBURNE, Elton: An Ode.

To such a name for ages long,
To such a name,

Preserve a broad approach of fame,
And ever-echoing avenues of song!

Tennyson, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington. St. 5.

What a heavy burden is a name that has become too famous. (C'est un poids bien pesant qu'un nom trop tôt fameux.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Henriade. Chant iii, l. 41.

Methinks their very names shine still and bright;

Apart—like glow-worms on a summer's
night.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii,
No. 5.

Yet shall thy name, conspicuous and sublime,
Stand in the spacious firmament of time,
Fixed as a star.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 19.

A name "fast anchored in the deep abyss of time"
is like a star twinkling in the firmament, cold, silent, distant, but eternal and sublime.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk.

Old Testament: Isaiah, lvi, 5.

Then, when this body falls in funeral fire,
My name shall live, and my best part aspire.

BEN JONSON, The Postaster. Act i, sc. 1.

To see the laurel wreath, on high suspended,
That is to crown our name when life is ended.

KEATS, Sleep and Poetry, l. 35.

The surest pledge of a deathless name

Is the silent homage of thoughts unspoken.

LONGFELLOW, The Herons of Elmwood.

Ah, with what lofty hope we came!

But we forget it, dream of fame,

And scrawl, as I do here, a name.

J. R. LOWELL, For an Autograph. St. 6.

¹ Oh, breathe not his name! let it sleep in the shade,

Where cold and unhonour'd his relics are laid.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh, Breathe Not His Name.

² And like to one he seemed whose better day
Is over to himself, though foolish fame
Shouts louder year by year his empty name.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Prologue: The Wanderers, l. 466.

A far babbled name,
The ceaseless seeker after praise and fame.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. ix, l. 189.

⁵ O! while along the stream of time thy name
Expanded flies, and gathers all its fame,
Say, shall my little bark attendant sail,
Pursue the triumph, and partake the gale?

PORR, Essay on Man. Epia. iv, l. 383.

⁶ Then shall our names,
Familiar in his mouth as household words, . . .

Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 51.

⁷ Yet leaving here a name, I trust,
That will not perish in the dust.

SOUTHEY, My Days Among the Dead Are Passed.

⁸ One day I wrote her name upon the strand,
But came the waves and wash'd it away:
Again I wrote it with a second hand,
But came the tide, and made my pains his prey.

Vain man, said she, that dost in vain essay
A mortal thing so to immortalize!
For I myself shall like to this decay,
And eke my name be wiped out likewise.
Not so (quod I) let baser things devise
To die in dust, but you shall live by fame:
My verse your virtues rare shall eternize,
And in the heavens write your glorious name.

SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet lxxv.

Alone I walked on the ocean strand,
A pearly shell was in my hand;
I stooped, and wrote upon the sand
My name, the year, the day.
As onward from the spot I passed,
One lingering look behind I cast,
A wave came ruffling high and fast,
And washed my lines away.

HANNAH FLAGG GOULD, A Name in the Sand.

⁹ No sound is breathed so potent to coerce
And to conciliate, as their names who dare
For that sweet mother-land which gave them birth

Nobly to do, nobly to die.
TENNISON, Tiresias, l. 116.

¹⁰ I won a noble fame;
But with a sudden frown,
The people snatched my crown,
And, in the mire, trod down
My lofty name.

THEODORE TILTON, Sir Marmaduke's Musings.

¹¹ Keeps from age to age an ever-living name.
(Æternumque tenet per sæcula nomen.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 235.

¹² When once the trumpet of fame has sounded a poor man's name, farewell his repose for ever.

VOLTATRE, Letter to M. Coppernonnier, 1768.

IV—Name: Women's Names

¹³ Oh! no! we never mention her,
Her name is never heard;
My lips are now forbid to speak
That once familiar word.

T. H. BAYLY, Oh! No! We Never Mention Her.

There's a name that's never spoken,
And a mother's heart half-broken,
There is just another missing from the old home, that is all;

There is still a memory living,
There's a father unforgiving,
And a picture that is turn'd toward the wall.
CHARLES GRAHAM, The Picture That Is Turned Toward the Wall. (1891) Suggested by a scene from the play Blue Jeans.

¹⁴ I have a passion for the name of "Mary,"
For once it was a magic sound to me,
And still it half calls up the realms of fairy,
Where I beheld what never was to be.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 4.

¹⁵ Sweet as the sweetest of melodies
Filling my soul with ecstasy,
Sweeter than all things to me,
The sound of my sweetheart's name.
WILL D. COAN, *The Sound of My Sweetheart's
Name*. (1901)

¹⁶ I ask'd my fair one happy day,
What I should call her in my lay;
By what sweet name from Rome or Greece;

Lalage, Neæra, Chloris,
Sappho, Lesbja, or Doris,
Arethusa or Lucrece.

"Ah!" replied my gentle fair,
"Belov'd, what are names but air?
Choose thou whatever suits the line;

Call me Sappho, call me Chloris,
Call me Lalage or Doris,
Only, only call me Thine."
S. T. COLERIDGE, Names.

¹ Brown's for Lalage, Jones for Lelia,
Robinson's bosom for Beatrice glows,
Smith is a Hamlet before Ophelia,
The glamour stays if the reason goes!
Every lover the years disclose
Is of a beautiful name made free.
One befriends, and all others are foes.
Anna's the name of names for me.
W. E. HENLEY, Ballade of Ladies' Names.

Ruth like a gillyflower smells and blows,
Sylvia prattles of Arcadie,
Sybil mystifies, Connie crows,
Anna's the name of names for me!
W. E. HENLEY, Ballade of Ladies' Names.

² She who comes to me and pleadeth
In the lovely name of Edith.
LONGFELLOW, Lines in a Private Album.

³ For women's names keep murmuring like the wind
The hidden things that none for ever tells.
ERNEST RHYS, Words.

⁴ O Sophonisba! Sophonisba, O!
JAMES THOMSON, Sophonisba. Act iii, sc. 2.
When this line was spoken, at the first performance of the play, an exasperated spectator stood up in his box and cried out, "O Jamie Thomson! Jamie Thomson, O!" and the line was altered to, "O Sophonisba! I am wholly thine!"

⁵ "What is thy name, fair maid?" quoth he.
"Zenelophon, O King!" quoth she.
UNKNOWN, King Cophetua and the Beggar Maid. (Percy, Reliques.) Shakespeare, quoting this old ballad in Love's Labour's Lost (iv, 1, 65), gives the beggar maid's name as Zenelophon.

⁶ Your name hangs in my heart like a bell's tongue.
ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act iii, sc. 6.

⁷ I do beseech you—
Chiefly, that I might set it in my prayers—
What is your name?
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 34.

V—Names Sweet and Ugly

⁸ The very names of things belov'd are dear,
And sounds will gather beauty from their sense,
As many a face thro' love's long residence
Groweth to fair instead of plain and sere.
ROBERT BARDEN, Growth of Love. Sonnet 4.
⁹ What a name! Was it love or praise?
Speech half-asleep or song half-awake?

I must learn Spanish, one of these days,
Only for that slow sweet name's sake.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Flower's Name.

¹⁰ Thrice happy he whose name has been well spelt

In the despatch.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 18.

¹¹ Oh, Amos Cottle!—Phœbus! what a name!
BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers
l. 399.

A measly little gum-drop name like Percival.
HARRY LEON WILSON, The Spendeis, p. 344.

¹² Pride lives with all; strange names our rustic
give

To helpless infants, that their own may live.
GEORGE CHADBE, The Parish Register. Pt. I.

With unpronounceable, awful names.
BERT HARTY, The Tale of a Pony.

¹³ A name?—if the party had a voice,
What mortal would be a Bugg by choice,
As a Hogg, a Grubb, or a Chubb rejoice,
Or any such nauseous blazon?
Not to mention many a vulgar name,
Which would make a doorplate blush for shame,

If doorplates were not so brazen!
HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Christening.

¹⁴ Have heard her sigh and soften out the name.
WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Gedir. Pt. v, l. 145.

¹⁵ And if his name be George, I'll call him
Peter;

For new-made honour doth forget men's names.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act i, sc. 1, l. 136.

¹⁶ As Stephen Sly and old John Naps of Greece
And Peter Turph and Henry Pimpernell
And twenty more such names and men as these

Which never were nor no man ever saw.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 2, l. 95.

¹⁷ And last of all an Admiral came,
A terrible man with a terrible name,—
A name which you all know by sight very well,

But which no one can speak, and no one can spell.

SOUTHEY, The March to Moscow. St. 8.

¹⁸ But Thomas, and William, and such pretty
names,

Should be cleanly and harmless as doves or
as lambs,

Those lovely and innocent creatures.

ISAAC WATTS, Innocent Play.

1 What with Gertrude, Ep and Ein,
When I hear the name of Stein,
I go creepy down the spine.

UNKNOWN, Precious Steins.

There's a wonderful family called Stein—
There's Gert, and there's Epp, and there's Ein;
Gert's poems are bunk,
Epp's statues are junk,
And no one can understand Ein.
UNKNOWN, The Steins.

VI—Name: Nicknames

2 No orator can measure in effect with him who can give good nicknames.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

3 A nickname is the heaviest stone that the devil can throw at a man.

HAZLITT, Essays: On Nicknames. Quoted.

Of all eloquence a nickname is the most concise;
of all arguments the most unanswerable.

NAPOLEON

I.—Napoleon I

¹ Crushed was Napoleon by the northern Thor,
Who knocked his army down with icy hammer.

Byron, Beppo. St. 61.

And kings crept out again to feel the sun.

E. B. Browning, Crowned and Buried, St. 11.

² The instinct of active, brave, able men,
Throughout the middle class everywhere, has pointed out Napoleon as the incarnate Democra-crat.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.
Napoleon is thoroughly modern, and, at the highest point of his fortunes, has the very spirit of the newspapers.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.

When you have penetrated through all the circles of power and splendor, you were not dealing with a gentleman, at last, but with an impostor and a rogue.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon.

³ Napoleon was a man! His life was the stride of a demigod.

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann, 1828.

You are a man!

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, closing a conversation with Goethe at Erfurt, 2 Oct., 1808.

⁴ Yet spirit immortal, the tomb cannot bind thee.

But, like thine own eagle that soars to the sun,

Thou springest from bondage and leavest behind thee

A name which before thee no mortal hath won.

LYMAN HEATH, The Grave of Bonaparte

A little while ago I stood by the tomb of the old Napoleon, a magnificent tomb of gilt and gold, . . . and could see the only woman who ever loved him pushed aside.

R. G. INVERARRELL, Reveries at the Tomb of Napoleon.

I wish my ashes to repose on the banks of the Seine, in the midst of the French people I have loved so well.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Codicil to His Will, dated 16 April, 1821.

I don't care a twopenny damn what becomes of the ashes of Napoleon Bonaparte.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, attr. (FARMER AND HENLEY, Slang and Its Analogues.)

⁵ Napoleon healed through sword and fire the sick nation.

HEINE, (SCHERRER, History of German Literature. Bk. ii, p. 116.)

⁶ Napoleon was whipped because he carried a chip on his shoulder: this is the one thing that the gods who write the laws of nations will not palliate nor excuse.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine. Vol. xx, p. 45.

⁷ England took the eagle and Austria the eaglelet. (L'Angleterre prit l'aigle et l'Autriche l'aiglon.)

VICTOR HUO, applying for the first time the word l'Aiglon to Napoleon's son. Napoleon had transferred the imperial eagles of Rome to his own standard.

God was bored by him.

VICTOR HUO, Referring to Napoleon.

⁸ Bonaparte's wisdom was in his thoughts, and his madness in his passions. (La sagesse de Bonaparte était dans ses pensées, et la folie dans ses passions.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 221.

⁹ Even the great Napoleon could not dine twice. (Même le grand Napoléon ne pouvait pas dîner deux fois.)

ALPHONSE KARR, Le Chemin le Plus Court.

¹⁰ Grand, gloomy, and peculiar, he sat upon the throne a sceptred hermit, wrapped in the solitude of his own originality.

CHARLES PHILLIPS, The Character of Napoleon.

¹¹ Although too much of a soldier among sovereigns, no one could claim with better right to be a sovereign among soldiers.

WALTER SCOTT, Life of Napoleon.

¹² What! alive, and so bold, O earth?

SHELLEY, On Hearing the News of the Death of Napoleon.

It is no longer an event; it is only a piece of news. TALLEYRAND, when some one exclaimed "What an event!" on learning of Napoleon's death at St. Helena. (COOPER, Talleyrand.)

¹³ Gentlemen, we have a master: this young man does everything, can do everything, and will do everything. (Messieurs, nous avons un maître: ce jeune homme fait tout, peut tout, et veut tout.)

SIEYÈS, Address, to the National Assembly, speaking of Napoleon.

¹ No law but his own headstrong will he knew,
No counsellor but his own wicked heart.

ROBERT SOUTHBY, Ode, Written during the Negotiations with Buonaparte.

Pre-eminently bad among the worst.

SOUTHBY, The Post's Pilgrimage to Waterloo. Pt. iv, st. 15.

² He thought to quell the stubborn hearts of oak,
Madman!—to chain with chains, and bind with bands
That island queen who sways the floods and lands. . . .

We taught him lowlier moods.

TENNYSON, Buonaparte.

Though more than half the world was his,
He died without a rood his own;
And borrowed from his enemies
Six feet of ground to lie upon.

TRACKERAY, The Chronicle of the Drum.

II—Napoleon III

³ A great unrecognized incapacity. (Une grande incapacité inconnue.)

BISMARCK, of Napoleon III. (Letter, 1862, while minister to France.)

Copies never succeed.

KOSSUTH, Saying.

⁴ Because we have had Napoleon the Great, must we have Napoleon the Little?

VICTOR HUGO, Speech, Chamber of Deputies, 17 July, 1851. (BARBOU, Life.)

⁵ We shall see Buonaparte the bastard

Kick heels with his throat in a rope.

SWINBURNE, A Song in Time of Order, 1852.

NATION

See also State

I—Nation: Definitions

⁶ The true wealth of a country lies in its men and women. If they're mean, unhappy and ill, the country is poor.

RICHARD ALDRINGTON, Colonel's Daughter, p. 51.

And you prize of the wealth of nations, as if it were bought and sold,

The wealth of nations is men, not silk and cotton and gold.

RICHARD HOVY, Peace.

⁷ A people is but the attempt of many

To rise to the completer life of one—

And those who live as models for the mass

Are singly of more value than they all.

Such man are you, and such a time is this,
That your sole fate concerns a nation more
Than much apparent welfare.

ROBERT BROWNING, Luria. Act v, l. 334.

⁸ I am firm in my conviction that . . . there is no calamity which a great nation can invite which equals that which follows from a supine submission to wrong and injustice, and the consequent loss of national self-respect and honor, beneath which are shielded and defended a people's safety and greatness.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Message to Congress, on Venezuelan question, 17 Dec. 1895. Based on draft by Richard Olney, Secretary of State. For contrasted texts see NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, p. 640.

That nation is worthless which does not joyfully stake everything in defense of her honor.

SCHILLER, Die Jungfrau von Orléans. Act i, sc. 5, l. 81.

The nation's honor is dearer than the nation's comfort; yes, than the nation's life itself.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, 29 Jan., 1916.

⁹ A nation is the unity of a people. King and parliament are the unity made visible.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk.

¹⁰ Individuals may form communities, but it is institutions alone that can create a nation.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, at Manchester, 1866.

Nationality is the miracle of political independence. Race is the principle of physical analogy.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 9 Aug., 1848.

¹¹ A nation is a thing that lives and acts like a man, and men are the particles of which it is composed.

J. G. HOLLAND, Plain Talks: The National Heart.

¹² Nations are the citizens of humanity, as individuals are the citizens of the nation.

MAZZINI, Duties of Man.

¹³ Nations, like men, have their infancy.

HENRY ST. JOHN, On the Study and Use of History.

II—Nation: Apothegms

¹⁴ And hath made of one blood all nations of men.

New Testament: Acts, xvii, 26.

All nations and kindreds and people and tongues.

New Testament: Revelation, vii, 9.

¹⁵ A treaty is the promise of a nation.

FISHER AMES, Speech on the British Treaty, 28 April, 1798.

Men, upon the whole,
Are what they can be—nations, what they would.

E. B. BROWNING, Casa Guidi Windows. Pt. I.
Happy are all free peoples, too strong to be dis-
possessed;

But blessed are those among nations who dare to be strong for the rest!

E. B. BROWNING, A Court Lady, l. 39.

Nations save, but do not revenge themselves
GEORGES JACQUES DANTON. (TADRE, French Revolution.)

How much more are men than nations!
EMERSON, *Letters and Social Aims: Progress
of Culture*.

Justice is as strictly due between neighbor nations as between neighbor citizens. A highwayman is as much a robber when he plun-ders in a gang as when single; and a nation that makes an unjust war is only a great gang.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter, 14 March, 1785.

How wide the limits stand
Between a splendid and a happy land.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 267.

A land of levity is a land of guilt.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts: Preface.

The nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance.
Old Testament: Isaiah, xi, 15.

No nation is permitted to live in ignorance with impunity.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 407.

If a nation expects to be ignorant and free, it expects what never was and never will be.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 382.

Wise nature ever, with a prudent hand,
Dispenses various gifts to ev'ry land;
To ev'ry nation frugally imparts
A genius fit for some peculiar arts.

SOAME JENYNS, The Art of Dancing. Canto
ii, l. 55.

I know of no existing nation that deserves to live, and I know of very few individuals.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iv, p. 208.

A nation's right to speak a nation's voice,
And own no power but of the nation's choice!

THOMAS MOORE, Fudge Family in Paris. Letter xi, l. 3.

Make your national conscience clean, and your national eyes will soon be clear.

RUSKIN, Crown of Wild Olive: War.

A nation strong, train'd up in arms.

SHAKESPEARE, Thurs Andronicus. Act I, sc. 1, 30.

To rise by others' fall

I deem a losing gain;

All states with others' ruin built

To ruin run amain.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, I Envy Not Their Eap.

A nation never falls but by suicide.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1861.

Until nations are generous they will never be wise; true policy is generous policy; all bitterness, selfishness, etc., may gain small ends, but lose great ones.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Letter, March, 1823.

A nation's institutions and beliefs are determined by its character.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. ii, ch. 16,
sec. 5.

The true greatness of nations is in those qualities which constitute the greatness of the individual.

CHARLES SUMNER, Oration on the True Grandeur of Nations.

There was never a nation great until it came to the knowledge that it had nowhere in the world to go for help.

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, *Studies: Comments
on Canada*. Ch. 3.

Just pride is no mean factor in a State;
The sense of greatness keeps a nation great.

WILLIAM WATSON, The True Patriotism.

No nation is fit to sit in judgment upon any other nation.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, N. Y., 20 April, 1915.

III—Nation: Little Nations

The day of small nations has passed away;
the day of empires has come.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech. Birmingham,
13 May, 1904. See also under IMPERIALISM.

There is no such thing as a small country.
The greatness of a people is no more affected by the number of its inhabitants than the greatness of an individual is measured by his height. Whoever presents a great example is great.

VICTOR HUGO, Speech, at Geneva, 17 Nov., 1862.

The nations which have put mankind and posterity most in their debt have been small states—Israel, Athens, Florence, Elizabethan England.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Will and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 181.)

A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation.

Old Testament: Isaiah, lx, 22.

She that was great among nations, and princess among provinces, how is she become tributary! Old Testament: Lamentations, i, 1.

For the world is given over to the cruel sons of Cain.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, The Cry of the Little Peoples.

² God has chosen little nations as the vessels by which He carries his choicest wines to the lips of humanity to rejoice their hearts, to exalt their vision, to strengthen their faith.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Speech, Sept., 1914.

NATURE

I.—Nature: Definitions

³ Nature means Necessity.

P. J. BAILLY, Festus: Dedication.

By fate, not option, frugal Nature gave
One scent to hyson and to wall-flower,
One sound to pine-groves and to waterfalls,
One aspect to the desert and the lake.
It was her stern necessity.

EMERSON, Xenophanes.

⁴ Whatever befalls in accordance with Nature should be accounted good. (Omnia autem, quæsecundum naturam fiunt, sunt habenda in bonis.)

CICERO, De Senectute, Ch. xix, sec. 71.

⁵ And what if all of animated nature
Be but organic harps diversely fram'd,
That tremble into thought, as o'er them sweeps,

Plastic and vast, one intellectual breeze,
At once the soul of each, and God of all?

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Eolian Harp, l. 44.

⁶ Nature is a rag-merchant, who works up every shred and ort and end into new creations; like a good chemist whom I found, the other day, in his laboratory, converting his old shirts into pure white sugar.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

⁷ Nature is what you may do. . . . Nature is the tyrannous circumstance, the thick skull, the sheathed snake, the ponderous rock-like jaw; necessitated activity, violent direction.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Nature is no spendthrift, but takes the shortest way to her ends.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Nature is a mutable cloud which is always and never the same.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

Nature, as we know her, is no saint. . . . She comes eating, drinking and stinking.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

⁸ The great mother Nature will not quite tell her secret to the coach or the steamboat, but says, One to one, my dear, is my rule also, and I keep my enchantments and oracles for the religious soul coming alone, or as good as alone, in true-love.

EMERSON, Letter to Mrs. Emerson, 30 May, 1871.

⁹ Nature, in her most dazzling aspects or stupendous parts, is but the background and theatre of the tragedy of man.

JOHN MORLEY, Critical Miscellanies: Byron.

¹⁰ All nature is but art, unknown to thee.

POPE, Essay on Man, Epist. i, l. 289.

See also ART AND NATURE.

¹¹ Meanwhile, until the world's structure is held together by philosophy, she [nature] maintains its working through hunger and through love.

SCHILLER, Die Weltweisen. Last stanza.

¹² "Nature" is but another name for health, and the seasons are but different states of health.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 23 Aug., 1853.

Nature will bear the closest inspection. She invites us to lay our eye level with her smallest leaf, and take an insect view of its plain.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 22 Oct., 1839.

¹⁴ Nature speaks in symbols and in signs.

WHITTIER, To Charles Sumner.

¹⁵ Few folk hae seen oftener than me Natur gettin' up i' the morning . . . Never see ye her hair in papers.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 19. March, 1829.

¹⁶ Nature never did betray The heart that loved her.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 123.

To the solid ground Of Nature trusts the Mind that builds for aye.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets.

No. 34.

¹⁷ Nature's old felicities.

WORDSWORTH, The Trojans.

III—Nature: Love of Nature

¹⁸ And who loves Nature more Than he, whose painful art Has taught and skilled his heart To read her skill and lore?

ROBERT BANCROFT, Spring. Ode ii, st. 4.

¹⁹ To him who in the love of Nature holds Communion with her visible forms, she speaks A various language; for his gayer hours She has a voice of gladness, and a smile And eloquence of beauty, and she glides Into his darker musings, with a mild And healing sympathy, that steals away Their sharpness, ere he is aware.

BYRON, Thou hastopis, l. 1.

²⁰ Set him before a hedgerow in a pine,

And he was happy all alone for hours.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Edward Crowhurst.

1
To sit on rocks, to muse o'er flood and fell,
To slowly trace the forest's shady scene,
Where things that own not man's dominion dwell,

And mortal foot hath ne'er, or rarely been;
To climb the trackless mountain all unseen,
With the wild flock that never needs a fold;
Alone o'er steep and foaming falls to lean;
This is not solitude; 'tis but to hold Converse with Nature's charms, and view her stores unroll'd.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 25.

Dear Nature is the kindest mother still,
Though always changing, in her aspect mild;
From her bare bosom let me take my fill,
Her never-wean'd, though not her favour'd child.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 37.

There is a pleasure in the pathless woods,
There is a rapture on the lonely shore,
There is a society where none intrudes,
By the deep Sea, and music in its roar;
I love not Man the less, but Nature more,
From these our interviews, in which I steal
From all I may be, or have been before,
To mingle with the Universe, and feel
What I can ne'er express, yet cannot all conceal.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 178.

2
I am a part of all you see
In Nature: part of all you feel:
I am the impact of the bee
Upon the blossom; in the tree
I am the sap—that shall reveal
The leaf, the bloom—that flows and flutes
Up from the darkness through its roots.

EMERSON CAWLEY, Penetralia.

3
He that can draw a charm
From rocks, or woods, or weeds, or things that seem

All mute, and does it—is wise.

BRYAN WALKER PROCTER, A Haunted Stream.

4
Inebriate of air am I,
And debauchee of dew,
Reeling, through endless summer days,
From inns of molten blue.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. I, No. 20.

5
He who knows what sweets and virtues are in the ground, the waters, the plants, the heavens, and how to come at these enchantments, is the rich and royal man.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

6
I do not count the hours I spend

In wandering by the sea;

The forest is my loyal friend,

Like God it useth me.

EMERSON, Walden.

Whoso walketh in solitude,
And inhabiteth the wood,
Choosing light, wave, rock, and bird,
Before the money-loving herd,
Into that forester shall pass,
From these companions, power and grace.

EMERSON, Woodnotes. Pt. ii.

7
The meanest floweret of the vale,
The simplest note that swells the gale,
The common sun, the air, the skies,
To him are opening Paradise.

THOMAS GRAY, On the Pleasure Arising from Vicissitude, l. 49.

8
Then live who may where honied words prevail,

I with the deer, and with the nightingale!

EDWARD HOVELL-THURLOW, When in the Woods.

9
I have heard the mavis singing
Its love-song to the morn;
I've seen the dew-drop clinging
To the rose just newly born.

CHARLES JEFFREYS, Mary of Argyle.

10
Give true hearts but earth and sky,
And some flowers to bloom and die.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: First Sunday after Epiphany.

11
Nature, in thy largess, grant
I may be thy confidant!

F. L. KNOWLES, To Mother Nature.

12
I was blood-sister to the clod,
Blood-brother to the stone.

WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY, The Fire-Bringer.

13
For him there's a story in every breeze,
And a picture in every wave.

THOMAS MOORE, Boat Glee.

14
And we, with Nature's heart in tune,
Concerted harmonies.

WILLIAM MOTTERSWELL, Jeannie Morrison.

15
O Nature, how we worship thee even against our wills! (Natura, quam te colimus inviti
quoque!)

SENECA, Hippolytus. Act iv, l. 1116.

16
Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law
My services are bound.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act I, sc. 2, l. 1.

17
'Tis not for golden eloquence I pray,
A godlike tongue to move a stony heart—
Methinks it were full well to be apart
In solitary uplands far away,
Betwixt the blossoms of a rosy spray,
Dreaming upon the wonderful sweet face
Of Nature, in a wild and pathless place.

FREDERICK Tennyson, Sonnet.

5 The sounding cataract
 Haunted me like a passion: the tall rock,
 The mountain, and the deep and gloomy wood,
 Their colours and their forms, were then to me

An appetite; a feeling and a love,
 That had no need of a remoter charm,
 By thought supplied.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 76.

A lover of the meadows and the woods
 And mountains; and of all that we behold
 From this green earth.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 103.

2 And recognizes ever and anon
 The breeze of Nature stirring in his soul.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 599.

As in the eye of Nature he has lived,
 So in the eye of Nature let him die!

WORDSWORTH, The Old Cumberland Beggar.

I was yet a boy
 Careless of books, yet having felt the power
 Of Nature.

WORDSWORTH, Michael, l. 27.

As if the man had fixed his face,
 In many a solitary place,
 Against the wind and open sky!

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell. Pt. i, st. 26.

3 He walks with nature, and her paths are peace.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 188.

IV—Nature: Its Beauty

4 A painted meadow, or a purling stream.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Letter from Italy, l. 166.

Fountain-heads and pathless groves,
 Places which pale passion loves!

BRAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Nice Valour.
Song. Act iii, sc. 3.

Yet nature's charms—the hills and woods—
 The sweeping vales and foaming floods—
 Are free alike to all.

ROBERT BURNS, To Chloris.

Tracing out wisdom, power, and love,
 In earth or sky, in stream or grove.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Evening.

Meadows trim with daisies pied,
 Shallow brooks and rivers wide.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 75.

5 If Nature built by rule and square,
 Than man what wiser would she be?
 What wins us is her careless care,
 And sweet unpunctuality.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Nature and the Book.

6 There are no grotesques in nature.
 SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
 sec. 19.

O Nature! a' thy shews an' forms

To feeling, pensive hearts has charms!
 Whether the summer kindly warms,

WV' life an' light,
 Or winter howls, in gusty storms,
 The lang, dark night!

BURNS, Epistle to William Simpson. St. 14.

Nothing in Nature is unbeautiful.

TENNYSON, The Lover's Tale, l. 342.

7 Art, Glory, Freedom fail, but Nature still is fair.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto li, st. 87.

8 Nature, exerting an unwearied power,
 Forms, opens, and gives scent to every flower;
 Spreads the fresh verdure of the field, and leads

The dancing Naiads through the dewy meads.
 COWPER, Table Talk, l. 690.

9 Till o'er the wreck, emerging from the storm,
 Immortal Nature lifts her changeful form:
 Mounts from her funeral pyre on wings of flame,

And soars and shines, another and the same.
 ERASMUS DARWIN, Botanic Garden. Pt. i, canto iv, l. 389.

10 For earth's little secret and innumerable ways,
 For the carol and the colour, Lord, we bring What things may be of thanks, and that Thou hast lent our days

Eyes to see and ears to hear and lips to sing.
 JOHN DRINKWATER, Morning Thanksgiving.

11 When you defile the pleasant streams
 And the wild bird's abiding place,
 You massacre a million dreams

And cast your spittle in God's face.
 JOHN DRINKWATER, Olton Pools; To the Defilers.

12 Ever charming, ever new,
 When will the landscape tire the view?
 JOHN DYER, Grongar Hill, l. 102.

To sit in the shade on a fine day and look upon verdure is the most perfect refreshment.

JANE AUSTEN, Mansfield Park. Ch. 9.

13 There is nothing so wonderful in any particular landscape as the necessity of being beautiful under which every landscape lies.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

Miller owns this field, Locke that, and Manning the woodland beyond. But none of them owns the landscape. There is a property in the horizon which no man has but he whose eye can integrate all the parts, that is, the poet. This is the best part of these men's farms, yet to this their warranty-deeds give no title.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: Nature.

14 How cunningly nature hides every wrinkle of her inconceivable antiquity under roses and violets and morning dew!

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

The rounded world is fair to see,
Nine times folded in mystery:
Though baffled seers cannot impart
The secret of its laboring heart,
Throb thine with Nature's throbbing breast,
And all is clear from east to west.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

She paints with white and red the moors
To draw the nations out of doors.

EMERSON, Nature.

Nature never spares the opium or aspen, but wherever she mars her creatures with some deformity or defect, lays her poppies plentifully on the bruise, and the sufferer goes joyfully through life, ignorant of the ruin, and incapable of seeing it, though all the world point their finger at it every day.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

There's gowd in the breast of the primrose
pale,
An' ailler in every blossom;
There's riches galore in the breeze of the vale,
And health in the wild wood's bosom.

JAMES HOGG, There's Gowd in the Breast.

There ev'ry bush with Nature's music rings,
There ev'ry breeze bears health upon its wings.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 220.

Which of us is not sometimes affected, almost to despair, by the splendid vision of earth and sky?

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry.

The soft south-wind, the flowers amid the grass,
The fragrant earth, the sweet sounds everywhere,
Sensad gifts too great almost for man to bear.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Story of Rhodope, St. 23.

We are what suns and winds and waters make
us;

The mountains are our sponsors and the rills Fashion and win their nurslings with their smiles.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Hellenics.

Ye marshes, how candid and simple and nothing-withholding and free
Ye publish yourselves to the sky and offer yourselves to the sea!

SIMPLY LAMIER, The Marshes of Glynn.

Tolerant plains, that suffer the sea and the rains
and the sun,
Ye spread and span like the catholic man who hath mightily won
God out of knowledge and good out of infinite pain
And sight out of blindness and purity out of a stain.

SIMPLY LAMIER, The Marshes of Glynn.

Nature with folded hands seemed there,

Kneeling at her evening prayer!

LONGFELLOW, Voices of the Night: Prelude,
St. 11.

Over our manhood bend the skies;
Against our fallen and traitor lives
The great winds utter prophecies;
With our faint hearts the mountain strives;
Its arms outstretched, the druid wood
Waits with its benedictic;
And to our age's drowsy blood
Still shouts the inspiring sea.

J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Prelude to Part First.

Wherefore did Nature pour her bounties forth
With such a full and unwithdrawing hand, Covering the earth with odours, fruits, and flocks,
Thronging the seas with spawn innumerable,
But all to please, and sate the curious taste?

MILTON, Comus, l. 710.

Oh, Brignall banks are wild and fair,
And Greta woods are green,
And you may gather garlands there
Would grace a summer queen.

SCOTT, Rokeby, Canto iii, st. 16.

Nature seems unspeakably grand, when,
plunged in a long reverie, one hears the rippling of the waters upon a solitary strand, in the calm of a night still enkindled and luminous with the setting moon.

ETIENNE PIVART DE SENANCOUR, Obermann.

Nature's unchanging harmony.
SHILLY, Queen Mab, Canto ii.

My banks they are furnish'd with bees,
Whose murmur invites one to sleep;
My grottoes are shaded with trees,
And my hills are white-over with sheep.

SHENSTONE, A Pastoral Ballad: Pt. ii, Hope.

Once, when the days were ages,
And the old Earth was young,
The high gods and the sages
From Nature's golden pages
Her open secrets wrung.

R. H. STODDARD, Brahma's Answer.

The whole wood-world is one full peal of praise.

TENNYSON, Bala and Balan, l. 444.

I care not, fortune, what you me deny:
You cannot rob me of free nature's grace;
You cannot shut the windows of the sky
Through which Aurora shows her brightening face:

You cannot bar my constant feet to trace
The woods and lawns, by living stream, at eve.
TROMBON, Castle of Indolence, Canto ii, st. 3.

¹ O nature! all-sufficient! over all
Enrich me with the knowledge of thy works;
Snatch me to Heaven.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 1352.

Can he forbear to join the general smile
Of Nature? can fierce passions vex his breast,
While every gale is peace, and every grove
Is melody?

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 871.

² The sun-swept spaces which the good God made.

CHARLES HANSON TOWN, City Children.

³ Talk not of temples, there is one
Built without hands, to mankind given;
Its lamps are the meridian sun
And all the stars of heaven,
Its walls are the cerulean sky,
Its floor the earth so green and fair,
The dome its vast immensity
All Nature worships there!

DAVID VEDDER, The Temple of Nature.

Where Nature seems to sit alone,
Majestic on a craggy throne.

JOSEPH WATSON, Ode to Fancy.

⁴ I believe a leaf of grass is no less than the journey-work of the stars,
And the pismire is equally perfect, and a grain of sand, and the egg of the wren,
And the tree-toad is a chef-d'œuvre for the highest,
And the running blackberry would adorn the parlors of heaven,
And the narrowest hinge in my hand puts to scorn all machinery,
And the cow crunching with depress'd head
surpasses any statue,
And a mouse is miracle enough to stagger sextillions of infidels.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 31.

⁵ The harp at Nature's advent strung
Has never ceased to play;
The song the stars of morning sung
Has never died away.

WHITTIER, The Worship of Nature.

Though all the bards of earth were dead,
And all their music passed away,
What Nature wishes should be said
She'll find the rightful voice to say.

WILLIAM WINTER, The Golden Silence.

⁶ On a fair prospect some have looked,
And felt, as I have heard them say,
As if the moving time had been
A thing as steadfast as the scene
On which they gazed themselves away.

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell. Pt. I, st. 16.

⁷ The stars of midnight shall be dear
To her; and she shall lean her ear

In many a secret place
Where rivulets dance their wayward round,
And beauty born of murmuring sound
Shall pass into her face.

WORDSWORTH, Three Years She Grew.

There's not a nook within this solemn pan,
But were an apt confessional,
WORDSWORTH, The Trosachs.

⁸ Such blessings Nature pours,
O'erstock'd mankind enjoy but half her stores:
In distant wilds, by human eyes unseen,
She rears her flowers, and spreads her velvet
green;

Pure gurgling rills the lonely desert trace
And waste their music on the savage race.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 227.

⁹ The little cares that fretted me,
I lost them yesterday,
Among the fields above the sea,
Among the winds at play, . . .
Among the hushing of the corn,
Where drowsy poppies nod,
Where ill thoughts die and good are born—
Out in the fields of God.

UNKNOWN, Out in the Fields. Published in the Boston Sunday Globe, 30 April, 1899, credited to St. Paul's Magazine, but not discovered there. Erroneously attributed to Elizabeth Barrett Browning. E. M. Tension, in her Life of Louise Imogen Guiney, states that it was written by Miss Guiney "not long before her lute was broken and her pen laid aside forever." Miss Guiney went to England in 1901 and died in 1920, having previously published two collections of poems in which this one is not included. It is so obviously English—corn, for example, being used in its English sense—that it is the compiler's opinion it was written by an English author.

V—Nature: Its Cruelty

¹⁰ Nature is cruel, man is sick of blood;
Nature is stubborn, man would fain adore;
Nature is fickle, man hath need of rest;
Nature forgives no debt, and fears no grave.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Man and Nature.

Nature pardons no mistakes. Her yes is yes,
and her nay, nay.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Discipline.

Nature's rules have no exceptions.

HENRY SPENCER, Social Statics: Introduction.

¹¹ The course of Nature seems a course of Death,
And nothingness the whole substantial thing.

F. J. BAILEY, Faints: Water and Wood.

¹² Knowing how Nature threatens, ere she springs.

ROBERT BUCKMAN, Mag. Signs.

¹ It is far from easy to determine whether she [Nature] has proved to him a kind parent or a merciless stepmother.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii, sec. 1.

To man the earth seems altogether

No more a mother, but a step-dame rather.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week 1, day 3.

² Nature subjects the weak to the strong. (Nature est enim potioribus deteriora submittere.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epis. xc, sec. 4.

³ For nature is one with rapine, a harm no preacher can heal;

The Mayfly is torn by the swallow, the sparrow spear'd by the shrike,

And the whole little wood where I sit is a world of plunder and prey.

TENNISON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. iv, st. 4.

⁴ Ah, what a warning for a thoughtless man,
Could field or grove, could any spot of earth,
Show to his eye an image of the pangs
Which it hath witnessed; render back an echo
Of the sad steps by which it hath been trod!

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vi, l. 806.

VI—Nature: Its Laws

⁵ Nature's great law, and law of all men's minds?—

To its own impulse every creature stirs;

Live by thy light, and earth will live by hers!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Religious Isolation. St. 4.

⁶ I trust in Nature for the stable laws
Of Beauty and utility. Spring shall plant
And Autumn garner to the end of time.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act 1.

⁷ For Nature in man's heart her laws doth pen.
SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum. Sec. 26, st. 2.

⁸ Nature is the true law.

JOHN FLEMING, First Fruits, Fo. 32.

⁹ Against the law of nature, law of nations.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 889. See also LAW: VARIETIES.

¹⁰ Laws of Nature are God's thoughts thinking themselves out in the orbits and the tides.

C. H. PARKHURST, Sermons: Pattern in Mount.

¹¹ Those rules of old, discover'd, not devis'd,
Are Nature still, but Nature methodis'd;
Nature, like Liberty, is but restrain'd
By the same laws which first herself ordain'd.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. 1, l. 88.

VII—Nature, The Teacher

¹² The study of Nature is intercourse with the Highest Mind. You should never trifle with Nature.

JEAN LOUIS AGASSIZ, Agassiz at Penikese.

¹³ Go forth under the open sky, and list
To Nature's teachings.

BRYANT, Thanatopsis.

Come forth into the light of things,
Let Nature be your teacher.

WORDSWORTH, The Tables Turned.

The house is a prison, the schoolroom's a cell;
Leave study and books for the upland and dell.

JOSEPH H. GREEN, Morning Invitation to a Child.

¹⁴ Never does Nature say one thing and Wisdom another. (Numquam aliud natura, aliud sapientia dicit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 321.

Never, no never, did Nature say one thing, and Wisdom say another.

EDMUND BURREL, Letters on a Regicide Peace. No. 3.

Nature is always wise in every part.

EDWARD HOVELL-THURLOW, Harvest Moon.

¹⁵ Go, from the creatures thy instructions take:
Learn from the birds what food the thickets yield;

Learn from the beasts the physic of the field;
Thy arts of building from the bee receive;
Learn of the mole to plough, the worm to weave;

Learn of the little nautilus to sail,
Spread the thin oar, and catch the driving gale.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 172.

¹⁶ But any man that walks the mead,
In bud or blade or bloom, may find,
According as his humours lead,
A meaning suited to his mind.

TENNISON, The Day-Dream: Moral. St. 2.

¹⁷ For I'd rather be thy child
And pupil, in the forest wild,
Than be the king of men elsewhere,
And most sovereign slave of care;
To have one moment of thy dawn,
Than share the city's year forlorn.

H. D. THOREAU, Nature.

¹⁸ Nature has always had more power than education. (La Nature a toujours été en eux plus forte que l'éducation.)

VOLTAIRE, Life of Molière.

Nature is more powerful than education.

BENJAMIN DUBREUIL, Constance Fleming. Pt. 1, ch. 13.

¹⁹ "Is this," I cried,
"The end of prayer and preaching?"

Then down with pulpit, down with priest,
And give us Nature's teaching!"

WERTHER, A Sabbath Scene.

Kind Nature's charities his steps attend;
In every babbling brook he finds a friend;
While chaf'ning thoughts of sweetest use, bestowed

By wisdom, moralise his pensive road.

WORDSWORTH, Descriptive Sketches, l. 27.

His daily teachers had been woods and rills,
The silence that is in the starry sky,
The sleep that is among the lonely hills.

WORDSWORTH, Song at the Feast of Brougham Castle, l. 162.

One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Of moral evil and of good,
Than all the sages can.

WORDSWORTH, The Tables Turned.

On every thorn delightful wisdom grows;
In every rill a sweet instruction flows.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 249.

Read Nature; Nature is a friend to truth;
Nature is Christian; preaches to mankind;
And bids dead matter aid us in our creed.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 703.

VIII.—Nature: The Book of Nature

After the sacred volumes of God and the Scriptures, study, in the second place, that great volume of the works and the creatures of God.

FRANCIS BACON, Letters: To Trinity College, Cambridge.

The volume of nature is the book of knowledge.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 4.

The book of Nature is the book of Fate. She turns the gigantic pages, leaf after leaf,—never re-turning one.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Did we but pay the love we owe,
And with a child's undoubting wisdom look
On all these living pages of God's book.

J. R. LOWELL, To the Dandelion.

Believe one who knows: you will find something more in woods than in books. Trees and stones will teach you that which you can never learn from masters. (Experto crede: aliquid amplius in silvis invenies quam in libris. Ligna et lapides docebunt te quod a magistris audire non possis.)

ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX, Epistles. No. 106.
To Master Henry Murdach, afterwards
Archbishop of York.

And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running
brooks,

Sermons in stones and good in every thing.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act II, sc. 1, l. 15.

London had been my prison; but my books Hills and great waters, labouring men and
brooks,

Ships and deep friendships and remembered days
Which even now set all my mind ablaze.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Biography.

Strange to the world, he wore a bashful look,
The fields his study, nature was his book.

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, The Farmer's Boy: Spring, l. 31.

Out of the book of Nature's learned breast.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
ii, day 4. (Sylvester, tr.)

See thou bring not to field or stone
The fancies found in books;

Leave authors' eyes, and fetch thy own,
To brave the landscape's looks.

EMERSON, Waldeinsamkeit.

His listless length at noontide would he stretch,

And pore upon the brook that babbles by.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 103.

Nature is a volume of which God is the author.

MOSES HARVEY, Science and Religion.

What Nature has writ with her lusty wit
Is worded so wisely and kindly

That whoever has dipped in her manuscript
Must up and follow her blindly.

W. E. HENLEY, Echoes. No. 33.

Boughs are daily rifled
By the gusty thieves,

And the book of Nature

Getteth short of leaves.

THOMAS HOOD, The Seasons.

And Nature, the old nurse, took
The child upon her knee,

Saying: "Here is a story-book

Thy Father has written for thee."

"Come, wander with me," she said,

"Into regions yet untrod;

And read what is still unread

In the manuscripts of God."

LONGFELLOW, Fiftieth Birthday of Agassiz.

In nature's infinite book of secrecy

A little I can read.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act I,
sc. 2, l. 9.

And meditate the Book Of Nature, ever open.

TROMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 669.

O Reader! had you in your mind
Such stores as silent thought can bring,

O gentle Reader! you would find

A tale in every thing.

WORDSWORTH, Simon Lee, l. 65.

IX--Nature and God

¹ What I call God, And fools call Nature.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book: The Pope, l. 1013.

HOWELL, Familiar Letters: Bk. ii, To Dr. T. P.

⁴ At home with Nature, and at one with God!

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, The Angelus.

⁵ Nature is but a name for an effect
Whose cause is God.

COWPER, The Task, Bk. vi, l. 224.

His are the mountains and the valleys his,
And the resplendent rivers. His I' enjoy
With a propriety that none can feel,
But who, with filial countenance inspir'd,
Can lift to heaven an unpresumptuous eye,
And smiling say--My Father made them all!

COWPER, The Task, Bk. v, l. 742.

Full often too

Our wayward intellect, the more we learn
Of nature, overlooks her Author more.

COWPER, The Task, Bk. iii, l. 235.

⁶ What man has written man may read;
But God fills every root and seed
With cryptic words, too strangely set
For mortals to decipher yet.

CHARLES DALMON, Documents.

⁷ Nature is the art of God. (Deus eternum, ars sua, que natura est.)

DANTE, De Monarchia, Bk. i, l. 3.

See also ART AND NATURE.

⁸ And when I am stretched beneath the pines,
Where the evening star so holy shines,
I laugh at the lore and the pride of man,
At the sophist schools and the learned clan;
For what are they all, in their high conceit,
When man in the bush with God may meet?

EMERSON, Good-Bye.

Behold! the Haly Graal is found,
Found in each poppy's cup of gold;
And God walks with us as of old.
Behold! the burning bush still burns
For man, whichever way he turns:

And all God's earth is holy ground.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Down at San Diego.

⁹ He would adore my gifts instead of me,
And rest in Nature, not the God of Nature.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Poet.

¹⁰ Nature is religious only as it manifests God.

MARK HOPKINS, Sermon, 30 May, 1843.

¹¹ A voice is in the wind I do not know;
A meaning on the face of the high hills
Whose utterance I cannot comprehend.

A something is behind them: that is God.

MACDONALD, Within and Without, Pt. i, sc. 1.

¹² Every formula which expresses a law of nature is a hymn of praise to God.

MARIA MITCHELL. Inscribed beneath her bust in Hall of Fame.

¹³ The perfections of Nature show that she is the image of God; her defects show that she is only his image.

PASCAL, Pensées, Ch. 12.

¹⁴ All are but parts of one stupendous Whole,
Whose body Nature is, and God the soul;
That changed thro' all, and yet in all the same,
Great in the earth as in th' ethereal frame,
Warms in the sun, refreshes in the breeze,
Glows in the stars, and blossoms in the trees; . . .

As full, as perfect, in a hair as heart;
As full, as perfect, in vile man that mourns,
As the rapt Seraph that adores and burns.
To him no high, no low, no great, no small;
He fills, he bounds, connects, and equals all!

POPE, Essay on Man, Epist. i, l. 267.

A work of skill, surpassing sense,
A labour of Omnipotence;
Though frail as dust it meet thine eye,
He form'd this gnat who built the sky.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Gnat.

Nature reads not our labels, "great" and "small";
Accepts she one and all.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Man with the Hoe:
A Reply. See also GREATNESS: GREAT AND SMALL.

¹⁵ Slave to no sect, who takes no private road,
But looks thro' Nature up to Nature's God.

POPE, Essay on Man, Epist. iv, l. 331.

It is the modest, not the presumptuous, inquirer who makes a real and safe progress in the discovery of divine truths. One follows Nature and Nature's God; that is, he follows God in his works and in his word.

LORD BOLINGBROKE, Letter to Mr. Pope. It was in this letter, perhaps, that Pope found the famous phrase he used in the preceding quotation.

And not from Nature up to Nature's God,
But down from Nature's God look Nature through.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, Luther.

¹ The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handywork.
Old Testament: Psalms, xix, 1.

² Call it Nature, fate, fortune; all these things are names of the one and the selfsame God. (Naturam voca, fatum, fortunamque; sunt omnia unius et ejusdem Dei nomina.)

SENeca, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, sec. 8.
Go thou and seek the House of Prayer!
I to the woodlands wend, and there,
In lovely Nature see the God of Love.
SOUTHEY, Written on Sunday Morning.

³ God, the Great Giver, can open the whole universe to our gaze in the narrow space of a single lane.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, Jivan-smriti.

⁴ Are God and Nature then at strife,
That Nature lends such evil dreams?
So careful of the type she seems,
So careless of the single life.

TENNISON, In Memoriam. Pt. iv, st. 2.

⁵ Nature, so far as in her lies,
Imitates God, and turns her face
To every land beneath the skies,
Counts nothing that she meets with base,
But lives and loves in every place.
TENNYSON, On a Mourner. St. 1.

Nature is the glass reflecting God.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 1005.

⁶ The course of nature is the art of God.
The miracles thou call'st for, this attest;
For say, could nature nature's course control?
But, miracles apart, who sees Him not?

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 1266.
Take God from Nature, nothing great is left.

¹ Would that the Roman populace had but one neck. (Utinam populus Romanus unum cervicem haberet!)

CALIGULA, when incensed at the people applauding his opponents. (SUETONIUS, Life.) Seneca and Dion Cassius also credit the saying to Caligula, but it is ascribed to Nero by other writers.

Anger wishes all mankind had only one neck; love, that it had only one heart.

RACINE, Flower, Fruit and Thorn, iv.

I love the sex, and sometimes would reverse

The tyrant's wish "that mankind only had

One neck, which he with one fell stroke might pierce":

My wish is quite as wide, but not so bad, . . .

That womankind had but one rosy mouth,

To kiss them all at once from North to South.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 27.

⁴ Neck or nothing.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Lady's Last Stake. Act iii.

⁵ The stately neck is manhood's manliest part;
It takes the life-blood freshest from the heart.
With short, curled ringlets close around it spread,

How light and strong it lifts the Grecian head!

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2497.

What is nearest touches us most. The passions rise higher at domestic than at imperial tragedies.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Mrs. Thrale.

¹⁶ Just next door 'tis cold and cheerless,

There's no carpet on the floor,

And a little heart is breaking,
In the cottage, just next door.

CHARLES K. HARRIS, Just Next Door. (1902)

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

² A bad neighbor is as great a plague as a good one is a blessing; he who enjoys a good neighbor has a precious possession.

HERODOTUS, Works and Days, l. 346.

A bad neighbor brings bad luck. (Aliquid mali esse propter vicinum malum.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 772. (Act iv, sc. 4.)

Quoted as a proverb.

If you're a neighbor to a neighbor who is bad, you must learn to suffer what is bad. But if you are neighbor to a neighbor who is good, more and more reciprocal good do you both teach and learn.

MENANDER, Fragments, No. 553.

³ Your own safety is at stake when your neighbor's house is in flames. (Tua res agitur, paries cum proximus ardet.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 84.

Pope, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 261.

See plastic Nature working to this end,
The single atoms each to other tend,
Attract, attracted to, the next in place,
Form'd and impell'd its neighbour to embrace.

Pope, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 9.

¹⁰ Withdraw thy foot from in thy neighbour's house; lest he be weary of thee, and so hate thee.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 17.

¹¹ Better that man be born dumb, nay, void of reason, rather than that he employ the gifts of Providence to the destruction of his neighbor.

QUINTILLIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. xii, ch. 1, sec. 1.

¹² There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbours good. One person I have to make good: myself. But my duty to my neighbour is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy—if I may.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Christmas Sermon.

¹³ Love thy neighbor. ('Αγάπα τὸν πλησίον.)

THEALES. (STOBAEUS, Florilegium. Pt. iii, l. 59.)

Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

Old Testament: Leviticus, xix, 18; New Testament: Matthew, xix, 19. It will be noted that Jesus was quoting the Old Testament.

Once again success has crowned

Missionary labor,

For her sweet eyes own that she

Also loves her neighbor.

G. A. BAKER, Thoughts on the Commandments.

I love my neighbour as myself,

Myself like him too, by his leave,

Nor to his pleasure, power, or pelf

Came I to crouch, as I conceive.

For Newspapers see Press

³ A master-passion is the love of news.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Newspaper, l. 281.

⁴ When a dog bites a man that is not news, but when a man bites a dog that is news.

Usually attributed to CHARLES A. DANA, famous editor of the New York Sun, but the evidence favors JOHN B. BOGART, city editor of the Sun from 1873-1890. In a letter to the compiler, Mr. Frank M. O'Brien, the present editor of the Sun, says, "The late Edward P. Mitchell, Dana's right hand man for many years, told me that the author was Mr. Bogart. Mr. Mitchell was meticulous about such things, and if it had not been true I think Mr. Bogart, a most modest man, would have demurred." Stanley Walker (City Editor, p. 20) attributes the saying to Amos Cummings, another of Dana's editors.

Asked for a definition of news, I can give you no better answer than the one on which we were brought up in the Sun office. Mr. Dana used to say, "When a dog bites a man that is not news, but when a man bites a dog that is news."

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. (HARRINGTON, Essentials of Journalism.)

News is as hard to hold as quicksilver, and it fades more rapidly than any morning-glory.

NEWTON, SIR ISAAC

I do not know what I may appear to the world, but to myself I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the seashore and diverting myself in now and then finding a smoother pebble or a prettier shell than ordinary, whilst the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me.

ISAAC NEWTON. (BEZWEETER, Memoirs of Newton. Vol. ii, ch. 27.)

And trifles for choice matters, worth a sponge;
As children gathering pebbles on the shore.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 322.

Newton (that proverb of the mind), alas!
Declared, with all his grand discoveries reveal'd,

That he himself felt only "like a youth
Picking up shells by the great ocean—Truth."
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vii, st. 5.

1 When Newton saw an apple fall, he found . . .
A mode of proving that the earth turn'd

How beautiful this night! the balmy night...

Which vernal zephyrs breathe in evening's ear
Were discord to the speaking quietude
That wraps this moveless scene. Heaven's ebon vault,
Studded with stars unutterably bright,
Through which the moon's unclouded grandeur rolls,
Seems like a canopy which love had spread
To curtain her sleeping world.
SHILLY, Queen Mab. Pt. iv, l. 1.

How beautiful is night!
A dewy freshness fills the silent air;
No mist obscures, nor cloud, nor speck, nor stain
Breaks the serene of heaven:
In full-orbed glory yonder moon divine
Rolls through the dark blue depths.
Beneath her steady ray

While earth, bathed in this holy light,
Is seen without its scars.

LOUIS UNTERMEYER, The Wine of Night.

5
Mysterious night! when our first parent knew Thee from report divine, and heard thy
name,

Did he not tremble for this lovely frame,
This glorious canopy of light and blue?
JOSEPH BLANCO WHITE, Night and Death.

6
Press close, bare-bosom'd night—press close,
magnetic nourishing night!

Night of south winds—night of the large few stars!

Still nodding night—mad naked summer
night.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 21.

7
Night, sable goddess! from her ebon throne,
In rayless majesty, now stretches forth
Her leaden sceptre o'er a slumbering world.
Silence, how dead! and darkness, how profound!

Nor eye, nor list'ning ear, an object finds;
Creation sleeps.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night 1, l. 18.

How is night's sable mantle labour'd o'er,
How richly wrought with attributes divine!

What wisdom shines! what love! this midnight
pomp,
This gorgeous arch, with golden worlds inlaid
Built with divine ambition!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 385.

'Tis Nature's system of divinity,
And every student of the night inspires.
'Tis elder scripture, writ by God's own hand:
Scripture authentic! uncorrupt by man.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 644.

III—Night: Its Sadness

8
A night of tears! for the gusty rain
Had ceased, but the eaves were dripping
yet;

And the moon looked forth, as tho' in pain,
With her face all white and wet.

OWEN MEREDITH, The Portrait.

9
For now began
Night with her sullen wings to double-shade
The desert; fowls in their clay nests were couch'd,
And now wild beasts came forth, the woods
to roam.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. i, l. 499.

10
Night is the time to weep;
To wet with unseen tears
Those graves of memory, where sleep
The joys of other years.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Night.

When nights are longest there.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 139.

13
The cold blast at the casement beats;
The window-panes are white;
The snow whirls through the empty streets;
It is a dreary night!

EPIC SARGENT, The Heart's Summer.

Here's a night pitiless nor wise man nor fool.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act III, sc. 2, l. 13.
Things that love night
Love not such nights as these.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act III, sc. 2, l. 42.
'Tis a naughty night to swim in.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act III, sc. 2, l. 116.
The tyranny of the open night's too rough
For nature to endure.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act III, sc. 4, l. 2.
And altogether it's very bad weather,
And an unpleasant sort of a night!
R. H. BARHAM, The Nurse's Story.
Give not a windy night a rainy morning.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets, No. 90.
² O comfort-killing Night, image of hell!
Dim register and notary of shame!
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 764.

IV—Night and Day

NIGHTINGALE

⁸ The nightingale, who still with sorrowing soul,
And "Itys, Itys" cry,
Bemoans a life o'erflourishing in ills.

(Ἀκούριτος βυδὴς, φέρ, ταλαίφρων φρεσίν

ἴτεν ἴτεν στένοισ' ἀμφιβαλὴ κακοῖς ἀπὸν πόνον)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1143. (Plumptre, tr.)

⁹ She waileth the nightingale's lament. (Θρῆνη δὲ γόον τὸν ἀγδάνον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 152.

¹⁰ O sacred bird! let me at eve,
Thus wandering all alone,

Thy tender counsel oft receive.

Bear witness to thy pensive airs,
And pity Nature's common cares,
Till I forget my own.

MARK AKENSIDE, The Nightingale.

¹¹ Hark! ah, the nightingale!

The tawny-throated!

Hark! from that moonlit cedar what a burst!
What triumph! hark!--what pain!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Philomela.

How thick the bursts come crowding through the leaves!

Again--thou hearest?

Eternal passion! Eternal pain!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Philomela.

¹² Everything did banish moan

Save the Nightingale alone:

She, poor bird, as all forlorn

Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,

And there sung the doleful'st ditty,

That to hear it was great pity.

Fie, fie, fie! now would she cry;

Tereu, tereu! by and by.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Philomel.

What bird so sings, yet does so wail?

O, 'tis the ravish'd nightingale--

Jug, jug, jug, jug, tereu! she cries,

And still her woes at midnight rise.

JOHN LYLY, Spring's Welcome.

¹³ A nightingale dies for shame if another bird sings better.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
1, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 6.

¹⁴ Oh nightingale! What doth she ail?

And is she sad or jolly?

For ne'er on earth was sound of mirth

So like to melancholy.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song.

¹⁵ 'Tis the merry nightingale

That crowds, and hurries, and precipitates

With fast thick warble his delicious notes.

As he were fearful that an April night

Would be too short for him to utter forth

His love-chant, and disburthen his full soul

Of all its music!

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Nightingale, l. 43.

¹⁶ I wonder if it is a bird

That sings within the hidden tree,

Or some shy angel calling me

To follow far away?

GRACE HAZARD CONKLING, Nightingales.

¹⁷ Sweet bird, that sing'st away the early hours,

Of winters past or coming void of care,

Well pleased with delights which present are,

Fair seasons, budding sprays, sweet-smelling

flowers.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, To the Nightingale.

1 But, leaning on a thorn her dainty chest,
For fear soft sleep should steal into her
breast,

Expresses in her song grief not to be expressed.

GILES FLETCHER THE YOUNGER, Christ's Victories and Triumphs.

Never nightingale so singeth:
Oh, she leans on thorny tree
And her poet-song she flingeth
Over pain to victory!

E. D. BROWNING, The Lost Bower, St. 39.

The bird forlorn
That singeth with her breast against a thorn.
THOMAS HOOD, *The Plea of the Midsummer
Fairies*, l. 269.

2 The nightingale among the thick-leaved
spring

That sits alone in sorrow, and doth sing
Whole nights away in mourning.

JOHN FLETCHER, Faithful Shepherdess, Act v.

3 Thou wast not born for death, immortal
Bird!

No hungry generations tread thee down;
The voice I hear thus passing night was heard

In ancient days by emperor and clown:
Perhaps the self-same song that found a path

Through the sad heart of Ruth, when,
sick for home,

She stood in tears amid the alien corn;
The same that oft-times hath Charm'd magic casements, opening on the foam

Of perilous seas, in faery lands forlorn.
KEATS, Ode to a Nightingale.

Adieu! adieu! thy plaintive anthem fades
Past the near meadows, over the still stream,
Up the hill-side; and now 'tis buried deep
In the next valley-glades:

Was it a vision, or a waking dream?
Fled is that music—do I wake or sleep?
KEATS, Ode to a Nightingale.

Where the nightingale doth sing
Not a senseless, tranced thing,
But divine melodious truth.

KEATS, Ode: Birds of Passion and of Mirth.

To the red rising moon, and loud and deep
The nightingale is singing from the steep.
LONGFELLOW, Keats.

4 Soft as Memnon's harp at morning,
To the inward ear devout,
Touched by light, with heavenly warning
Your transporting chords ring out.
Every leaf in every nook,
Every wave in every brook,
Chanting with a solemn voice

Minds us of our better choice.

JOHN KEBLE, The Nightingale.

5 I had a silvery name, I had a silvery name,
I had a silvery name—do you remember
The name you cried beside the tumbling sea?
"Darling . . . darling . . . darling . . . darling . . ."

Said the Chinese nightingale.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Chinese Nightingale.

6 Sweet bird that shunn'st the noise of folly,
Most musical, most melancholy!
Thee, chauntress, oft, the woods among,
I woo, to hear thy even-song.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 61.

"Most musical, most melancholy" bird!
A melancholy bird! Oh! idle thought!
In nature there is nothing melancholy.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Nightingale, l. 13.

7 All but the wakeful nightingale;
She all night long her amorous descant sung.
MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. iv, l. 602.

8 O nightingale, that on yon bloomy spray Warblest at eve, when all the woods are still,

Thou with fresh hope the Lover's heart dost fill.

While the jolly hours lead on propitious May.

MILTON, Sonnet: To the Nightingale.

Thy liquid notes that close the eye of day,
First heard before the shallow cuckoo's bill,
Portend success in love.

MILTON, Sonnet: To the Nightingale.

That star-enchanted song falls through the air
From lawn to lawn down terraces of sound,
Darts in white arrows on the shadowed ground;
And all the night you sing

HAROLD MONRO, The Nightingale Near the House

9 There's a hower of roses by Bendemeer's stream.

And the nightingale sings round it all day
long.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet.

10 The Nightingale that in the branches sang, Ah whence and whither flown again, who knows!

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubāiyāt, St. 96. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

11 Yon nightingale, whose strain so sweetly flows,
Mourning her ravish'd young or much-
loved mate,

A soothing charm o'er all the valleys throws
And skies, with notes well tuned to her sad state.

PETARCH, To Laura in Death, Sonnet xlii.

1 The nightingale got no prize at the poultry show.

SIR WALTER RALPH THE YOUNGER, Epigram.

2 The sunrise wakes the lark to sing,
The moonrise wakes the nightingale.
Come, darkness, moonrise, everything
That is so silent, sweet, and pale:
Come, so ye wake the nightingale.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Bird Raptures.

Hark! that's the nightingale,
Telling the self-same tale
Her song told when this ancient earth was young:
So echoes answered when her song was sung
In the first wooded vale.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Twilight Calm. St. 7.

3 The angel of spring, the mellow-throated nightingale.

SAPPHO, Fragments. No. 39.

4 Worlds to conquer!—But Cæsar fails
To add one song To the nightingale's!

WILLIAM KEAN SEYMOUR, Cæsar Remembers.

5 The nightingale, if she should sing by day,
When every goose is cackling, would be thought

No better a musician than the wren.
How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise and true perfection!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 104.

It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierced the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yond pomegranate tree.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 2.

6 O Nightingale,
Cease from thy enamoured tale.

SHELLEY, Magico Prodigioso. Sc. 3, l. 73.

One nightingale in an interfluous wood
Satiates the hungry dark with melody.

SHELLEY, Woodman and the Nightingale. St. 2.

7 The nightingale as soon as April bringeth
Unto her rested sense a perfect waking,
While late bare earth, proud of new clothing, springeth,

Sings out her woes, a thorn her song-book making.

And mournfully bewailing,
Her throat in tunes expresseth
What grief her breast oppresseseth.

SIR PHILIP SNEY, O Philomela Fair.

8 Where beneath the ivy shade,
In the dew-besprinkled glade,
Many a love-lorn nightingale,
Warbles sweet her plaintive tale.

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Coloneus, l. 17. (Franck-lin, tr.)

The music of the moon
Sleeps in the plain eggs of the nightingale.

TENNYSON, Aylmer's Field, l. 102.

9 Lend me your song, ye Nightingales! O, pour
The mazy-running soul of melody
Into my varied verse.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 574.

The sober-suited songstress.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 746.

10 Last night the nightingale woke me,
Last night, when all was still.
It sang in the golden moonlight,
From out the woodland hill.

CHRISTIAN WINTHER, Sehnsucht. As translated by Théophile Marzials, for his song,
Last Night.

11 My two passions, lilacs and nightingales, are in full bloom.

WALPOLE, Letters: To George Montagu, 5
May, 1761.

12 O nightingale! thou surely art
A creature of a "fiery heart":
These notes of thine—they pierce and pierce;
Tumultuous harmony and fierce!
WORDSWORTH, O Nightingale!

JAMES THOMSON, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 3.
Hence, "Nature's nobleman."
- 11 There is
One great society alone on earth:
The noble Living and the noble Dead.
WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. xi, l. 393.
- NONSENSE
- 12 For daring nonsense seldom fails to hit,
Like scattered shot, and pass with some for
wit.
SAMUEL BUTLER, On Modern Critics.
For blocks are better cleft with wedges,
Than tools of sharp or subtle edges,
And dullest nonsense has been found
By some to be the most profound.
BUTLER, Pindaric Ode. Pt. iv, l. 82.
- I suppose his nonsense suits their nonsense.
CHARLES II, referring to a foolish preacher, very popular in his parish. (WALPOLE, Letters, 22 Oct., 1774.)
- 13 Such nonsense is often heard in the schools, but one does not have to believe everything one hears. (Multa istius modi dicuntur in scholis, sed credere omnia vide ne non sit necesse.)
CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 13, sec. 31.
- 14 A doosed fine gal—well educated too—with no biggodd nonsense about her.
DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. I, ch. 33.
- 15 The ropy drivell of rheumatic brains.
WILLIAM GIFFORD, The Baviad.
- 16 No one is exempt from talking nonsense;
the misfortune is to do it solemnly. (Personne n'est exempt de dire des fadaïses; le malheur est de les dire curieusement.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 1.
- 17 It is pleasant at times to play the madman.
(Aliquando et insanire jucundum est.)
SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Sec. 17.
- 18 And such a deal of skimble-skamble stuff.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 154.
- 19 Transcendental moonshine.
JOHN STERLING. (Life, p. 84.) Referring to Coleridge. Said to have been applied to Emerson by Carlyle.
- 20 A careless song, with a little nonsense in it now and then, does not misbecome a monarch.
WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann, 1774.
- A little madness in the Spring
Is wholesome even for the King.
EMILY DICKINSON, Poems Pt. v, No. 38.

A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the wisest men.
UNKNOWN. Old nursery rhyme.

II—Nonsense. A Few Classic Examples

¹ The conductor when he receives a fare,
Must punch in the presence of the passenjare;
A blue trip slip for an 8-cent fare,
A buff trip slip for a 6-cent fare,
A pink trip slip for a 3-cent fare,
All in the presence of the passenjare.
Punch, boys, punch, punch with care,
All in the presence of the passenjare.

ISAAC H. BROMLEY. Originally published in the New York Tribune, 27 Sept., 1875. Erroneously attributed to Mark Twain, because of his article, A Literary Nightmare, in The Atlantic Monthly, for February, 1876 (p. 167), in which he describes the sufferings inflicted upon him by this jingle, which, as he states, he "came across in a newspaper, a little while ago," and which he quotes inexactly. The lines were based upon an actual sign seen by Bromley in a street-car.

² The piper be piped on the hill-top high
(Butter and eggs and a pound of cheese),
Till the cow said, "I die," and the goose said,
"Why?"

And the dog said nothing, but searched for fleas.

C. S. CALVERLEY, Ballad of the Period.

³ Forever! What abysses of woe
The word reveals, what frenzy, what Despair! For ever (printed so)
Did not . . .

Forever! 'Tis a single word!
And yet our fathers deem'd it two:
Nor am I confident they err'd;
Are you?

C. S. CALVERLEY, Forever.

⁴ If down his throat a man should choose,
In fun, to jump or slide,
He'd scrape his shoes against his teeth,
Nor dirt his own inside.

Or if his teeth were lost and gone,
And not a stump to scrape upon,
He'd see at once how very pat
His tongue lay there, by way of mat,
And he would wipe his feet on that!

EDMUND CANNON, Impromptu.

⁵ Aldeborontiphosphornio!
Where left you Chrononhotontologos?

HENRY CAREY, Chrononhotontologos. Act I,
sc. 1.

His cogitative faculties immersed
In cogibundity of cogitation.

HENRY CAREY, Chrononhotontologos, i, 1.
To thee, and gentle Rigmom Punnides,
Our congratulations flow in streams unbounded.

HENRY CAREY, Chrononhotontologos, i, 3.

⁶ "Will you walk a little faster?" said a whiting to a snail,

"There's a porpoise close behind us, and he's treading on my tail!"

LEWIS CARROLL, The Mock Turtle's Song.
(Alice in Wonderland. Ch. 10.)

They told me you had been to her,
And mentioned me to him:
She gave me a good character,
But said I could not swim.

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice in Wonderland. Ch. 12.

⁷ But oh, beamish nephew, beware of the day,
If your Snark be a Boojum! For then
You will softly and suddenly vanish away,
And never be met with again!

LEWIS CARROLL, The Hunting of the Snark:
The Baker's Tale.

⁸ 'Twas brillig, and the slithy toves
Did gyre and gimble in the wabe;
All mimsy were the borogoves,
And the mome raths outgrabe.

LEWIS CARROLL, Jabberwocky. (Through the Looking-Glass. Ch. 1.)

"And hast thou slain the Jabberwock?
Come to my arms, my beamish boy!
O frabjous day! Callooh! Callay!"
He chortled in his joy.

LEWIS CARROLL, Jabberwocky.

He left it dead, and with its head
He went galumphing back.

LEWIS CARROLL, Jabberwocky.

⁹ He thought he saw an Elephant,
That practised on a fife:

He looked again, and found it was
A letter from his wife.

"At length I realise," he said,
"The bitterness of Life!"

LEWIS CARROLL, The Gardener's Song. (Sylvie and Bruno.)

¹⁰ My recollectest thoughts are those Which I remember yet;

And bearing on, as you'd suppose,
The things I don't forget.

CHARLES EDWARD CARRYL, *My Recollectest
Thoughts*. (Davy and the Goblin.)

¹¹ Sally Salter, she was a young teacher who taught,

And her friend, Charley Church, was a preacher who praught,
Though his enemies called him a screecher who scraught.

PHILIP CAREY, The Lovers.

¹² So she went into the garden to cut a cabbage-leaf to make an apple-pie; and at the same time a great she-bear, coming down the street, pops its head into the shop. What! no soap?
So he died, and she very imprudently married the Barber: and there were present the Picninnies, and the Jobillies, and the Garyulies, and the grand Panjandrum himself, with the little round button at top; and they all fell to playing the game of catch-as-catch-can, till the gun powder ran out at the heels of their boots.

SAMUEL FOOTE, An Incoherent Story. Produced by Foote at a lecture by Charles Macklin, the latter having boasted that he could learn anything by rote on once reading it. (Quarterly Review, Sept., 1834). Memoirs of Foote do not mention incident. A correspondent of Notes and Queries (16 Nov., 1880) asserts that the author was James Quin, the actor, and, that he wrote the nonsense to test Foote's memory. Credited to Foote in Miss Edgeworth's Harry and Lucy, Concluded (Vol. II, p. 135). First use of the word "panjandrum." (The Great Panjandrum Himself, 1885)

¹ This is the Yak, so neg-lig-gee;
His coiffure's like a stack of hay;
He lives so far from Any-where,
I fear the Yak neglects his hair.

OLIVER HERFORD, The Yak.

The rhino is a homely beast,
For human eyes he's not a feast,
But you an I will never know
Why Nature chose to make him so.
Farewell, farewell, you old rhinoceros,
I'll stare at something less prepoteros.

OSCAR NASH, The Rhinoceros.

² If the man who turnips cries,
Cry not when his father dies,
'Tis a proof that he had rather
Have a turnip than his father.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Burlesque of Lope de Vega.

³ How often, oh! how often
They whispered words so soft;
How often, oh! how often,
How often, oh! how oft.

BEN KINC, How Often. Burlesque of Longfellow's The Bridge.

⁴ On the Coast of Coromandel
Where the early pumpkins blow,
In the middle of the woods
Lived the Yonghy-Bonghy-Bò.
Two old chairs and half a candle,
One old jug without a handle,—
These were all his worldly goods.

EDWARD LEAR, The Yonghy-Bonghy-Bò.

⁵ How pleasant to know Mr. Lear!
Who has written such volumes of stuff!
Some think him ill-tempered and queer,
But a few think him pleasant enough.
EDWARD LEAR, Lines to a Young Lady.

⁶ The Owl and the Pussy-Cat went to sea
In a beautiful pea-green boat.

EDWARD LEAR, The Owl and the Pussy-Cat.

They dined on mince, with slices of quince,
Which they ate with a runcible spoon,
And hand in hand, on the edge of the sand,
They danced by the light of the moon.
EDWARD LEAR, The Owl and the Pussy-Cat.

⁷ The Fobble who has no toes
Had once as many as we;
When they said, "Some day you may lose them all,"

He replied, "Fish fiddle-de-dee!"
And his Aunt Jobiska made him drink
Lavender water tinged with pink,
For she said, "The World in general knows
There's nothing so good for a Fobble's toes!"

EDWARD LEAR, The Fobble Who Has No Toes.

⁸ If you lift a guinea-pig up by the tail
His eyes drop out!

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A Garden Lyric.

⁹ In a bowl to sea went wise men three,
On a brilliant night in June:
They carried a net, and their hearts were set
On fishing up the moon.

T. L. PRACOCK, The Wise Men of Gotham.

¹⁰ Flutt'ring spread thy purple Pinions,
Gentle Cupid, o'er my Heart;
I, a Slave in thy Dominions;
Nature must give Way to Art.

PORR, Song, by a Person of Quality.

¹¹ A most subtle question, whether a chimera buzzing in space could devour second intentions, and was debated for ten daily sittings in the Council of Constance.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. II, ch. 7. Rabelais pretends that this nonsense was the title of a book which Pantagruel, on his visit to Paris, noticed in the library of St. Victor.

¹² Bombas: So have I heard on Afric's burning
shore

A hungry lion give a grievous roar,
The grievous roar echoed along the shore.
King: So have I heard on Afric's burning
shore

Another lion give a grievous roar,
And the first lion thought the last a bore!
W. B. RHODES, Bombastes Furioso.

¹³ The preylful princess pierced and prick'd a pretty pleasing pricklet.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 2, 38.

Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers,
A peck of pickled peppers did Peter Piper pick;
If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers,
Where's the peck of pickled peppers that Peter Piper picked?

UNKNOWN, Old nursery rhyme.

¹⁴ But in a sieve I'll thither sail,

And, like a rat without a tail,
I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 9.

They went to sea in a sieve, they did;

In a sieve they went to sea;

In spite of all their friends could say,

On a winter's morn, on a stormy day,

In a sieve they went to sea.

EDWARD LEAR, The Jumbies.

Far and few, far and few,

Are the lands where the Jumbies live:

Their heads are green, and their hands are blue;

And they went to sea in a sieve.

EDWARD LEAR, The Jumbies.

¹ Said Opie Read to E. P. Roe,
"How do you like Gaboriau?"

"I like him very much indeed,"

Said E. P. Roe to Opie Read.

JULIAN STREET and JAMES MONTGOMERY

FLAGG, Read and Roe.

² He killed the noble Mudjokivis.

With the skin he made him mittens,

Made them with the fur side inside,

Made them with the skin side outside,

He, to get the warm side inside,

Put the inside skin side outside;

He, to get the cold side outside,

Put the warm side fur side inside.

That's why he put the fur side inside,

Why he put the skin side outside,

Why he turned them inside outside.

GEORGE A. STRONG, The Song of Milkanwatha.

From the Squirrel skin Marcosses

Made some mittens for our hero.

Mittens with the fur-side inside,

With the fur-side next his fingers

So's to keep the hand warm inside.

GEORGE A. STRONG, The Song of Milkanwatha.

When Bryan O'Lyinn had no shirt to put on,

He took him a sheep skin to make him a' one.

"With the skinny side out, and the woolly side in,

'Twill be warm and convenient," said Bryan

O'Lyinn.

UNKNOWN, Bryan O'Lyinn.

⁸ One, whom we see not, is; and one, who is not, we see;

Fiddle, we know, is diddle; and diddle, we take it, is det.

SWINBURNE, The Higher Pantheism in a Nutshell.

⁴ There were three sailors of Bristol City

Who took a boat and went to sea.

But first with beef and captain's biscuits

And pickled pork they loaded she.

There was gorging Jack and guzzling Jimmy,

And the youngest he was little Billet.

Now when they got as far as the Equator

They'd nothing left but one split pea.

THACKERAY, Little Billet.

⁵ Mr. Finney had a turnip

And it grew behind the barn;

And it grew and it grew,

And that turnip did no harm.

UNKNOWN, Mr. Finney's Turnip. Has been attributed to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, who denied its authorship in a letter

⁶ to George Anderson, 11 July, 1881.

If all the world were paper

And all the sea were ink,

If all the trees were bread and cheese,

How should we do for drink?

NOSE

¹ His snore is louder than his war-cry. (Melior is ἡχώροντος is ἀλαλάσσοντος.)

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus
Cato. Ch. ix, sec. 5.)

There, too, full many an Aldermanic nose,
Roll'd its loud diapason after dinner.

R. H. BARNHAM, The Ghost.

The tuneful serenade of that wakeful nightingate, his nose.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1.

On deck beneath the awning,
I dozing lay and yawning;
It was the grey of dawning,
Ere yet the Sun arose;
And above the funnel's roaring,
And the fitful wind's deploring,
I heard the cabin snoring
With universal nose.

TRACKERAY, The White Squall.

There ain't no way to find out why a snorer can't hear himself snore.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer Abroad. Ch. 10.

² Jolly nose! there are fools who say drink hurts the sight,

Such dullards know nothing about it;
'Tis better, with wine, to extinguish the light,
Than live always in darkness without it.

OLIVIER BASSELINE, Vaux-de-vire. Quoted by Ainsworth in Jack Sheppard. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

Nose, nose, jolly red nose,
And who gave thee this jolly red nose?
Nutmegs and Ginger, Cinnamon and Cloves,
And they gave me this jolly red nose.

THOMAS RAVENSCROFT, Deuteronomia, Song No.

nose on his sleeve.

BION. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec.
46.)

Sit down now and pray forsooth that the mucus in your nose may not run! Nay, rather wipe your nose and do not blame God!

EPICURETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 16, sec. 13.

And you'd improve its shape, God wot,
And look less like a pink pug pup
If you would wipe it down, and not
Up.

¹⁴ Another tumble! That's his precious nose!
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to My Infant Son.

JAMES HOWELL, Farraine Travell, p. 44.

Paying through the nose.

The origin of this phrase, meaning to pay an excessive price or at an exorbitant rate, is uncertain. It has been suggested that there is some connection with the slang word "rhino" and the Greek rhines, the nostrils. Grimm (Deutsche Rechts Alerthümer) states that Odin had a poll-tax in Sweden called a nose tax, because it was a penny per nose. The same legend is told of Ireland.

² Therefore will I put my hook in thy nose
... and will turn thee back.
Old Testament: Isaiah xxxvii, 29.

Will as tenderly be led by the nose As asses are.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 407.

³ She's an angel in a frock,
With a fascinating cock
To her nose.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, My Mistress's Boots.

And lightly was her slender nose
Tip-tilled like the petal of a flower.
TENNYSON, Garth and Lynette, l. 577.

I like the saucy retromsé,
Admire the Roman, love the Greek;
But hers is none of these—it's a Beak.

EDWIN MEADE ROBINSON, A Disagreeable Feature.

⁴ Your nose betrays what porridge you love.
THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde, 91. (1590)

⁵ It is not given to everyone to have a nose,
i. e., skill in investigating matters. (Non cuicunque datum est habere nasum.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, ep. 42, l. 18.

Now Bill—

Was a regular trump—did not like to turn nose.
R. H. BARHAM, Patty Morgan. Meaning to turn informer.

⁶ So scented the grim feature, and upturn'd
His nostril wide into the murky air.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 279.

⁷ Give me a man with a good allowance of nose. . . . When I want any good head-work done, I always choose a man, if suitable otherwise, with a long nose.

carbuncles, sapphires.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 137.

¹¹ Twixt his finger and his thumb he held
A pouncet-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose and took 't away again;
Who therewith angry, when it next came there,

Took it in snuff.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 37.

You abuse snuff! Perhaps it is the final cause of the human nose.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 4 Jan., 1833.

¹² His nose was as sharp as a pen.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 17.

His lips blows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plue and sometimes red.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 109.

¹³ Thou canst tell why one's nose stands 't the middle on's face? . . . Why, to keep one's eyes of either side.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 5, l. 19.

¹⁴ Take my advice and seek no further than the end of your nose. You will always know that there is something beyond that; and in that knowledge you will be hopeful and happy.

I.—Painting: Definitions

Painting is the intermediate somewhat between a thought and a thing.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk. 30 Aug., 1827.

So, if a great painter with questions you push,
"What's the first part of painting?" he'll say, "A paint-brush."

"And what is the second?" with most modest blush, He'll smile like a cherub, and say, "A paint-brush."

"And what is the third?" he'll bow with a rush,
With a leer in his eye, he'll reply, "A paint-brush."

PAN

¹⁴ And that dismal cry rose slowly
And sank slowly through the air,

Full of spirit's melancholy

And eternity's despair!

And they heard the words it said—

"Pan is dead!—Great Pan is dead—

Pan, Pan is dead."

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 26.

By the love, He stood alone in,
His sole Godhead rose complete,
And the false gods fell down moaning
Each from off his golden seat;
All the false gods with a cry
Rendered up their deity—

Pan, Pan was dead.

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 28.

And when, at length, "Great Pan is dead!" uprose the loud and dolorous cry,
A glamour wither'd on the ground, a splendour faded in the sky.

3 Great Pan is dead. (Πάν ὁ μέγας τέθνηκε.)

PLUTARCH, De Defectu Oraculorum. Sec. xvii.
Plutarch is relating the legend that at the hour of the Saviour's agony, a cry of "Great Pan is dead!" swept across the waves in the hearing of certain mariners, and the oracles were silent.

A ship laden with passengers drove with the tide near the Isles of Paxi, when a loud voice was heard calling unto one Thanus. The voice then said aloud to him, "When you are arrived at Palados, take care to make it known that the great god Pan is dead."

PLUTARCH, Isis and Osiris.

Suddenly there came gasping towards them a pale Jew dripping with blood, a crown of thorns on his head, bearing a great cross of wood on his shoulder, and he cast the cross on the high table of the gods, so that the golden goblets trembled and fell, and the gods grew dumb and pale, and ever paler, till they melted in utter mist.

HAMN, Reisebilder: City of Lucca. Ch. 6.

PANSY

4 Of all the bonny buds that blow
In bright or cloudy weather,
Of all the flowers that come and go
The whole twelve months together,

PANSY

This little purple pansy brings
Thoughts of the sweetest, saddest things.

That, like thy petals, trembles in possession,
And scatters on the air.

BRET HARTE, The Mountain Heart's-Ease.

8 Heart's ease! one could look for half a day
Upon this flower, and shape in fancy out
Full twenty different tales of love and sorrow,
That gave this gentle name.

MARY HOWITT, Heart's Ease.

9 There is a flower I wish to wear,
But not until first worn by you. . . .

Heart's ease . . . of all earth's flowers most rare;

Bring it; and bring enough for two.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Heart's-Ease.

10 The pansy freak'd with jet.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 144.

I send thee pansies while the year is young,
Yellow as sunshine, purple as the night;

Flowers of remembrance, ever fondly sung
By all the chiefest of the Sons of Light;

And if in recollection lives regret
For wasted days and dreams that were not true,

I tell thee that the "pansy freak'd with jet"

Is still the heart's ease that the poets knew.

Take the sweetness of a gift unsought,
And for the pansies send me back a thought.

SARAH DOUDNEY, Pansies.

11 The beauteous pansies rise
In purple, gold, and blue,

With tints of rainbow hue

Mocking the sunset skies.

THOMAS J. OUSLEY, Angel of the Flowers.

12 Heart's ease or pansy, pleasure or thought,
Which would the picture give us of these?
Surely the heart that conceived it sought

Heart's ease.

¹⁸ Some weep because they part,
And languish broken-hearted,
And others—O my heart!—
Because they never parted.

THOMAS BAILLY ALDRICE, The Difference.

Good-night! I have to say good-night
To such a host of peerless things!

Good-night unto the slender hand
All queenly with its weight of rings;
Good-night to fond uplifted eyes,
Good-night to chestnut braids of hair,
Good-night unto the perfect mouth,
And all the sweetness nestled there—
The snowy hand detains me; then
I have to say, Good-night again.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Palabras Carinosas.

Good-night! good-night! as we so oft have said
Beneath this roof at midnight, in the days
That are no more, and shall no more return.
Thou hast but taken thy lamp and gone to bed;
I stay a little longer, as one stays
To cover up the embers that still burn.

LONGFELLOW, Three Friends of Mine. Pt. iv.

Now in the summit of love's topmost peak
Kiss and we part; no farther can we go.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Sonnet: Love's Wisdom.

To meet, to know, to love—and then to part,
Is the sad tale of many a human heart.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Couplet Written in a Volume of Poems.

Since there's no help, come, let us kiss and part;
Nay, I have done, you get no more of me;
And I am glad, yea, glad with all my heart,
That thus so cleanly I myself can free.
Shake hands for ever, cancel all our vows,
And when we meet at any time again,
Be it not seen in either of our brows
That we one jot of former love retain.
Now at the last gasp of Love's latest breath,
When, his pulse failing, Passion speechless lies,
When Faith is kneeling by his bed of death,
And Innocence is closing up his eyes:
Now, if thou wouldst, when all have given him
over,

From death to life thou might'st him yet recover.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Idea. Sonnet lxi.

And must we part?

Well—if we must, we must—and in that case
The less said the better.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act ii, sc. 2.

Heart to heart
And lips to lips! Yet once more, ere we part,
Clasp me and make me thine, as mine thou art!

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Gondola.

We meet to part; yet asks my sprite, Part we to meet? Ah! is it so?

SM. RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. i, st.
12.

When we two parted In silence and tears,
Half broken-hearted To sever for years.
BYRON, When We Two Parted.

Such partings break the heart they fondly hope to heal.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto i, st. 10.

Good-bye, Dolly, I must leave you,
Though it breaks my heart to go;

Something tells me I am needed

At the front to fight the foe.

WILL D. COBB, Good-Bye, Dolly Gray. (1900)

Kathleen Mavourneen, the grey dawn is breaking,

The horn of the hunter is heard on the hill;
The lark from her light wing the bright dew is shaking—

Kathleen Mavourneen! what, slumbering
still?

Oh, hast thou forgotten how soon we must sever?

Oh, hast thou forgotten this day we must part?

It may be for years, and it may be for ever!

Oh, why art thou silent, thou voice of my heart?

LOUISA MACARTNEY CRAWFORD, Kathleen Mavourneen. "Kathleen Mavourneen" was "Big Tim" Sullivan's pseudonym for a promisory note, the reference being to the line, "It may be for years, and it may be for ever."

Parting is all we know of heaven,
And all we need of hell.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 96.

One kind kiss before we part,

Drop a tear and bid adieu:

Though we sever, my fond heart

Till we meet shall pant for you.

ROBERT DONSLY, The Parting Kiss.

Only in the agony of parting do we look into the depths of love.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 44.

In every parting there is an image of death.

GEORGE ELIOT, Scenes of Clerical Life: Amos Barton. Ch. 10. A variation of the French proverb, "To part is to die a little." (Partir c'est mourir un peu.)

Excuse me, then! you know my heart;
But dearest friends, alas! must part.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 51.

But fate ordains that dearest friends must part.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 232.

"Adieu," she cried, and waved her lily hand,

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

So sweetly she bade me adieu,

I thought that she bade me return.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, A Pastoral Ballad. Pt. i.

I now bid you a welcome adoo.

ARTEMUS WARD, The Shakers.

The day goes by like a shadow o'er the heart,
With sorrow where all was delight:
The time has come when the darkies have to
part,

Then my old Kentucky Home, good-night!
STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, *My Old Kentucky
Home*.

¹ The day is gone, and all its sweets are gone!
Sweet voice, sweet lips, soft hand, and softer
breast.

KEATS, Sonnet: The Day is Gone. "

² Say "au revoir" but not "good-bye,"
Though past is dead, Love cannot die.

HARRY KENNEDY, *Say "Au Revoir" but Not
"Good-bye."* (1893) Sung at the author's grave a few years later by Helen Mora, the great female baritone, whom it had made famous.

³ Thou art gone from my gaze like a beautiful dream.

GEORGE LINTLEY, Thou Art Gone.

⁴ They who go
Feel not the pain of parting; it is they
Who stay behind that suffer.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo: Pt. i, Prologue.

The one who goes is happier
Than those he leaves behind.

Now a' is done that men can do,
And a' is done in vain;
My love and native land, farewell,
For I maun cross the main,
BURNS, The Farewell.

And soon, too soon, we part with pain,
To sail o'er silent seas again.

THOMAS MOORE, The Meeting of the Ships.

⁶ Honey Boy, I hate to see you leaving;
Honey Boy, you know my heart is grieving.
JACK NORWORTH, Honey Boy. (1907)

⁷ If we must part forever,
Give me but one kind word to think upon,
And please myself withal, whilst my heart's breaking.

THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act v, sc. 2.

⁸ Some jealousy of someone's heir,
Some hopes of dying broken-hearted,
A miniature, a lock of hair,
The usual vows—and then we parted.
W. M. FRAED, The Belle of the Ball. St. 12.

⁹ In vain you tell your parting lover
You wish fair winds may wait him over.
Alas! what winds can happy prove,
That bear me far from what I love?
MATTHEW PRIOR, A Song.

¹⁰ He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven,

And fire us hence like foxes.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 22.

¹¹ 'Tis almost morning; I would have thee gone:
And yet no further than a wanton's bird;

Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc.
2, l. 177.

Good night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow,

That I shall say good night till it be morrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc.
2, l. 185.

Eyes, look your last!

Arms, take your last embrace!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc.
3, l. 112.

¹² I remember the way we parted,
The day and the way we met;
You hoped we were both broken-hearted,
And knew we should both forget.
SWINBURNE, An Interlude.

We twain shall not remeasure
The ways that left us twain;
Nor crush the lees of pleasure
From sanguine grapes of pain.
A. C. SWINBURNE, Rococo.

¹³ She went her unremembering way,
She went and left in me
The pang of all the partings gone,
And partings yet to be.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Daisy. St. 12.

¹⁴ Shall I bid her go? what and if I do?
Shall I bid her go and spare not?
Oh no, no, no! I dare not.

UNKNOWN, Corydon's Farewell to Phillis.
(PERCY, Reliques. Bk. ii, No. 10.)

Sir Toby: Shall I bid him go?

Clown: What an if you do?

Sir Toby: Shall I bid him go and spare not?

Clown: O no, no, no, no, you dare not.

¹⁶ Consult the dead upon things that were,
But the living only on things that are.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. I.

¹⁷ O there are Voices of the Past,
Links of a broken chain,
Wings that can bear me back to Times
Which cannot come again;
Yet God forbid that I should lose
The echoes that remain!
ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Voices of the Past.

¹⁸ Why is it that the meed of changeless fame
Is grudged the present, granted to the past?
JAMES EDWIN ROGERS, To George Waring.

¹ Past and to come, seems best; things present, worst.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 108.

² Thou who stealest fire
From the fountains of the past,
To glorify the present.

TENNYSON, Ode to Memory.

³ He praises all thing that is gone;
Of present thing he praises none.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 3577. (c. 1375)

He praised the present and abused the past,
Reversing the good custom of old days.

V—Past and Future

⁴ Making all futures fruits of all the pasts.

EDWIN ARNOLD, Light of Asia. Bk. v, l. 432.

What is past is past. There is a future left to all men, who have the virtue to repent and the energy to atone.

BULWER-LYTTON, Lady of Lyons. Act iv, sc. 1.

⁵ You can never plan the future by the past.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to a Member of the Notional Assembly.

The best prophet of the future is the past.

BYRON, Letter, 28 Jan., 1821.

⁶ I watch the wheels of Nature's mazy plan,
And learn the future by the past of man.

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 319.

Study the past, if you would divine the future.

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

The best way to suppose what may come is to remember what is past.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 249.

I know of no way of judging the future but by the past.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, in Virginia Convention, March, 1775.

⁷ Indemnity for the past and security for the future.

CHARLES JAMES FOX, Letter to Hon. T. Maitland. (RUSSELL, Memorials of Fox, iii, 345.)

⁸ The Past is like a funeral gone by,
The Future comes like an unwelcome guest.

EDMUND GOSSE, Sonnet: May-Day.

⁹ She knew the future, for the past she knew.

JOHN LANGEHORNE, The Country Justice, l. 214.

¹⁰ Look not mournfully into the Past. It comes not back again. Wisely improve the Present.
It is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy Future, without fear, and with a manly heart.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion: Bk. i, Motto.

¹¹ For hope shall brighten days to come,
And memory gild the past!

THOMAS MOORE, Song.

¹² The future is only the past again, entered through another gate.

PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act iv.

¹³ We will not anticipate the past; so mind, young people,—our retrospection will be all to the future.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iv, sc. 2.

¹⁴ Man hath a weary pilgrimage
As through the world he wends,

On every stage, from youth to age,

Still discontent attends;

With heaviness he casts his eye

Upon the road before,

And still remembers with a sigh

The days that are no more.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Remembrance.

¹⁵ The past unsighed for, and the future sure.

WORDSWORTH, Ladonia, l. 100.

I've got thee buzzing in my brain,

And cannot turn thee out again.

ELIZA COOK, St. Patrick's Day.

On the eighth day of March it was, some people say,
That Saint Patrick at midnight he first saw
the day,

While others declare 'twas the ninth he was born . . .

Till Father Mulcahy, who showed them their sins,

Said, "No one could have two birthdays, but a twins."

Says he, "Boys, don't be fightin' for eight or for nine,

Don't be always dividin', but sometimes combine;

Combine eight and nine, and seventeen is the mark,

So let that be his birthday." "Amen!" says the clerk.

I—Patriotism: Definitions

Patriotism is a lively sense of collective responsibility. Nationalism is a silly cock crowing on its own dunghill.

RICHARD ALDRICH, Colonel's Daughter, p. 49.

Patriotism has its roots deep in the instincts and the affections. Love of country is the expansion of filial love.

D. D. FIELD, Speeches: A Memorial Address.

There is no limit to the noble aspirations which the words "my country" may evoke.

DEAN W. R. LUCE, (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Luce. No. 154.)

Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

Patriotism is a kind of religion; it is the egg from which wars are hatched.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, My Uncle Sostrhenes.

Patriotism is often an arbitrary veneration of real estate above principles.

G. J. NATHAN, Testament of a Critic, p. 16.

True patriotism is of no party.

SMOLLETT, The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 9. See also POLITICS AND PARTY.

There are no points of the compass on the chart of true patriotism.

ROBERT C. WINTERBORN, Letter to Boston Commercial Club. 12 June, 1879.

Patriotism knows neither latitude nor longitude.
It is not climatic.

E. A. STOKES, Political Oratory. Ch. 2.

To make us love our country, our country ought to be lovely.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

He loves his country best who strives to make it best.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Decoration Day Oration, 1882.

Best they honour thee

Who honour in thee only what is best.

WILLIAM WATSON, The True Patriotism.

He who loves not his country, can love nothing.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act iii, sc. 1.

He, with liberal and enlarged mind,

Who loves his country, cannot hate mankind.

² Nothing is more shameful than ignorance of one's Fatherland. (Nihil magis pudendum quam ignarum esse sue Patriæ.)

GABRIEL HARVEY, Note, written in Humphrey Lloyd's Breviary of Britain.

³ We don't want to fight,

But, by Jingo, if we do,

We've got the ships, we've got the men,
We've got the money too.

G. W. HUNT, We Don't Want to Fight. An English music hall song of 1878, when the country was on the verge of intervening in the Russo-Turkish war on behalf of the Turks. The Russophobes became known as Jingoists, and the term came to be applied generally to super-patriots, itching to go to war on the slightest provocation.

By the living Jingo.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 10.

⁴ Indeed, I tremble for my country when I reflect that God is just.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Notes on Virginia: Manifesters.

⁵ That man is little to be envied, whose patriotism would not gain force upon the plain of Marathon, or whose piety would not grow warmer among the ruins of Iona.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, A Journey to the Western Islands: Inch Kenneth.

⁶ Why should patriotism and pessimism be identical? Hope is the mainspring of patriotism.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Speech, House of Commons, Oct., 1919.

⁷ And thus we see on either hand

We name our blessings whence they've sprung;

We call our country Father Land,

We call our language Mother Tongue.

SAMUEL LOVER, Father Land and Mother Tongue.

⁸ We find them cracking up the country they belong to.

JAMES PATRICK, By Proxy. Ch. 1.

⁹ I am already married to my country.

WILLIAM PITT, EARL OF CHATHAM, when Horace Walpole tried to arrange a marriage between him and Mademoiselle Necker, afterwards Madame de Staël. (CHICKEN, Memoirs, II, 340.)

He married public virtue in his early days, but seemed forever afterwards to be quarrelling with his wife.

ROBERT HALL, of Bishop Watson. (GREGORY, Life.)

¹⁰ Man was not born for himself alone, but for his country.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. II, No. 11.

Our land is the dearer for our sacrifices. The blood of our martyrs sanctifies and enriches it. Their spirit passes into thousands of hearts. How costly is the progress of the race. It is only by the giving of life that we can have life.

REV. E. J. YOUNG, Lesson of the Hour.
(Monthly Religious Mag., May, 1865.)

1 What pity is it
That we can die but once to serve our country!
ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4.

I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country.

NATHAN HALE, Last Words, 22 Sept., 1776.
(STEWART, Life of Nathan Hale. Ch. 7.)

2 For body-killing tyrants cannot kill
The public soul—the hereditary will
That, downward as from sire to son it goes,
By shifting bosoms more intensely glows:
Its heirloom is the heart, and slaughtered men
Fight fiercer in their orphans o'er again.

ch. 15, sec. 33.

7 And they who for their country die
Shall fill an honored grave,
For glory lights the soldier's tomb,
And beauty weeps the brave.

J. R. DRAKE, To the Defenders of New Orleans.

8 I gave my life for freedom—This I know;
For those who bade me fight had told me so.
W. N. EWER, Five Souls.

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 51.

12 And how can man die better
Than facing fearful odds,
For the ashes of his fathers
And the temples of his gods?
MACAULAY, Horatius. St. 27.

13 'Twere sweet to sink in death for Truth and Freedom!

Yes, who would hesitate, for who could bear
The living degradation we may know
If we do dread death for a sacred cause?

TERENCE MCSWINEY, Lines written when a boy. (Nation, 3 Nov., 1920.) McSwiney was Lord Mayor of Cork in 1920, was arrested by the British for treason in August of that year and died after a long hunger strike.

14 Far dearer, the grave or the prison,
Illumed by one patriot name,
Than the trophies of all who have risen
On Liberty's ruins to fame.
THOMAS MOORE, Forget Not the Field.

15 A man who is good enough to shed his blood for his country is good enough to be given a square deal afterwards.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Life of Benton.

16 Had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike and none less dear than thine and my good Marcus, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 3, l. 24.

17 If it be the pleasure of heaven that my country shall require the poor offering of my life, the victim shall be ready at the appointed hour of sacrifice, come when that hour may.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Supposed Speech of John Adams.

18 They went where duty seemed to call,
They scarcely asked the reason why;
They only knew they could but die,

And death was not the worst of all!

J. G. WHITTIER, Lexington.

There is one certain means by which I can be sure never to see my country's ruin: I will die in the last ditch.

WILLIAM III, PRINCE OF ORANGE. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 65.)

And shall Trelawney die, and shall Trelawney die?

Then thirty thousand Cornish boys will know the reason why.

UNKNOWN. Old ballad popular throughout Cornwall, referring to the imprisonment of the seven Bishops by James II, in 1688, Trelawney being Bishop of Bristol. (MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 8.)

And have they fixed the where, and when?

And shall Trelawney die?

Here's thirty thousand Cornish men

Will know the reason why!

ROBERT STEPHEN HAWKER, Song of the Western Men. Mr. Hawker wrote this song in 1825, taking the refrain from the old ballad referred to above. Davies Gilbert, President of the Royal Society, reprinted it as an old one, and Sir Walter Scott was deceived into thinking it "the solitary people's song of the seventeenth century."

V—Patriotism: Its Faults

Patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness towards anyone.

EDITH CAVELL, Conversation with the Rev. Mr. Gahan, 11 Oct., 1915, the night before her execution at Brussels by the Germans.

Such is the patriot's boast, where'er we roam,
His first, best country, ever is at home.
And yet, perhaps, if countries we compare,
And estimate the blessings which they share,
Though patriots flatter, still shall wisdom find
An equal portion dealt to all mankind.

When a nation is filled with strife then do patriots flourish.

LAD-REZZ, The Simple Way. No. 18.

You'll never have a quiet world till you knock the patriotism out of the human race.

BERNARD SHAW, O'Flaherty V. C.

It would therefore seem obvious that patriotism as a feeling is a bad and harmful feeling, and as a doctrine is a stupid doctrine. For it is clear that if each people and each State considers itself the best of peoples and States, they all dwell in a gross and harmful delusion.

TOLSTOY, Patriotism and Government.

A great and lasting war can never be supported on this principle [patriotism] alone. It must be aided by a prospect of interest, or some reward.

WASHINGTON, Letter to John Banister, Valley Forge, 21 April, 1778.

Patriotism has become a mere national self assertion, a sentimentality of flag-cheering with no constructive duties.

H. G. WELLS, The Future in America.

VI—Patriotism: Patriots

From distant climes, o'er wide-spread seas we come,

Though not with much éclat or beat of drum;
True patriots all; for be it understood

We left our country for our country's good.

GEORGE BARRINGTON (?), Prologue for the Opening of the Playhouse at Sydney, New South Wales, 16 Jan., 1796. Barrington, whose real name was Waldron, was transported to Botany Bay in 1790 for theft, and he and his fellow convicts acted in a production of Edward Young's tragedy, The Revenge, for which Barrington is said to have written the prologue. His authorship of the lines has been questioned. R. S. Lambert, in The Prince of Pickpockets, ch. 8, asserts that they were written by Henry Carter, "a gentleman of considerable literary attainments," who died in 1806.

And bold and hard adventures I undertake,
Leaving his country for his country's sake.

HENRY FITZGERFRET, Life and Death of Sir Francis Drake. St. 213. (1600)

'Twas for the good of my country that I should be abroad. Anything for the good of one's country—I'm a Roman for that.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 89. (1706)

These gentry are invariably saying all they can in dispraise of their native land; and it is my opinion, grounded upon experience, that an individual who is capable of such baseness would not hesitate at the perpetration of any villainy, for next to the love of God, the love of country is the best preventive of crime.

GEORGE BORNOW, The Bible in Spain. Ch. 4.

For what were all these country patriots born? To hunt, and vote, and raise the price of corn?

BYRON, The Age of Bronze. St. 14.

A steady patriot of the world alone,
The friend of every country—but his own.

GEORGE CARLINO, The New Morality.

Patriots are grown too shrewd to be sincere,

And we too wise to trust them.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 495.

For when was public virtue to be found

When private was not? Can he love the whole

Who loves no part? He be a nation's friend

Who is, in truth, the friend of no man there?

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 502.

Patriots have toil'd, and in their country's cause

Bled nobly; and their deeds, as they deserve,
Receive proud recompense.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 704.

Patriots in peace, assert the people's right;
With noble stubbornness resisting might.

DAVIDEN, Epistles: To John Dryden of Chester- ton, l. 184.

Then, seiz'd with fear, yet still affecting fame,
Usurped a patriot's all-atoning name.

DAVIDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. I, l. 178.

The flaming patriot, who so lately scorched us in the meridian, sinks temperately to the west, and is hardly felt as he descends.

JUNIUS, Letters. Letter 54, 15 Aug., 1771.

Brave men and worthy patriots, dear to God,
and famous to all ages.

MILTON, Tractate of Education.

Who stabs at this my heart, stabs at a kingdom;

These veins are rivers, and these arteries
Are very roads; this body is your country.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Herod. Act II.

I never was a good son or a good brother or a good patriot in the sense of thinking that my mother and my sister and my native country were better than other people's, because I happened to belong to them.

BERNARD SHAW, The Irrational Knot. Ch. 6.

None loves his king and country better,
Yet none was ever less their debtor.

SWIFT, A Pastoral Dialogue.

The ever lustrous name of patriot
To no man be denied because he saw
Wherein his country's wholeness lay the flaw,
Where, on her whiteness, the unseemly blot.

WILLIAM WATSON, Sonnet.

If I ever love another country, damn ME!

"O dear Mother Outline! of wisdom most sage,

What's the first part of painting?" She said.
"Patronage."

PATRONAGE

"And what is the second, to please and engage?"

She frowned like a fury, and said: "Patronage."

"And what is the third?" She put off old age,
And smil'd like a siren, and said: "Patronage."

WILLIAM BLAKE, On Art and Artists. Pt. IV.

The mud of English patronage

Grows round his feet, and keeps him down.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Edward Crowhurst.

But now for a Patron, whose name and whose glory

At once may illustrate and honour my story.

BURNS, To the Hon. C. J. Fox.

And thou shalt prove how salt a savor hath
The bread of others, and how hard the path
To climb and to descend the stranger's stairs!

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xvii, l. 58.

Is not a Patron, my Lord, one who looks with unconcern on a man struggling for life in the water, and, when he has reached ground, encumbers him with help?

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to the Earl of Chesterfield, 7 Feb., 1755. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.) Johnson's explanation to Boswell of the letter was: "Sir, after making great professions, he had, for many years, taken no notice of me; but when my Dictionary was coming out, he fell a scribbling in The World about it. Upon which, I wrote him a letter expressed in civil terms, but such as might shew him that I did not mind what he said or wrote, and that I had done with
him."

Patron: Commonly a wretch who supports with insolence, and is paid with flattery.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary of the English Language.

Mæcenās, sprung from royal stock, my bulwark and my glory dearly cherished. (Mæce-

2 My soul's earth's god, and body's fostering patron.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 222.

3 Getting Patronage is the whole art of life. A man cannot have a career without it.

BERNARD SHAW, Captain Brassbound's Conversion. Act iii.

4 Refuse to endure the haughty insolence [of patrons]. (Mitte superba pati fastidia.)

UNKNOWN. An adaptation of Vergil's "superba pati fastidia." (Eclogues, ii, 15.)

PAYMENT

5 Alas! how deeply painful is all payment! . . . They hate a murderer much less than a claimant. . . .

Kill a man's family, and he may brook it—But keep your hands out of his breeches' pocket.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 79.

While punctual beaux reward the grateful notes, And pay for poems—when they pay for coats.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 797.

6 What you will have, quoth God, pay for it and take it.

WOODROW WILSON, Address to U. S. Senate, 22 Jan., 1917.

Open covenants of peace openly arrived at. . . Absolute freedom of navigation upon the seas outside territorial waters alike in peace and in war. . . The removal, so far as possible, of all economic barriers and the establishment of an equality of trade conditions among all them. . . Adequate guarantees given and taken that national armaments will be reduced to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety.

WOODROW WILSON, First four of Fourteen Points.

III—Peace with Honor

¹ Lord Salisbury and myself have brought you back peace—but a peace, I hope, with honour.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, after Berlin Congress, 16 July, 1878.

² With peace and honour I am willing to spare anything so as to keep all ends together.
SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 25 May, 1663.

³ If peace cannot be maintained with honour, it is no longer peace.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL, Speech, at Greenock, Sept., 1853.

⁴ That it shall hold companionship in peace With honour, as in war.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 49.

We have made peace

With no less honour to the Antiates

Than shame to the Romans.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 6, l. 79.

⁵ Not thus doth Peace return!
A blessed visitant she comes;
Honour in his right hand
Doth lead her like a bride.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Carmina Aulica. Sec. 5.

⁶ Peace with honor.

THEOBALD, COUNT OF CHAMPAIGNE, Letter to Louis the Great. c. 1125. (WALTER MAP, De Nugis Curialium, p. 220); SIR KENTZM DUNY, Letter to Lord Bristol, 27 May, 1625.

He had rather spend £10,000 on Embassies to keep or procure peace with dishonour, than £10,000 on an army that would have forced peace with honour.

SIR ANTHONY WELDON, The Court and Character of King James, p. 185. (1650)

IV—Peace: World Peace

⁷ To make peace in Europe possible, the last representative of the pre-war generation must die and take his pre-war mentality into the grave with him.

EDUARD BENEŠ, Interview, Dec., 1929.

⁸ As I read this to-day what a change! The world convulsed by war as never before. Men slaying each other like wild beasts.

ANDREW CARMICHAEL, Autobiography. The abrupt close of the manuscript.

⁹ War will never yield but to the principles of universal justice and love, and these have no sure root but in the religion of Jesus Christ.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Lectures on War. Peace cannot be kept by force. It can only be achieved by understanding.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Notes on Pacifism.

¹⁰ An end to these bloated armaments.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, advocating disarmament, 1862. See also under PREPAREDNESS.

¹¹ Instead of by battles and Oecumenical Councils, the rival portions of humanity will one day dispute each other's excellence in the manufacture of little cakes.

FOURIER. (EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.)

¹² The only foes that threaten America are the enemies at home, and these are ignorance, superstition and incompetence.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xx, p. 36.

¹³ The closeness of their [the nations'] intercourse will assuredly render war as absurd and impossible by-and-by, as it would be for Manchester to fight with Birmingham, or Holborn Hill with the Strand.

LEIGH HUNT, Poems: Preface.

¹⁴ They shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

Old Testament: Isaiah, li, 4; Joel, iii, 10; Micah, iv, 3.

The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xi, 6.

¹⁵ An association of men who will not quarrel with one another is a thing which never yet existed, from the greatest confederacy of nations down to a town-meeting or a vestry.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Taylor, 1798.

You have not been mistaken in supposing my views and feeling to be in favor of the abolition of war. . . . I hope it is practicable, by improving the mind and morals of society, to lessen the disposition to war; but of its abolition I despair.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xviii, p. 298.

¹⁶ An angel with a trumpet said,
"Forevermore, forevermore,
The reign of violence is o'er!"

LONGFELLOW, The Occultation of Orion. St. 6.

Were half the power that fills the world with terror,

Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,

Given to redeem the human mind from error,

There were no need of arsenals and forts.
H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Arsenal at Springfield.

Peace! and no longer from its brazen portals
The blast of War's great organ shakes the skies!

But beautiful as songs of the immortals,
The holy melodies of love arise.
LONGFELLOW, The Arsenal at Springfield.

1 Buried was the bloody hatchet;
Buried was the dreadful war-club;
Buried were all warlike weapons,
And the war-cry was forgotten.
Then was peace among the nations.

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. xiii, l. 7.

2 War in men's eyes shall be
A monster of iniquity
In the good time coming.
Nations shall not quarrel then,
To prove which is the stronger;
Nor slaughter men for glory's sake;—
Wait a little longer.

CHARLES MACKAY, The Good Time Coming.

3 No war, or battle's sound
Was heard the world around;
The idle spear and shield were high up hung.
MILTON, Hymn on the Morning of Christ's Nativity, l. 53.

4 To discover a system for the avoidance of war is a vital need of our civilization; but no such system has a chance while men are so unhappy that mutual extermination seems to them less dreadful than continued endurance of the light of day.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 15.

5 For lo! the days are hastening on,
By prophet-bards foretold,
When with the ever-circling years,
Comes round the age of gold;
When Peace shall over all the earth
Its ancient splendors fling
And the whole world send back the song
Which now the angels sing.
EDMUND HAMILTON SPENS, The Angels' Song.

Can it, till this outworn earth be dead as yon dead world the moon?

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l.
173.

11 The League of Nations is a declaration of love without the promise of marriage.

ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ. (So Say the Wise, p.
167.)

'Tis startin' a polis foorce to prevint war. . .
How'll they be ar-rmed? What a foolish question. They'll be ar-rmed with love, if coorse.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, On Making a Will.
Referring to W. J. Bryan's speech on League of Nations, 1920.

12 Beautiful that war and all its deeds of carnage, must in time be utterly lost;
That the hands of the sisters Death and Night incessantly softly wash again and ever again, this soiled world.

WALT WHITMAN, Drum-Taps: Reconciliation.

13 When Earth, as if on evil dreams,
Looks back upon her wars,
And the white light of Christ outstreams
From the red disk of Mars,

His fame who led the stormy van
Of battle well may cease;
But never that which crowns the man
Whose victory was Peace.

WHITTIER, William Francis Bartlett.

14 God for His service needeth not proud work of human skill;

They please Him best who labour most in peace to do His will.

WORDSWORTH, The Poet's Dream, l. 65.

15 The High Contracting Parties solemnly declare in the names of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war for the solution of international controversies; and renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another. The High Contracting Parties agree that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means.

V—Peace: Its Faults

1 And Peace it self is War in Masquerade.

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. 1, l. 752; pt. 2, l. 269.

2 My argument is that War makes rattling good history; but Peace is poor reading.

THOMAS HARDY, The Dynasts. Act II, sc. 5.

3 It is mutual cowardice that keeps us in peace. Were one-half of mankind brave, and one-half cowards, the brave would be always beating the cowards. Were all brave, they would lead a very uneasy life; all would be continually fighting; but being all cowards, we go on very well.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 28 April, 1778.)

4 Now we suffer the ills of a long peace; luxury, more cruel than warfare, has overshadowed us. (Nunc patimur longæ pacis mala; sævior armis Luxuria incubuit.)

10 War its thousands slays, Peace its ten thousands.

BELLY POSTRUS, Death, l. 178.

11 Plenty and peace breeds cowards: hardness ever

Of hardness is mother.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act III, sc. 6, l. 21.

12 In this weak piping time of peace.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act 1, sc. 1, l. 24.

13 Beware of the man who does not return your blow.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. There are pacifists in pleasure as well as pacifists in war. The latter are called cowards. The former are called leading moral citizens.

G. J. NATHAN, The World in Falseface.

14 Even war is better than a miserable peace. (Miseram pacem vel bello bene mutari.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. III, sec. 44.

Down with a patched-up peace, sow seeds of wicked war! (Disce compositam pacem, sere crimina belli.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vii, l. 339.

15 Why do they prate of the blessings of peace? we have made them a curse,

Pickpockets, each hand lusting for all that is not its own;

And lust of gain, in the spirit of Cain, is it better or worse

Than the heart of the citizen hissing in war on his own hearthstone?

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. 1, sec. 1, st. 6.

When a Mammonite mother kills her babe for a burial-fee,

And Timour-Mammon grins on a pile of children's bones,

Is it peace or war? better, war! loud war by land and by sea,

War with a thousand battles, and shaking a hundred thrones!

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. 1, sec. 1, st. 12.

16 Verily I do think

War is as hateful almost, and well-nigh

As ghastly, as this terrible Peace, whereby We halt forever on the crater's brink,

And feed the wind with phrases.

WILLIAM WATSON, Ver Tenebrosus. It was a President of the French Senate who spoke of "The pernicious poison of a premature peace."

Old Testament: Genesis, xliii, 23, etc. (Pax vobiscum.—Vulgate.)

The peace of God which passeth all understanding.

New Testament: Philippians, iv, 7.

When a man finds no peace within himself it is useless to seek it elsewhere. (Quand on ne trouve pas son repos en soi-même, il est inutile de le chercher ailleurs.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées, 571.

I shall not hold my little peace; for me
There is no peace but one.

ALICE MEYNELL, The Poet to the Birds.

I knew by the smoke, that so gracefully curl'd
Above the green elms, that a cottage was near,
And I said, "If there's peace to be found in
the world,

A heart that was humble might hope for
it here!"

THOMAS MOORE, Ballad Stanzas. Said to refer to the old Redfield farm at Batavia, N. Y., where the poet passed a night in 1804.

Joy is like restless day; but peace divine
Like quiet night;

Lead me, O Lord, till perfect day shall shine
Through Peace to Light.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Per Pacem ad Lucem.

But sometimes, through the Soul of Man,
Slow moving o'er his pain,
The moonlight of a perfect peace
Floods heart and brain.

WILLIAM SHARP, The White Peace.

We should have much peace if we would not busy ourselves with the sayings and doings of others.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. I, ch. 11.

Thy peace shall be in much patience.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. III, ch. 25.

To be glad of life because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars, to be satisfied with your possessions but not contented with yourself until you have made the best of them, to despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness and to fear nothing except cowardice, to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts, to covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners, to think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and every day of Christ, and to spend as much time as you can, with body and with spirit, in God's out-of-doors, these are little guide-posts on the footpath to peace.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Footpath to Peace.

Peace begins just where ambition ends.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 940.

PEACH

And the soft gold-down on her silken chin
Is like the under side of a ripe peach.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Polyphemus's Passion.

A little peach in the orchard grew,—
A little peach of emerald hue;
Warmed by the sun and wet by the dew,
It grew.

One day, passing that orchard through,
That little peach dawned on the view
Of Johnny Jones and his sister Sue—
Them two. . . .

Hard trials for them two,
Johnny Jones and his sister Sue,
And the peach of emerald hue,

That grew:

Listen to my tale of woe!

John took a bite and Sue took a chew,
And then the trouble began to brew,—
Trouble the doctor could n't subdue.

Too true!

Under the turf where the daisies grew
They planted John and his sister Sue,
And their little souls to the angels flew,—

Boo hoo!

EUGENE FIELD, The Little Peach.

The peach will have wine, and the fig water.

JOHN GRANO, Golden Aphrodisia. (1577)

An apple is an excellent thing—until you have tried a peach!

GEORGE DU MAURIER, Trelby, p. 256.

Give me women as soft, and as delicate, and as velvet as my peaches! . . . with peaches and women, it's only the side next the sun that's tempting.

OWDA, Straikmore.

As touching peaches in general, the very name in Latin, whereby they are called Persica, doth evidently show that they were brought out of Persia first.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xv, sec. 13.

Pill [peel] a fig for your friend, and a peach for your enemy.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. From the Italian,
"Al amico cura gli il fico, al inimico il persico."

The ripest peach is highest on the tree.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, The Ripest Peach.

Oh, Persica, Persica, pale and fair,
With a ripe blush on your cheek,
How pretty—how very pretty you are,
Until you begin to speak!

As for a heart and soul, my dear,
You have not enough to sin;
Outside so fair, like a peach you are,
With a stone for a heart within.

W. W. STORY, Persica.

PEACOCK

Like an imperial peacock stalk abroad
(That royal bird, whose tail's a diadem).

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vii, st. 74.

And stately peacocks with their splendid eyes.

THOMAS HOOD, Plea of the Midsummer Fairies.

Like a peacock whose eyes are inclin'd to his tail.

THOMAS HOOD, A Partisan Glance.

To Paradise, the Arabs say,
Satan could never find the way
Until the peacock led him in.

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, The Peacock.

And like a peacock sweep along his tail.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 6.

Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock,— a stride and a stand.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
3, l. 251.

Proud as peacocks.

SHERLOCKE, Hotcher of Heresies. (1365)

The pride of the peacock is the glory of God.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

"Fly pride," says the peacock.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 81.

And there they placed a peacock in his pride.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 329.

She is a peacock in everything but beauty.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1.

PEARL

If that a pearl may in a toad's head dwell,
And may be found too in an oyster shell.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book, l. 89.

Has a pearl less whiteness
Because of its birth?

THOMAS MOORE, Desmond's Song.

They [the Russians] came to the court balls dropping pearls and vermin.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 23.

Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 6.

Men should not put pearls white
To-fore rude swine.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 188.

Introducing a fine woman to you is casting pearls before swine.

BERNARD SHAW, How He Lied to Her Husband.

And the precious pearls ye strowen to hogs.

UNKNOWN. (WRIGHT, Political Poems, ii, 110.
1401)

One whose hand
Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away
Richer than all his tribe.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 346.

PEDANTRY

Pedantry consists in the use of words unsuitable to the time, place, and company.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 10.

He who is in some measure a pedant, though he may be wise, cannot be a very happy
man.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Round Table. Vol. ii, p. 78.

A profound man, who has become hollow.

VICTOR HUGO, Ninety-Three. Pt. ii, bk. iii, ch.

1. He was speaking of Sieyès, and echoing Talleyrand's epigram, also of Sieyès: Pro-fond, hem! vous voulez dire, peut-être, creux: Perhaps you mean hollow. Jean d'Alembert has already said of French philosophers: They believe themselves profound, while they are merely hollow.

Pedantry is the dotage of knowledge.

HOLBROOK JACKSON, Anatomy of Bibliomania,
p. 150.

1 An artist may visit a museum, but only a pedant can live there.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Life of Reason, iv, 129.

2 Bold in thy applause,
The Bard shall scorn pedantic laws.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto v, Introduction.

3 The vacant skull of a pedant generally furnishes out a throne and a temple for vanity.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Books and Writers.

4 Figures pedantical.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 408.

How fiery and forward our pedant is!

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, iii, 1, 48.

5 A reasoning, self-sufficing thing,
An intellectual All-in-all.

WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph, St. 8.

PELICAN

6 What, wouldst thou have me turn pelican, and feed thee out of my own vitals?

CONGREVE, Love for Love, Act ii, sc. 1.

7 By them there sat the loving pelican,
Whose young ones, poison'd by the serpent's sting,

With her own blood to life again doth bring.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Noah's Flood.

8 Like the kind, life-retiring pelican,
Repast them with my blood,

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act iv, sc. 5, l. 146.

That blood already, like the pelican,
Hast thou tapp'd out and drunkenly caroused.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, Act ii, sc. 1, l. 126.

9 A wonderful bird is the pelican!

His bill will hold more than his helican.

He can take in his beak

Food enough for a week

But I'm darned if I see how the helican.

DIXON L. MERRITT, The Pelican. One of Woodrow Wilson's favorite limericks.

II—Pen and Sword

3 Beneath the rule of men entirely great,
The pen is mightier than the sword.

BULWER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act ii, sc. 2.

4 From this it appears how much more cruel the pen may be than the sword. (Hinc quam sic calamus seivior ense, patet.)

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 4.

5 A sword less hurt does, than a pen.

WILLIAM KING, The Eagle and Robin, l. 82.

6 So much had the pen, under the king, the advantage over the sword. (Tant la plume a eu sous le roi d'avantage sur l'épée.)

SAINT-SIMON, Mémoires. Vol. iii, p. 517. (1702)

7 Thou canst hurt no man's fame with thy ill word;

Thy pen is full as harmless as thy sword.

SIR CARA SCROPE, On the Earl of Rochester.

8 Many wearing rapiers are afraid of goosequills.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 359.

9 Pens are most dangerous tools, more sharp
by odds

Than swords, and cut more keen than whips or rods.

11 To worship the people is to be worshipped.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum:
Pt. i, bk. 6, ch. 30, Popularitas.

12 All the rabble of the ship, hag, tag, and rag.

JOHN BAZZ, Vocabulary. (Harl. Miscel., vi, 459; 1553)

For all were there, tag and ragge, cut and long-tail.

SAMUEL HARNETT, *Declaration of Egregious
Popish Impostures*, 50. (1603)

Tag and rag, cut and long tail, everyone that can eat an egg.

JOHN CLARKE, Paramiologia, 236. (1639)

That rabble rout, tag rag and bobtail.

UNKNOWN, Just Defence of John Bastwick,
16. (1645)

The tag-rag people.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 263.

13 The public is poor.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1780. Often quoted, "The state is always poor."

14 Man has set man against man, Washed against Unwashed.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. ii, bk. 2,
ch. 4.

The great unwashed.

This phrase has been attributed to Henry
Peter Brougham and to Edmund Burke.
Sir Walter Scott is said to have applied it to the laboring class.

We begin to understand what is meant by the lowest classes, the great unwashed.

SYDNEY WATSON, Wops the Waif. Ch. 3.

15 The safety of the people shall be the highest law. (Salus populi suprema lex esto.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 8.

The safety of the State is the highest law. (Salus populi suprema lex.)

JUSTINIAN, Twelve Tables.

The noblest motive is the public good.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 200.

That grounded maxim,
So ripe and celebrated in the mouths
Of wisest men, that to the public good
Private respects must yield.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 865.

There is not any thing in the world more abused than this sentence, Salus populi suprema lex esto.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: People.

16 The dregs of the people. (Fæx populi.)

CICERO, Epistula ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. ii, epis. 9, sec. 5.

17 Public wrongs are but popular rights in embryo.

CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintille Juris.

18 Those three most intractable beasts, the owl, the serpent, and the people. (Thaui kai ōphēkōrē kai hēnag.)

DEMOSTHENES, referring to the Athenians.
(PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Sec. 26.)

19 I was told that the Privileged and the People farmed Two Nations.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. iv, ch. 4.

¹ If by the people you understand the multitude, the hoi polloi, 'tis no matter what they think; they are sometimes in the right, sometimes in the wrong; their judgment is a mere lottery.

DRYDEN, Essay on Dramatic Poetry.

The many; the multitude. (Οἱ πολλοί.)

UNKNOWN. A proverbial Greek phrase.

² He who serves the public is a poor animal. (Wer dem Publicum dient, ist ein armes Thier.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Reimen, iii.

³ I shall on all subjects have a policy to recommend, but none to enforce against the will of the people.

U. S. GRANT, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1869.

⁴ Knowing as "the man in the street" (as we call him at Newmarket) always does, the greatest secrets of kings, and being the confidant of their most hidden thoughts.

CHARLES FULKE GREVILLE, Memoirs, 22 March, 1830.

The man in the street does not know a star in the sky.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

⁵ When the people contend for their liberty, they seldom get anything by their victory but new masters.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 483.

⁶ The people cannot see, but they can feel.

JAMES HARRINGTON, Oceana, p. 483.

They who have put out the people's eyes, reproach them of their blindness.

JOHN MILTON, Works. Vol. I, p. 192.

⁷ To scorn the envious rabble. (Malignum Spernere vulgus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. II, ode 16, l. 39.

I hate the vulgar herd and hold it far. (Odi profanum vulgus et arceo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. III, ode 1, l. 1.

Hence ye profane; I hate you all; Both the great vulgar, and the small.

HORACE, Odes, III, 1. (Cowley, tr.)

Hence, far hence, ye vulgar herd! (Procul O procul este profani.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 258.

I hate the vulgar popular cattle.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Fine Weather on the Dignitas.

⁸ To despise the popular talk. (Populi contemnere voces.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. I, sat. 1, l. 65. See also under RUMOR.

⁹ Then Jack, and Tom, and Will, and Dick shall meet and censure me and my council.

JAMES I. (FULLER, Chwck History. Bk. 1, sec. 1. 1604.)

I neither care what Tom, or Jack, or Dick said. JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, St Gregory Nonsense, 16. (1622)

Though Dick, Tom, and Jack

Will serve you and your pack.

ALEXANDER BROME, The Royalist's Answer. (1660)

Tom, Dick, and Harry were not to censure them and their convert.

JOHN ADAMS, Works. Vol. x, p. 351. (c. 1800)

¹⁰ No doubt but ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you.

Old Testament: Job, xii, 2.

¹¹ The venal herd. (Venale pecus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 62.

A venal pack. (Grex venalium.)

SUETONIUS, De Viris Illustribus: De Clar. Rhet. Sec. 1.

¹² The Lord prefers common-looking people. That is the reason He makes so many of them.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. (JAMES MORGAN, Our Presidents, vi; C. T. WETTESTEIN, Was Abraham Lincoln an Infidel, p. 84.)

It rather occurs to me that it's the commonplace people who do things.

STEPHEN LEACOCK, The Soul Call.

¹³ All go free when multitudes offend. (Quidquid multis peccatur inultum est.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. v, l. 260.

¹⁴ The public, with its mob yearning to be instructed, edified and pulled by the nose, demands certainties; . . . but there are no certainties.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices, 1st ser., p. 46.

¹⁵ All ranks and classes, Down to that new Estate, "the masses."

THOMAS MOORE, The Fudges in England. Letter iv, l. 101. Gladstone is said to have used the phrase, "The classes and the masses."

¹⁶ Common sense, in so far as it exists, is all for the bourgeoisie. Nonsense is the privilege of the aristocracy. The worries of the world are for the common people.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, Autobiography of an Attitude.

¹⁷ Forbear to lay on the multitude the reproach of a few. (Parcite paucarum diffundere crimen in omnes.)

OVID, Ars Amatoris. Bk. III, l. 9.

¹ Let the people think they govern and they will be governed.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude, l. 67.

² It is a sin for a plebeian to grumble in public. (Palam mutire plebeio placulum est.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables, Bk. iii, 34.

³ Have I inadvertently said some evil thing? (Οὐδ' ἂν ποῦ τι κακὸν λέγῃς ἐμαυτὸν λέλῃθα.)

PHOCION, when one of his sentences in a public debate was universally applauded. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Phocion, Ch. 10, sec. 3.)

What provokes you to risibility, sir? Have I said anything that you understand? Then I ask pardon of the rest of the company.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark. (RICHARD CUMBERLAND, Recollections.)

⁴ It is an ancient axiom of statecraft that you can always give the public anything but you can never take away what you once have given, without enormous trouble.

W. B. PITKIN, Twilight of the American Mind, p. 222.

⁵ It is too easy to go over to the majority. (Facile transitur ad plures.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epis. vii, sec. 6.

We go with the crowd. (Populo nos damus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epis. xcix, 17.

"It is always best on these occasions to do what the mob do."—"But suppose there are two mobs?" suggested Mr. Snodgrass.—"Shout with the largest," replied Mr. Pickwick.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers, Ch. 13.

⁶ The mob tramples on the coward. (Calcat jacentem vulgus.)

SENECA, Octavia, l. 455.

⁷ Art thou officer?
Or art thou base, common and popular?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 37.

⁸ The views of the mob are neither bad nor good. (Neque mala, vel bona, quæ vulgus putet.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 22.

Sometimes the common people see correctly; sometimes they err. (Interdum vulgus rectum videt, est ubi peccat.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 63.

⁹ A cowardly rabble, bold only in tongue. (Vulgus ignavum et nihil ultra verba ausurum.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iii, sec. 38.

¹⁰ The public be damned.

WILLIAM H. VANDERBILT, Retort, to Clarence Dresser, a reporter for the Chicago Tribune, in 1883, when asked whether the public had been consulted about the proposed discontinuance of a fast mail train to Chicago over the New York Central Railroad.

Vanderbilt had explained that the train didn't pay. "Are you working for the public or for your stockholders?" the reporter asked. "The public be damned! I'm working for my stockholders," was Vanderbilt's reply. Henry Clews is the authority for this version of the incident. (See letters in N. Y. Times, 25 Aug., 1918; N. Y. Herald, 1 Oct., 1918; 28 Oct., 1918.) See 2298i:6.

¹¹ The base rabble are enraged; now brands and stones fly. (Sævitiq̃ue animus ignobile vulgus, Iamque facies et saxa volant.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 149.

¹² Our Lords on high,
Who call the underworld of man
An assish, mulish, packhorse clan.

JOHN WOLCOT, Liberty's Last Squeak.

¹³ The poor taxpaying people. (Misera contribuens plebs.)

UNKNOWN, Law, adopted by the Hungarian Diet, 1751. Art. 37.

II—People: Vox Populi, Vox Dei

¹⁴ A people's voice is a mighty power. (Ἡ φωνὴ τοῦ λαοῦ, θεμελίους κτλ. αἰθερὶ.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 938.

¹⁵ The voice of the people is the voice of God. (Vox populi, vox dei.)

ALCUIN, Epistle to Charlemagne. c. 800. (Admonitio ad Carolūm Magnum: Works. Epis. 127.) The context is: "We would not listen to those who were wont to say the voice of the people is the voice of God, for the voice of the mob is near akin to madness." (Nec audiendi sunt qui solent dicere vox populi, vox dei; cum tumultus vulgi semper insanie proxima est.) Walter Reynolds, Archbishop of Canterbury, took "Vox Populi, Vox Dei" as the text of his sermon when Edward III ascended the throne, 1 Feb., 1327. Referred to as a proverb as early as 920 by William of Malmesbury (De Gestis Pont., fo. 114.)

¹⁶ The voice of the people is in some ways divine. (Θεὸς ὡς τίς τῶν καὶ αὐτῶν.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 764. (c. 735 B.C.)

The voice of the people has about it something divine. (Vox populi habet aliquid divinum.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. 6, ch. 9.

Do not wonder if the common people speak more truly than those of higher rank; for they speak with more safety.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. 6, ch. 9.

¹⁷ People's voice is God's voice, men say.

THOMAS HOCCLEYS, De Regimine Principum. 104. (1412)

1 Surely the voice of the public, when it calls so loudly, and only for mercy, ought to be heard.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Boswell, 1777.

2 The People's voice is odd; It is, and it is not, the voice of God.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, ii, 1, 89.

3 Sacred is the speech of the people. (Sacra populi lingua est.)

SENeca, Rhetor. Controv., i, 1. 10. So quoted by Büchmann (Geflügelte Worte), but the correct reading is now generally held to be, "Sacra populi digna est."

4 Scripture calling the voice of the people the voice of God. (Scriptoria dicente vox populi, vox Dei.)

POPE SYLVESTER II, Epistles. Possibly a misreading of Isaiah, lxvi, 6: "A voice from the temple, a voice of God."

5 It is the folly of too many to mistake the echo of a London coffee-house for the voice of the kingdom.

SWIFT, The Conduct of the Allies.

III—People: Their Virtues

6 The conscience of a people is their power.

DRYDEN, The Duke of Guise. Act i, sc. 1.

7 March without the people, and you march into night: their instincts are a finger-pointing of Providence, always turned toward real benefit.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power. Quoted as having been said by "a French deputy from the tribune."

When I see how much each virtuous and gifted person, whom all men consider, lives affectionately with scores of excellent people who are not known far from home, and perhaps with great reason reckons these people his superiors in virtue and in the symmetry and force of their qualities,—I see what cubic values America has, and in these a better certificate of civilization than great cities or enormous wealth.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

8 About things on which the public thinks long, it commonly attains to think right.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. iii, p. 90.

9 For as we come and as we go (and deadliness go we!)

The people, Lord, Thy people, are good enough for me!

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Pilgrim's Way.

And, Amorite or Eremitic, or General Averagee, The people, Lord, Thy people, are good enough for me!

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Pilgrim's Way.

10 Why should there not be a patient confidence in the ultimate justice of the people? Is there any better or equal hope in the world?

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1861.

11 The common crowd is wiser because it is just as wise as it need be. (Plus sapit vulgus quia tantum, quantum opus est, sapit.)

LACTANTIUS, Divinarum Institutionum. Bk. iii, sec. 5.

12 The people docile to the yoke. (Ad juga cur faciles populi.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 314.

13 For the crowd, the incredible has sometimes more power and is more credible than truth.

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 622.

14 Great lords have pleasures, the people have joy. (Les grands seigneurs ont des plaisirs, le peuple a de la joie.)

MONTESQUIEU.

15 The supremacy of the people tends to liberty. (Populi imperium iuxta libertatem.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 42.

15a Folks are better than angels.

EDWARD THOMPSON TAYLOR, minister of the Seamen's Bethel, in North Square, Boston, Mass., when his friends tried to comfort him, as he lay dying in 1871, by assuring him that he would soon be among the angels.

16 The mind of the people is like mud, From which arise strange and beautiful things.

W. J. TURNER, Talking with Soldiers.

IV—People: Their Faults

17 Nothing moderate is pleasing to the crowd.

BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. 6.

It is not given to the world to be moderate.

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann.

18 The Public is an old woman. Let her maunder and mumble.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 1835.

19 The public! why, the public's nothing better than a great baby.

THOMAS CHALMERS, Letter.

The public is just a great baby.

JOHN RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies. Sec. 4, 40. Paraphrasing Chalmers.

20 The public! How many fools does it take to make a public? (Le public! Combien faut-il de sots pour faire un public?)

SEBASTIEN CHAMFORT, Maximes.

Why then, I say, the Public is a fool.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, ii, 1, 94.

21 The herd of mankind can hardly be said to think; their notions are almost all adoptive;

and, in general, I believe it is better that it should be so, as such common prejudices contribute more to order and quiet than their own separate reasonings would do, uncultivated and unimproved as they are.

LEAD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 7 Feb., 1749.

The rabble values few things according to truth, but many according to rumor. (Vulgus ex veritate pauca, ex opinione multa aestimat.)
CICERO, Pro Roscio Comodo. Sec. 10.

If it has to choose who is to be crucified, the crowd will always save Barabbas.

JEAN COCTEAU, Le Rappel à l'Ordre, p. 31.

Nor is the people's judgment always true: The most may err as grossly as the few.

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. I, l. 781.

Yet be not blindly guided by the throng; The multitude is always in the wrong.

WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 183.

The public is a bad guesser.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Essays: Protestantism.

So void of pity is th' ignoble crowd,
When others' ruin may increase their store!
DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 250.

Leave this hypocritical prating about the masses. Masses are rude, lame, unmade, pernicious in their demands and influence, and need not to be flattered, but to be schooled. . . . The mass are animal, in pupillage, and near chimpanzee. But the units, whereof the mass is composed, are neuters, every one of which may be grown to a queen-bee.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

The people are to be taken in very small doses. If solitude is proud, so is society vulgar.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

The public have neither shame nor gratitude.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 85.

There is not a more mean, stupid, dastardly, pitiful, selfish, spiteful, envious, ungrateful animal than the Public. It is the greatest of cowards, for it is afraid of itself.

HAZLITT, Table Talk: On Living to One's-Self.

The public pays with ingratitude.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a monster of the multitude.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act II, sc. 3, l. 6.

Resson stands aghast at the sight of an "unprincipled, immoral, incorrigible" public; and the word of God abounds in such threats and denunciations, as must strike terror into the heart of every believer.

ERASMUS RUTEM, Sermoes. (Vol. IV, l.)

There was not that variety of beasts in the ark, as is of beastly natures in the multitude.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Vulgi Mores.

And what the people but a herd confus'd,
A miscellaneous rabble, who extol
Things vulgar?

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. III, l. 49.

Let a man proclaim a new principle. Public sentiment will surely be on the other side.
THOMAS B. REED. (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

Who that is pleased by virtue can please the mob? It takes trickery to win the mob's approval. (Quis enim placere populo potest, cui placet virtus? Malis artibus popularis favor queritur.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilius. Epis. xxix, 11.

Faith there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act II, sc. 2, l. 8.

I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act II, sc. 9, l. 31.

V—People: Their Fickleness

See also Opinion: Public Opinion

But when the Crier cried, "O Yes!" the people cried, "O No!"

R. H. BARHAM, Aunt Fanny.

O stormy people, unsad and ever untrue,
And undiscrēt, and changing as a vane,
Delighting ever in rumble that is new,
For like the moon ay waxe ye and wane!
CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 939. Unsad: i. e., unstable. Rumble: i. e., rumor.

No man who depends upon the caprice of the ignorant rabble can be accounted great. (Qui ex errore imperitiae multitudinis pendet, hic in magnis viris non est habendus.)
CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 19, sec. 65.

Nothing is more uncertain than a dependence upon public bodies. They are moved like the wind, but rather more uncertain.

ABRAHAM CLARK, Letter to James Caldwell, 7 March, 1777.

The fickle mob ever changes along with the prince. (Moble mutantur semper cum principe vulgus.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatu Honorii Augusti, l. 302.

I have never wished to cater to the crowd; for what I know they do not approve, and what they approve I do not know. (Numquam volui populo placere. Nam quae ego scio, non probat populus; quæ probat populus, ego nescio.)

EPICURUS, Fragments. Frag. 187.

I do not hunt for the votes of the inconstant multitude. (Non ego ventosæ plebis suffragia venor.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 19, l. 37.

It is a good part of sagacity to have known the foolish desires of the crowd and their unreasonable notions. (Bona prudentiæ pars est nosse stultas vulgi cupiditates, et absurdas opiniones.)

ERASMUS, De Utilitate Colloquiorum: Preface.

The mob of fickle citizens. (Mobilium turba Quiritium.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 1, l. 7.

The Roman mob follows after Fortune, as it always did, and hates those who have been condemned. (Turba Remi sequitur Fortunam, ut semper, et odit Damnatos.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 74.

Nothing is so uncertain or so worthless as the judgments of the mob. (Nil tam incertum nec tam inestimabile est quam animi multitudinis.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxi, sec. 34.

Our slippery people,
Whose love is never link'd to the deserver
Till his deserts are past.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i, sc. 2, l. 192.

He that depends
Upon your favours, swims with fins of lead,
And hews down oaks with rushes.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 183.

An habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 89.

Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro
as this multitude?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 8, l. 57.

Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 84.

The wavering mob is torn by opposita opinions. (Scinditur incertum studia in contraria vulgus.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 39.

VI—People: Their Tyranny

The tyranny of a multitude is a multiplied tyranny.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Thomas Mercer,
26 Feb., 1790.

The people are the masters.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons,
11 Feb., 1790.

I think I hear a little bird, who sings
The people by and by will be the stronger.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 50.

The people will come to their own at last,—
God is not mocked forever.

JOHN HAY, The Sphinx of the Tuilleries.

The people's right remains; let those who dare

Dispute their power, when they the judges are.

DRYDEN, Character of a Good Person, l. 121.

That worst of tyrants, an usurping crowd.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 242. (Pope, tr.)

Oppress'd by multitudes, the best may fall.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xi, l. 587. (Pope, tr.)

True worth . . . neither takes up nor lays aside the ax at the fickle mob's behest. (Virtus . . . Nec sumit aut ponit secures Arbitrio popularis auræ.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 17.

The people arose as one man.

Old Testament: Judges, xx, 8.

There is no tyranny so despotic as that of public opinion among a free people.

DONN PRATT, *Memories of the Men who Saved
the Union: Lincoln*.

What, shall the mob dictate my policy?
(Πόλις γὰρ οὐκ ἐπὶ καὶ καὶ δόξαν ἐπεί.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 734.

What are the rank tongues
Of this vile herd, grown insolent with feeding,
That I should prize their noisy praise, or dread
Their noisome clamour?

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2.

Our supreme governors, the mob.

HORACE WALPOLE, *Letters: To Sir Horace
Mann*, 7 Sept., 1743.

VII—People: The Many-Headed Multitude

That great enemy of reason, virtue, and religion, the Multitude, that numerous piece of monstrosity . . . more prodigious than Hydra.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 1.

This many-headed monster, Multitude.

SAMUEL DANIEL, History of the Civil War.
Bk. ii, st. 13.

The many-headed monster, The giddy multitude.

MASTINGIER, Unnatural Combat. Act iii, sc. 2.

The mob has many heads but no brains.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4653.

A Mob's a Monster; Heads enough, but no Souls.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1747.

1 Thou art a many-headed beast. (Belua multorum es capitum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 76.

The many-headed monster of the pit.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 305.

The multitude of the gross people, being a beast of many heads.

ERASMUS, Adagia. No. 122.

O weak trust of the many-headed multitude.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia, p. 226.

That beast of many heads, the staggering multitude.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Malcontent. Act iii, sc. 3.

2 The blunt monster with uncounted heads,

The still-discordant wavering multitude.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV: Induction, l. 18.

He himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 17.

3 Trust not the populace; the crowd is many-minded.

PROCYLIDES, Gnomai. No. 89. (Attr.)

4 Well, if a King's a lion, at the least

The people are a many-headed beast.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 120.

5 Who o'er the herd would wish to reign,

Fantastic, fickle, fierce, and vain?

Vain as the leaf upon the stream,

And fickle as a changeful dream;

Fantastic as a woman's mood,

And fierce as Frenzy's fevered blood.

Thou many-headed monster-thing,

O who would wish to be thy king?

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 30.

6 The beast With many heads butts me away.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 1.

VIII—People: The Mob's Insanity

7 Every numerous assembly is mob, let the individuals who compose it be what they will.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 18 March, 1751.

8 A mob is a society of bodies voluntarily be-reaving themselves of reason. . . . A mob is man voluntarily descending to the nature of the beast.

II—Perfection: The Broken Mould

⁸ There never was such beauty in another man.
Nature made him, and then broke the mould.
(Non è un sì bello in tante altre persone, Natura il fece, e poi rompe la stampa.)

ARIOSO, Orlando Furioso, Canto x, st. 84.

One can say without exaggeration that nature, after she had made him, broke the mould. (L'on peut dire sans hyperbole, que la nature, que la après l'avoir fait en cassa la moule.)

⁵ However, while I crawl upon this planet I

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letter to the Bishop of Waterford, 22 Jan., 1780.

⁶ I expect to pass through this world but once.
Any good therefore that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any fellow creature, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.

Attributed to STEPHEN GRELLET, an American Quaker of French birth (1773-1855), but not found in his writings. This quotation shares with the "mouse-trap" quotation the honor of being the best known and the most mysterious as to authorship. It has been credited to Emerson; to Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon, owing to a slight resemblance to his epitaph (see under Gifts: Giving and Receiving); to John Wesley, William Penn, Thomas Carlyle, and many others. It is probable that Grellet was the author. The sentiment is, of course, a very old one.

The old Quaker was right: I expect to pass through life but once. If there is any kindness, or any good thing I can do to my fellow beings,
let me do it now. I shall pass this way but once.

And, with a look made all of sweet accord,
Answer'd, "The names of those who love the Lord."

Replied the angel, Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still; and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow men."

PHILISTIA

¹⁰
The people who believe most that our greatness and welfare are proved by our being very rich, and who most give their lives and thoughts to becoming rich, are just the very people whom we call the Philistines.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy. (1869)

¹¹
Taking that terrible modern weapon, the pen, in his hand, he passed the remainder of his life [from 1830] in one fierce battle. What was that battle? the reader will ask. It was a life and death battle with Philistinism.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Helios. (1865)

It was in this essay that Arnold introduced into England from Germany the term "philistine." This word was his chief contribution to the process of disintegrating Victorianism.
HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 256.

¹²
Philistine must have originally meant, in the mind of those who invented the nickname, a strong, dogged, unenlightened opponent of the children of the light.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Helios.

Arnold defines a Philistine as a "strong, dogged, unenlightened opponent of the chosen people," a definition which, when one reflects what the chosen people were like, raises a doubt about the justice of using Philistine as a synonym for an enemy of art and culture.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 257.

Philistine, as a term applied to the ill-behaved and ignorant, or to persons of low and materialistic ideas, is said to have originated from a sermon preached from this text at Jena in 1693 at the funeral of a student killed in a "town and gown" quarrel. Ever afterwards the students at German universities called the townsmen "Philistines." Matthew Arnold probably heard it there.

Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Ascalon, lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice.

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 20.

Bid Fame be dumb, and tremble to proclaim
In heathen Gath, or Ascalon, our shame,
Lest proud Philistia, lest our haughty foe,
With impious scorn insult our solemn woe.
W. C. SOMERVILLE, The Lamentation of David.

PHILOSOPHY

I—Philosophy: Definitions

HENRY ADAMS, defining philosophy. (Quoted by BERT LESTON TAYLOR, The So-Called Human Race, p. 154.)

² All good and moral philosophy, as was said, is but a handmaid to religion.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

A little philosophy inclineth man's mind to atheism; but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion.

BACON, Essays: Atheism.

A little skill in antiquity inclines a man to Popery; but depth in that study brings him about again to our religion.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The True Church Antiquary.

³ Metaphysics is the finding of bad reasons for what we believe on instinct.

F. H. BRADLEY, Appearance and Reality. Ch. 14.

Metaphysics I detested. The science appeared to me an elaborate, diabolical invention for mystifying what was clear, and confounding what was intelligible.

W. E. AYTON, Norman Sinclair.

⁴ Philosophy is common-sense in a dress suit.
OLIVER S. BRASTON, Philosophy.

⁵ Before Philosophy can teach by Experience, the Philosophy has to be in readiness, the Experience must be gathered and intelligibly recorded.

CARLYLE, Essays: On History.

⁶ Philosophy, the mother of all the arts. (Philosophia vero, omnium mater artium.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 26, sec. 64.

That great mother of the sciences.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. ii, bk. 1, aphor. 80. Referring to natural philosophy.

⁷ The true medicine of the mind is philosophy. (Est profecto animi medicina, philosophia.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 6.

I look to philosophy to provide an antidote to sorrow.

CICERO, Academicarum Questionum. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 11.

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 3, 55.

⁸ The science of sciences. (Scientia scientiarum.)

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 12. Referring to philosophy.

⁹ Philosophy—the thoughts of men about human thinking, reasoning and imagining, and the real values in human existence.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, Inscription, Public Library, Warren, Pa.

¹⁰ Philosophy is the account which the mind gives to itself of the constitution of the world.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

¹¹ The beginning of philosophy . . . is a consciousness of a man's own weakness and impotence with reference to the things of real importance in life.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 11, sec. 1.

Behold the beginning of philosophy!—a recognition of the conflict between the opinions of men.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 11, sec. 13.

¹² What is the first business of one who practises philosophy? To part with self-conceit. For it is impossible for any one to begin to learn what he thinks he already knows.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 17, sec. 1.

What is philosophy? Does it not mean preparation to face the things which may come upon us?

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 10, sec. 5.

¹³ Philosophy goes no further than probabilities, and every assertion keeps a doubt in reserve.

J. A. FROUX, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Calvinism.

¹⁴ A modest confession of ignorance is the ripest and last attainment of philosophy.

R. D. HITCHCOCK, Eternal Atonement: Secret Things of God.

¹⁵ Philosophy is doubt. (Philosopher c'est doubter.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

The first step towards philosophy is incredulity.

DENIS DIDEROT, Remark, during his last conversation.

¹⁶ Philosophy is the highest music. (Φιλοσοφία μὲν ὁδοὺς μεγίστην μουσική.)

PLATO, Phaedo. Sec. 61.

¹⁷ Philosophy is nothing but Discretion.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Philosophy.

¹⁸ Philosophy calls for plain living, but not for penance. (Frugalitatem exigit philosophia, non poenam.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epist. v, sec. 3.

Philosophy does the going, and wisdom is the goal. (Illa venit, ad hanc venitur.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epist. 89, sec. 7.

¹⁹ The philosopher is Nature's pilot. And there you have our difference: to be in hell is to drift; to be in heaven is to steer.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act III.

To be a philosopher is not merely to have subtle thoughts, nor even to found a school, but so to love wisdom as to live according to its dictates, a life of simplicity, independence, magnanimity, and trust.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

How can a man be a philosopher and not maintain his vital heat by better methods than other men?

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

II—Philosophy: Apothegms

Those that study particular sciences and neglect philosophy are like Penelope's wooers, who made love to the waiting-women.

ARISTIPPUS. (BACON, Apothegms. No. 189.)

A deep occult philosopher.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 537.

I won't philosophise, and will be read.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 28.

But all be that he was a philosopher,
Yet had he but little gold in coffer.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 297.

The Arabians say that Abul Khain, the mystic, and Abu Ali Seena, the philosopher, conferred together; and, on parting, the philosopher said, "All that he sees I know"; and the mystic said, "All that he knows I see."

EMERSON, Representative Men: Swedenborg.

To a philosopher no circumstance, however trifling, is too minute.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 30.

A countryman, one of nature's philosophers, with rough mother-wit. (Rusticus, abnormis sapiens, crassaque Minerva.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. II, sat. 2, l. 3.

Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act III, sc. 2, l. 22.

Be a philosopher; but, amidst all your philosophy, be still a man.

DAVID HUMER, Essays. No. 39.

The philosophic climate of our time inevitably forces its own clothing on us.

WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 432.

All men are Philosophers, to their inches.

BEN JONSON, The Magnetic Lady. Act I, sc. 1.

It is neither possible nor necessary for all men, nor for many, to be philosophers.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 12.

There are philosophies which are unendurable not because men are cowards, but because they are men.

LUDWIG LUNDBORN, Modern Drama, p. 322.

[They] fetch their precepts from the Cynic tub.

MILTON, Comus, l. 708. The tub from which Diogenes lectured.

That stone, . . .

Philosophers in vain so long have sought.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. III, l. 600.

Philosophy drips gently from his tongue
Who hath three meals a day in guarantee.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, So This Is Arden.

The whole life of the philosopher is a preparation for death. (Τὸ μελέημα αὐτὸ ἐστὶ τῶν φιλοσόφων, λόγος καὶ χωρισμὸς ψυχῆς ἀπὸ σώματος.)

PLATO, Phædo. Sec. 67D. Cicero, (Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 30, sec. 74) gives it: Tota philosophorum vita commentatio mortis est.

I am safe, he is now philosophizing. (Salvus sum, jam philosophatur.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 974. (Act iv, sc. 2.)

There are more things in heaven and earth,
Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 3, l. 166.

Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 145.

Clearness marks the sincerity of philosophers.
(La clarté est la bonne foi des philosophes.)

III—Philosophy: Its Virtues

The calm lights of mild philosophy.

ADAMSON, Cato. Act I, sc. 1, l. 14.

What I have gained from philosophy is the ability to feel at ease in any society.

ARISTIPPUS. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Aristippus. Bk. II, sec. 68.)

I have gained this by philosophy: that I do without being ordered what others do only from fear of the law.

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Bk. v, sec. 20.)

I have gained at least this from philosophy: to be prepared for every fortune.

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 63.)

Natural philosophy, next to the word of God, is the surest medicine for superstition.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. II, bk. 1, aphor. 89.

To take things as they be—
That's my philosophy.

No use to holler, mope, or cuss—

If they was changed they might be wuss.

JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, A Philosopher.

To take what passes in good part
And keep the hippocaps from the heart.

JOHN BYRON, Careless Content.

Sublime Philosophy!

Thou art the Patriarch's ladder, reaching heaven,

And bright with beck'ning angels.

BULWER-LYTTON, Richieu. Act III, sc. 1, l. 4.

Philosophy can never be praised as much as she deserves, since she enables every man who obeys her precepts to pass every season of his life free from worry. (Numquam igitur laudari satis digne philosophia poterit, cui qui parent omne tempus etatis sine molestia possit degere.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. I, sec. 2.

Divine philosophy! by whose pure light
We first distinguish, then pursue the right.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xlii, l. 254. (Gifford, tr.)

O philosophy, life's guide! O searcher-out of virtue and expeller of vice! What would we and every age of men have been without thee?

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 2, sec. 5.

Philosophy! the great and only heir
Of all the human knowledge which has been Unforfeited by man's rebellious sin.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, To the Royal Society.

If you would enjoy real freedom, you must be the slave of philosophy. (Philosophia servas oportet, ut tibi contingat vera libertas.)

ERICURUS, Fragments. No. 199. (SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliam. Epis. vii, sec. 7.)

But above all 'tis pleasantest to get
The top of high philosophy, and sit
On the calm, peaceful, flourishing head of it.

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. II, l. 6. (Creech, tr.)

How charming is divine Philosophy!

Not harsh, and crabbed as dull fools suppose,
But musical as is Apollo's lute,
And a perpetual feast of nectar'd sweets,
Where no crude surfeit reigns.

MILTON, Comus, l. 476.

The first thing which philosophy attempts to give is fellow-feeling with all men. (Hoc primum philosophia promittit, sensum communem.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliam. Epis. v, sec. 4.
